

Croatians Chafe Under Serb Rule

By The Associated Press

Croatian nationalists like those who hijacked a New York-to-Chicago jetliner Friday have a long and bloody history of fighting for the autonomy of their Balkan homeland, now part of Communist Yugoslavia, including several recent assassinations.

The hijackers call themselves "Fighters for Free Croatia," a name unfamiliar to knowledgeable observers in the Yugoslav capital of Belgrade, where the government firmly cracks down on Croatian extremists whenever it can.

The hijackers said in a statement that Croatia has been denied self-determination. They said they had hijacked an American plane because the United States "supports the colonialist enslavement of the nonSerbian nations within Yugoslavia."

Croatia has been an area of intense nationalism since long before World War I, which erupted in Serbia, another Balkan state that is also now part of Yugoslavia.

Croatia is one of the six republics of Yugoslavia and has 22% of the country's 22 million people. The Serbs, with 40% of the people, have dominated Yugoslavia since it was created by merging six Balkan Republics after World War II. The Croats have chafed under this dominance, even though President Josip Broz Tito himself is the son of a Croatian blacksmith.

The Yugoslav government says the many Croatian groups in other countries are all remnants of the right-wingers called Ustashi, who formed a puppet independent Croatia under German and Italian occupation and fought against Tito's Communist partisans during World War II.

The Ustashi-German-Italian period is remembered bitterly in Yugoslavia. Millions of Serbians and Jews are believed to have been killed as independent Croatia followed the Nazi lead in attempting to create a pure-blood state. A large section of one of Belgrade's major museums is devoted to recounting those excesses, although the exhibits blame the foreign occupiers with little mention of Croats.

Before World War I, the Ustashi were blamed for assassinating King Alexander, the Serbian monarch of Yugoslavia. Further back in history, Croats fought Dalmatians, Hungarians, Turks and Napoleonic forces in the ebb and flow of invaders that helped to give the Balkan lands the nickname "Powderkeg of Europe."

In recent years Croatian emigres, based in the United States, West Germany, Australia and Sweden, have been blamed in many violent attacks in Yugoslavia and other countries. More than 200 persons were arrested in 1975 in Yugoslavia — at least half of them Croatian separatists.

Busic Fits Hijacker Description

By The Associated Press

The leader of the hijackers who sent an American jetliner on a propaganda flight across the Atlantic Ocean has been identified as Zvonko Busic, Croatian officials said Saturday.

The FBI refused to confirm or deny that report and declined to give any details about the hijackers.

However, a Croatian-American leader in Cleveland said he knew a Zvonko Busic who fit the description provided by passengers who were freed in Gander, Newfoundland. And a woman who said she had a brother named Zvonko Busic provided further details which matched with the description of the hijackers.

In Canada, where the Trans World Airlines Boeing 727 made two refueling stops Friday night, a Transport Department spokesman said a man named Zvonko Busic was the leader of the hijackers.

Joseph Boniljevic, president of the American Society of Croatian Migration, said in Cleveland that he believed the hijacker was the same Zvonko Busic who once lived in Cleveland and married a blonde woman named Jelena who he met in Germany.

Boniljevic said the society tried to help Busic when he first arrived in the United States and that Busic, now 38, was in trouble with authorities while in Cleveland because of his political activities.

Three Charged in Plot To Murder Kennedy

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Two men and a woman were arrested here Saturday and charged with conspiring to murder Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Springfield police said early Sunday.

The woman and one man were released on their own recognizance, and the other man was held on $50,000 bail, police said. Kennedy, D-Mass., was in the Springfield area Saturday to campaign for re-election. Police gave few details of the arrests.

In Boston, Kennedy's press aide, Ann Speakman, said, "No one really knows the nature of the threat. It didn't seem like any big thing."

She said state police told Kennedy about the case during his afternoon campaign swing through the area.

"The senator did not curtail his activities in any way. He made every stop he was scheduled to make," she added.

Police said they arrested Robert White, 42, of Enfield, Conn., and Sandra Rondreau, 34, of Westfield, Mass., at the woman's home Saturday afternoon.

A few hours later, police arrested David King, 31, of Springfield.

All were charged with conspiracy to commit murder against the senator.

King and the woman were released on their own recognizance by the Springfield District Court clerk after he initially set bail at $50,000. White was held on $50,000 bail Sunday, police said.

Two of Kennedy's brothers were slain by assassins.

President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was fatally shot in Los Angeles in June 1968 in the midst of his campaign for the Democratic nomination for president.

Edward Kennedy, 44, was first elected to the Senate in 1962 to fill an unexpired term. He was re-elected in 1964 and again in 1970.

Hijackers Negotiate in Paris

Paris (AP) — Croatian nationalists holding about 50 hostages aboard a hijacked American jetliner opened direct negotiations with the U.S. ambassador to France early today. The hijackers landed in Paris on Saturday after five cities in North America and Europe were showered with leaflets demanding independence for Croatia from Yugoslavia.

A female hijacker, two unnamed American passengers and copilot Lou Senatore left the immobilized and darkened TWA Boeing 727 and went to the control tower of Charles de Gaulle Airport to talk with Ambassador Kenneth Rush and French officials, a TWA spokesman said.

Sources at the airport said the woman also wanted to telephone a Ukrainian priest in the United States to verify compliance with the hijackers' major demand — that major American papers publish communiques left behind in New York.

French officials said they had demanded that the hijackers surrender unconditionally. They added they did not threaten any specific action if the hijackers refused to give up.

The hijackers were reportedly armed with handguns, grenades and explosives. Their communiques and leaflets demanded independence for Croatia, a Balkan territory now part of Yugoslavia.

French authorities surrounded the plane with crack troops, blocked it, deflated its tires and said they would not let it leave the country. Its lights and engines were turned off while the hijackers opened negotiations with French authorities.

The Croats initially demanded to speak to either President Ford, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger or Rush, the U.S. ambassador to Paris. But their major demand appeared to be for proof that their lengthy propaganda statements had been published in the New York Times, Chicago Tribune, Los Angeles Times, Washington Post and the International Herald Tribune.

The four American papers all printed one or both of the hijackers' two communiques, but the Herald Tribune has no Sunday edition and received the communiques too late for its Saturday paper.

Facsimiles of the printed statements were wired to Paris and rushed to the airport.

During the journey to Paris, an escort plane made low swoops over London and Paris to drop thousands of pink leaflets calling for independence of Croatia.

Acting on the hijackers' orders, TWA had similar leaflets dropped by helicopters and private planes over New York, Chicago and Montreal.

The 727 was hijacked Friday night on a New York-to-Chicago flight, diverted to Montreal and flown to Gander, Newfoundland. There, the hijackers freed 35 of their hostages, leaving 57 persons aboard, including seven crew members and the hijackers.

Then, joined by a bigger Boeing 707 that was equipped with trans-Atlantic navigational equipment, the hijacked jet flew on to Keflavik, Iceland, and finally to Paris.

The passengers freed in Gander were flown to Chicago on Saturday morning with a stop in Montreal, where TWA spokesmen said a load of leaflets was left to put aboard a helicopter and dropped over downtown Montreal.

Several of those released had high praise for the behavior of the hijackers. They said the gunmen were so polite their behavior may have been rehearsed.

Seagoing Plants Could Solve Fertilizer Woes

By Peter Bernstein

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — Why allow the virtually inexhaustible supply of solar energy stored in the world's tropical oceans to go to waste?

This is the question raised by a team of scientists at the Johns Hopkins University Applied Physics Laboratory who maintain that huge factory ships using the heat of the oceans could produce up to 40% of the ammonia required for fertilizer on America's wheat and corn farms.

In a report for the U.S. Maritime Administration, the scientists said ammonia could be produced aboard ships the size of ocean liners using a process similar to the one now used to produce liquid oxygen on Navy aircraft carriers.

The report said 21 such seagoing plants, each manufacturing 586,000 tons of ammonia a year, could be operating by 1986, thereby significantly relieving the drain on natural gas. Presently 3% of natural gas produced annually in the United States — 640 billion cubic feet — is used as feedstock to manufacture ammonia. Recent hikes in natural gas rates have caused fertilizer prices to soar, raising the cost of food.

Both Hot and Cold

The ammonia-producing vessels — called ocean thermal energy conversion plant ships — would cruise tropical waters at a speed of less than one knot, using both warm water near the surface and cold water piped from the ocean depths.

Electricity produced from a turbine aboard the factory ship would be used to electrolyze water to make hydrogen and also to operate an air liquefaction unit to make nitrogen. The hydrogen and nitrogen would be combined to produce ammonia.

Warm ocean water piped aboard the ship would evaporate the liquid ammonia in a heat exchanger within a closed Rankine system creating a vapor to turn a turbine to make electricity. Cold water drawn from depths of 2,500 feet would cool the vapor to produce liquid ammonia, which in turn would be transferred to smaller tankers for shipment ashore.

Besides condensers and other equipment, each of the factory ships would have a 10,000-ton storage area for liquid ammonia, plus quarters for a crew of 31.

The scientists estimated the factory ships could produce ammonia at a cost competitive with such other sources of ammonia as natural gas, naphtha and coal.

They estimated the factory ships could save the nation 475 billion cubic feet of natural gas a year by 1986.

Demonstration Ship Urged

To get the program under way, the scientists recommended the government subsidize construction of a 141-ton ship to demonstrate the ammonia-producing process. Such a ship could be operating by 1981 in the South Atlantic, they said.

The scientists, led by William Avery, assistant director of the Applied Physics Laboratory located in Laurel, Md., said similar ships could be used to produce hydrogen and other energy-intensive products. Hydrogen, a component of water, is being widely considered as a transportation fuel.

While offering a method for alleviating world food shortages through production of inexpensive ammonia fertilizer, energy conversion ships also could bring nutrient-rich cold water to the surface for use in raising shellfish.

The study estimated that if a priority construction program were launched in American shipyards, roughly 100,000 jobs would be created. The study was funded partly by the Maritime Administration and partly by the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., Chester, Pa., and the Avondale Shipyard, New Orleans, with additional help from the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, Woods Hole, Mass.

Kissinger: Mission Worth Risks

Washington (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said Saturday he might fail to help avoid racial war in southern Africa, but the mission is "worth the risks for world peace."

"War already has started in southern Africa," Kissinger told a State Dept. news conference after meeting President Ford in the White House. He said Africa, Europe and the U.S. would be endangered if it spreads.

Kissinger, leaving Monday for Tanzania, Zambia and South Africa, said, "the history of these struggles is that they lead to escalating violence, drawing in more and more countries, and have the danger of foreign intervention and probability of the radicalization of the whole continent of Africa."

Asked to assess his chances of success, Kissinger said Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, chairman of a Senate subcommittee on African affairs, "rated my chances of succeeding as one in 20. I rate my chances higher than that."

"The worst that can happen if this effort fails is what is certain to happen if it does not succeed."

Kissinger called his African trip "the most complex negotiation, procedurally, in which I have engaged."

Kissinger said he was not bringing an American plan on his trip.

Junk Perfect Gift...

By Jack Fox

Los Angeles (UPI) — Thomas Pattinson always has been a man of ideas. Strange ideas to be sure, but original.

Even when he was working for austere IBM, Pattinson had a sort of Walter Mitty habit of letting his mind wander from that stainless steel world of computers into the esoteric.

There was, for example, his scheme to manufacture cocker spaniel slip covers to put on cats for people who would rather have a dog.

Then there was the swamp kit caper. The kit was designed for dwellers in suburban tract houses who always yearned to explore the Okefenokee Swamp.

It would come with an instruction manual whose first directive was to flood your backyard. The higher priced models ($14,000) would include rare jungle birds and an alligator.

Somehow those ideas never got off the ground. Pattinson had left IBM, but he was still caught in the grind of a management consultant job which entailed constant airplane travel. His last account was selling banks on promotion schemes.

Then came what he considers a stroke of genius.

"It was last St. Patrick's Day and I was in Boston and you have to be in Boston on St. Patrick's Day to understand the almost limitless possibilities for the expansion of the human mind," he said.

"I was in the gift shop of a hotel and it was jammed with junk. I got to talking to the sales girl and I said to her 'You sure have a lot of junk. And she said, quite pleasantly, 'People like junk.'"

That chance remark set the Pattinson wheels spinning. If people liked junk, why not sell them pure, unadulterated, guaranteed useless junk.

"It became my outlet," he recalled. "I would get on another damn plane after a hard day and crack a beer and refine this concept. It was about the only fun I had. I

Family Feeds TV Habit With Their Own Energy

Highland Park, Ill. (AP) — Sol Levine estimates he is saving the nation one barrel of crude oil a year by having his children pedal a bike-generator he invented to power their television set.

"I'd come home and find my two kids immobilized in front of their set and I figured they should be doing something if they wanted to watch it," says Levine who is president of an ecology center devoted to saving energy.

"I took their bicycle," he says, "made a stand for it in the TV room, hooked it to a car generator and a 12-volt car battery. Now they can feed their television habit with their own energy and the Earth's energy is saved by about one barrel of crude oil a year."

Levine says the pedal power can work only on a set about the size used by Benet, 15 and Linda 11 — a black and white portable with a 12-inch screen.

"I even pedal with them sometimes to watch the late news. Their favorite is a rerun of Dark Shadows that comes on after the news. Benet likes football and is in training to be able to pedal through games this fall," says Levine. 41 "It's darn good exercise. My wife, Georgia, used to join us pedaling through programs, but now she looks upon it mainly just for exercise. When the kids are in school, she will do some pedaling in the afternoon and help charge the battery."

Levine said on a busy TV night, he and the children take turns pedaling, storing electricity for about five minutes of non-pedaling recesses.

Voter Interest Lagging in '76

Princeton, N.J. — The upcoming presidential debates may provide the spark needed to ignite voter interest in the 1976 race, an interest found to be seriously lagging thus far in the campaign.

Evidence of voter apathy is seen in the latest barometer of election interest and in the latest measurements of voter registration. In fact, present indications are that our national voting participation may be even poorer this year than in 1972 (which was the lowest since 1948), with the distinct possibility that non-voters will outnumber voters in the November election.

Only about half (49%) of all persons interviewed in the latest

Insects May Be Gaining On Man

(c) Newhouse News Service
Washington — Insects are man's greatest enemy, and the insects in cities may be gaining. Scientists at the 15th International Congress on Entomology took a generally gloomy view of man's efforts to protect his city home and food supply from such pests as roaches, ants, mites and mice. Insects are known to have infested household food at least 2,500 years ago, but were considered mere nuisances until man started storing large quantities of grain in recent decades. Now insects thrive in modern urban homes. They are carried into homes amid packages of food, and continue to hide between the packages. When they penetrate the packages, they have time to grow and reproduce because the foods are kept so long on pantry shelves. "Modern building techniques have probably made the situation worse," says Dr. K. O. Story of Great Britain. "The widespread use of structural and decorative paneling and the existence of networks of service ducts have provided better opportunities for nesting and dispersal of insects within modern buildings." City dwellers tolerate these insects, Story says, because they do not realize how dangerous they are as disease carriers. Pesticides that are effective against insects have been developed primarily to protect growing crops, and are not ideally suited to indoor use. "In many cases," he says, "occupants of infested buildings prefer the pests to the treatment." Roaches and pharaoh's ants, he says, can spread numerous diseases. Organisms causing typhoid and paratyphoid become established and multiply in roaches. Roaches also have been implicated in the spread of infectious hepatitis and poliomyelitis.

Protein Content
Dr. Gerald Mayr of West Germany scoffs at stories that eating insects won't hurt you. It's true, he says, that insects are protein, and protein is good for you. "But it's the excrement that cause disease." Mayr says insects are "our worst enemies." Everyone, he says, has had the experience of opening a package of food only to find "undesirable little animals." Mites get on dried fruit and appear to be sugar "until you are seized with cramps." Insects in dried bread crumbs are almost impossible to see. But, he says, insects eat many other things in the modern home — wood, wallpaper, wool or cotton textiles, even old books and pictures. The quickest way to destroy these insects, he says, is to remove all people and pets from the home, seal it up and fumigate it with toxic gases. Even then, insects crawl back in from neighboring homes or stores. Story says denying the insects access to food, water and hiding places can help somewhat, but most homeowners resort to pesticides. Frequent applications result in some insects' developing resistance to the chemical.

Dr. R. V. Carr of the Velucol Chemical Corp. of Chicago, a manufacturer of chemicals used against termites, sees only a "doomsday" scenario for the control of termites. He claims the government is spending millions of dollars to regulate chemical insecticides — currently there are several insects for which there is no government-improved insecticide — while providing only a trickle of money to develop non-chemical agents.

New York's Sockdolager

Of the 12 states holding primary elections Tuesday, none stimulates greater national attention than New York. The Democratic senatorial competition there is of slaughterhouse proportions.

It's a five-person race, although the celebrated bad mouthing between candidates Bella Abzug and Daniel Moynihan — both veterans of murderous ethnic and academic invective — tends to submerge the other three guys. One of those sure losers, by the way, is former U.S. Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark.

Whoever emerges with the least loss of blood Wednesday morning — Rep. Abzug or Moynihan — probably becomes the favorite to end Sen. James L. Buckley's quest for a second term in November.

A huge Democratic vote then in New York engineered on behalf of presidential nominee Jimmy Carter surely will have some coattail effect. It will, that is, if the hatreds remaining from the primary campaign can be sufficiently diluted.

Actually, it's a shame Tuesday's election will dim the public careers of either Rep. Abzug or Moynihan. Both are exceedingly colorful personalities, independent of the political medicine they prescribe.

Contemporary national politicians generally are so tailored to meet the requirements of "image" they appear to fall out of molds. But not Bella or Daniel P.

About a Four-Letter Word

Let's talk about food, always an enriching subject.

Let's talk about food prices; how they are often determined by the supply approved by Mother Nature, but at least as frequently by unrelated interventionist actions of humankind.

Take, for example, a crop little emphasized in Nebraska agriculture — blueberries.

You probably hadn't fretted much about the calamity. Yet the summer's drought in Poland pretty much devastated the blueberry crop there. That's bad news for all of Europe.

Poland is the major supplier of blueberries finding their way into European yogurt and ice cream, and in a particular kind of blueberry soup called blabarsoppa which the Scandinavians are said to ingest in oceanic quantities.

So what? So the Europeans anxiously are turning to North America, which produces about 110 million pounds of blueberries. If you thought blueberry prices were high before, just hang on.

Same thing with shrimp, and other delights of the sea.

The U.S. and Mexico tentatively have negotiated an agreement — yet to be approved — which would prevent American shrimp boats from harvesting in Mexican territorial waters. They have been territorial wafers only since June. In that month, Mexico extended its legal reach from 12 to 200 miles offshore. The comparable U.S. extension to 200 miles becomes operative next March.

What these political decisions will do is give preference to home nation fishing fleets in territorial zones. And that means while some national supplies of particular species may be abundant, others which find much favor on international dinner tables — like shrimp — could shrink.

Of course shrimp isn't vital to American diets. We could, presumably, continue to maintain self-government without it. Or at least try.

That is a lesson worth understanding: Restrict a food to gain economic advantage and risk permanent loss of consumers.

Last year there was what industry sources called an "extraordinary" sequence of frost, drought, earthquake, flood and even war in the major coffee-producing countries. The expected happened, as you know. Coffee prices soared. Retail prices still are scandalously high. The other day a record $1.64 a pound was paid for unroasted green coffee beans on the New York exchange.

Says George Boecklin, president of the U.S. National Coffee Association: "The industry is very concerned these record high prices may affect coffee consumption in the long run." The industry has grounds — if you'll allow us to say so — for worrying.

Americans last year sloshed down an average of 3.57 cups per person every day. Which is plenty, but still not nearly the 4.17-cup average of 1962.

High prices and wider appreciation of the benefits of moderation may combine to drive the 3.57-cup average down even lower. Well, there are probably worse things.

Even slightly stained hot water has some attraction when coffee prices per serving reach those now assessed in many large American cities.

Ho-Hum, Another Historic Event

By Russell Baker

It is disappointing to hear the Ford-Carter debates will be historic. One had hoped for more. Almost everything is historic these days, except for speeches, which all seem to be major.

It's been years since anybody has given a minor speech or taken part in an unhistoric occasion. For years I have been hoping for a State Department announcement that Henry Kissinger was about to make a minor foreign-policy speech, and for years I have been disappointed.

In 20 years of covering statesmen, I attended upwards of 10,000 historic occasions. These were mostly such events as Senate passage of the Rivers and Harbors Bill, the opening of a new lane on the New Jersey Turnpike and the 10th anniversary of somebody's television station.

I would certainly rather watch the latest titanic struggle staged by the National Football League or the current epic saga of the Old West filmed on the plains of Yugoslavia. Given a choice, however, I would just as soon sit home with a stopwatch.

This inflating of negligible events doubtless has something to do with the skill of the public-relations arts, but the new business is not entirely blameless. It is the enemy of proportion. Just as you cannot write free verse in a sonnet, so the rigid forms of front-page layout and TV-news structure forbid the news people to concede that nothing of much consequence may happen for months at a stretch.

The general rule for gauging whether an event is historic is this: If it is truly historic, nobody has to tell you; if the media machinery have to tell you it's historic, it probably isn't.

There are exceptions, of course. The first splitting of the atom was an historic event, and the papers missed the story because the few scientists who knew it was historic lacked the public-relations sense to issue a press release. On the other hand, when the first bomb dropped on Hiroshima, the Japanese did not need President Truman's announcement to realize that they had been present at an historic event.

The first TV debate between John Kennedy and Richard Nixon was probably an authentic historic event, but for reasons few persons anticipated. It marked the triumph of image over message as the decisive force in American politics.

It was not a debate that Kennedy won. It was a contest that Nixon didn't even fully understand he was engaged in, in a competition in successful television-image projection.

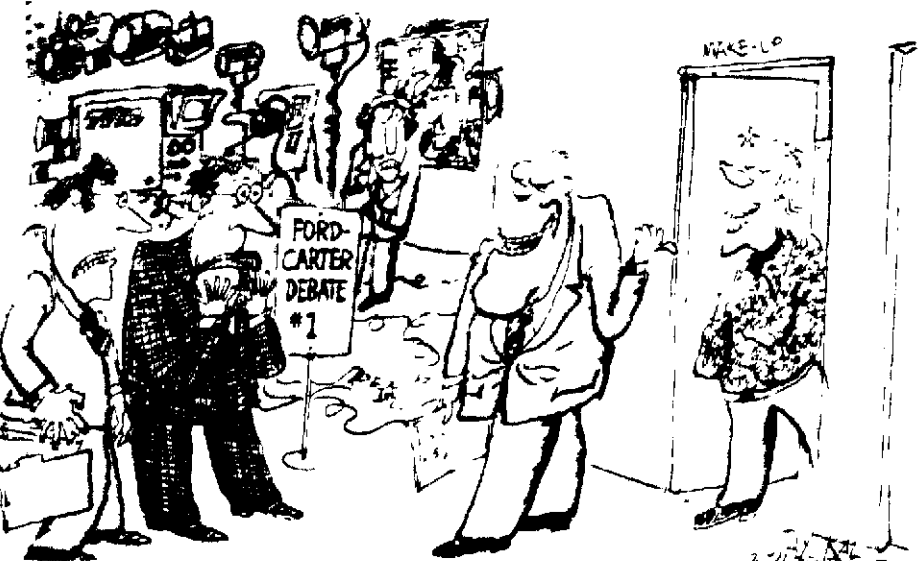

My assignment that night in Chicago was to cover the debate, and I made the same mistake Nixon did. I assumed it would be a debate. Accordingly, I had the studio provide a quiet office and an audio. I put my head down and started taking notes on what the two were saying. A disastrous error. I listened to a debate instead of watching the performance, and at the end, on my scorecard, Nixon had clearly won on points.

When I emerged I was astounded to find the Kennedy people ecstatic, the Nixon people grim. Like most of America, they hadn't listened to a debate; they had watched an ailing, underweight, poorly made-up, perspiring Nixon suffering beside a cool, self-assured, handsome figure with a machine-gun rattle of data.

By the time Nixon grasped the nature of the contest and adjusted sufficiently to gain a subsequent stand-off, the "debate" faded away into trifling matters which were merely exercise bars on which both could evade confidence and competence.

The revolution in campaigning succeeded almost immediately, and politicians who relied strictly on argument and reason passed very quickly from the scene, like movie stars of the silent era whose voices could not survive the transition to "talkies."

(c) New York Times Service

"What a coincidence . . . He's the guy who made-up Nixon when Dick debated Kennedy."

Life is a succession of times, as the Preacher told us long ago; a time to be born, and a time to die; a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to get and a time to lose.

What the Preacher left unsaid is that the times are separated by the in-between times; and we are passing through one of these now.

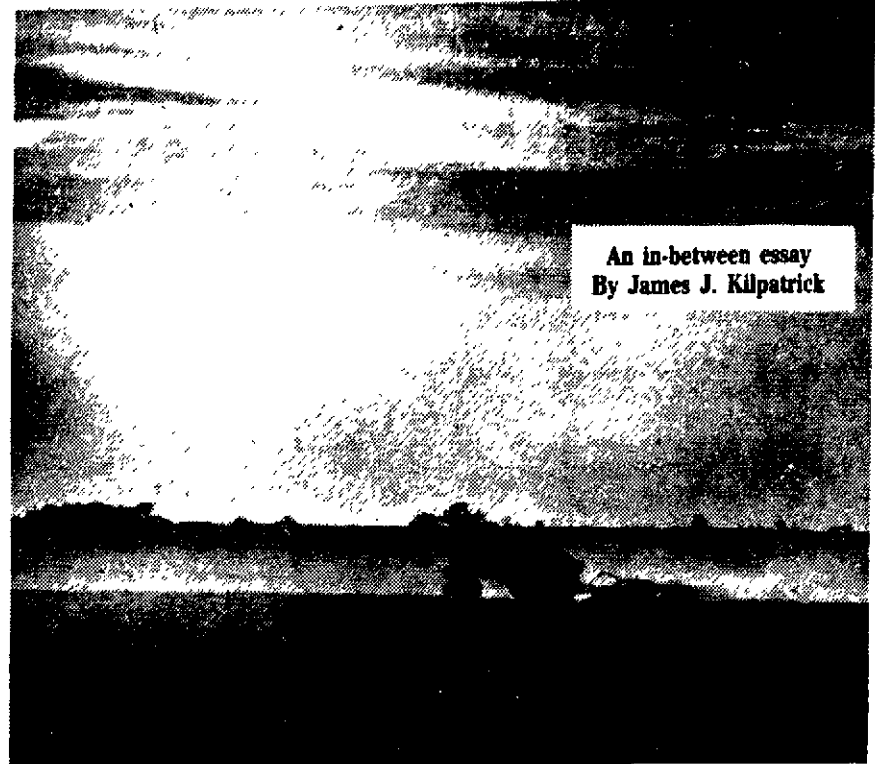

Things happen, of course, in the in-between times, but nothing very memorable happens. Across the broad land, candidates are campaigning for public office, but it will be a month before the races heat up.

In Washington, the Congress is puttering toward adjournment. The courts offer nothing climactic. The markets rock like docked rowboats, going nowhere in particular. And there is no speeding up the in-between times. One waits them out.

Here in the Blue Ridge Mountains, we see the tag end of summer. It is nothing much to look at. When I was a city boy, I used to hear it said of wispy old men, unkempt and scraggly, that they had "gone to seed." To live in the country is to understand the image. The fields that were clothed in green in June are patched with brown; they are raveled at the edges like old towels. The crabgrass spreads a rough and ragged shroud.

This is the worst of all times for the gardener. Only a few weeks ago, the vegetable plots were bursting with the summer's harvest: cucumbers, prickly to the touch; tomatoes as bright as Christmas balls; okra, eggplant, blackeyed peas, zucchini, peppers red and green. And the corn! The stalks stood soldier-straight, row on disciplined row, the ripening ears as ready for inspection as the rifles of Marines. Present arms! Nothing beats a neat platoon of golden bantam corn.

It is gone, all gone. The zucchini crumpled overnight, as if a pup tent had collapsed. In the cucumber patch, only entrails remain. A few tomatoes survive, but the dying vines have the look of torn curtains. The brave company of corn is a tattered, ragtag band.

An in-between essay
By James J. Kilpatrick

And because this is an in-between time, it is too soon to put the beds down for winter and it is too late to plant anything but turnips. September gardeners are children who can't find anything to do.

In these latitudes we are blessed with four distinct seasons, and the blessing — mixed as it is — helps to get us over the in-between times. Life in Hawaii and Florida and Southern California has its undeniable pleasures, but it lacks something in contrast.

In another month we will revel in the full-blown glory of autumn, in crisp nights and Indian summer days, and the seediness will pass. Already the dogwoods are turning; the gums are shedding russet leaves, and one of the Preacher's "times" is at hand — the time of blankets and open fires, the putting away of screens, and the flurry of little decisions.

Florida is a great place, to be sure, but my friends in Florida do not know what it is to get out the fur-lined boots and to discover that mice have been nesting in the toes.

Sooner or later, the larger in-between time will run its course. In my own world of politics, everything waits on Nov. 2. The Preacher did not mention a "time to elect," but for those who feed on election returns, the quadrennial hour is meat and drink and after-dinner coffee and peach cobbler for dessert. When that Tuesday night rolls around, it will be just as the gentleman said — a time to mourn, and a time to dance; a time to embrace, and a time to refrain from embracing.

For there is indeed a time to every purpose under heaven; and before long the methodical clock, which now ticks away the minutes, will coil its strength and strike the clangorous hour.

Solid South Not So Firm

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

Gerald Ford's top political advisers are now studying a secret President Ford Committee (PFC) poll showing the President surprisingly ahead of Jimmy Carter in Virginia 43 to 41%.

This evidence the President may fare better in the South than PFC pessimists bargained for has been jubilantly passed along to Republican leaders in Virginia as a "neck-and-neck" Ford-Carter race.

The poll was taken by PFC pollster Robert Teeter of Market Opinion Research who has also completed tabulations in other Southern states with these results:

In Tennessee, regarded as a solid pro-Carter Bible Belt state, Carter is well ahead of Ford, but not enough to rule out a major Ford campaign. In Florida, Ford runs behind, but not much. Most surprising is Alabama, where Carter leads by only eight points (with a huge undecided vote).

Teeter's findings in Mississippi and Texas conform to Carter camp claims that Carter will sweep his native Southland.

Outside the South, the most surprising Teeter poll so far shows Carter leading the President by only four points — 45 to 41% — in New York indicating surprising Ford support in the industrial North.

But President Ford Still Trails in Poll

By R.W. Apple Jr.

President Ford is trailing Jimmy Carter among self-described independents and moderates, the two elements of the electorate without whose strong support Republican nominees have been unable to win presidential elections in the post-World War II era.

With less than two months remaining until election day, the President's strength is concentrated in groups that lack the voting power to elect a president — the well-to-do, the Republicans, white Protestants, conservatives. In almost every other segment of the electorate, Ford is running well behind his Democratic opponent.

Those are two of the central conclusions that emerge from the first national poll of the general election campaign taken by the New York Times and CBS News.

Insofar as issues determine how people cast votes for president, the poll indicated Ford is suffering from the continuing deep divisions in the country over two issues he inherited from his discredited predecessor — the still uncertain economy and Watergate.

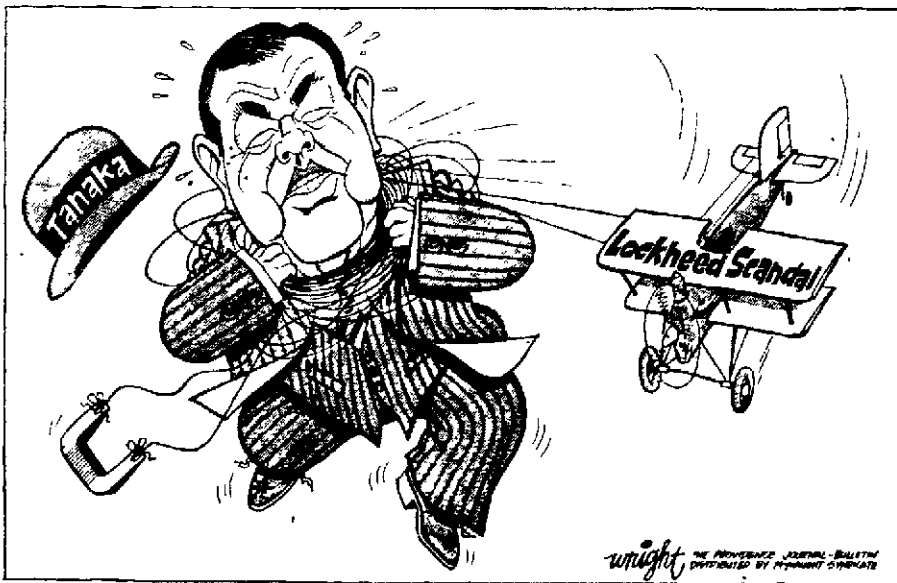

The best news for Ford to emerge from the poll was a substantial body of evidence that an unusually large number of voters were either undecided or less than certain about their preference.

Among the signs of hesitancy in the public mood were the following:

• Almost one voter in five described himself or herself as undecided, a much higher figure than usual at this stage of a campaign. In Gallup Polls taken about Labor Day from 1960 through 1972, the undecided was 6 or 7%.

• Only 66% of the voters who say they have made their decisions call themselves "strong" supporters of either Ford or Carter.

Corporate Corruption . . . Will Candidates, U.S. Face Issue?

By J.F. terHorst

Five years ago, Lockheed came to Washington with a long face and a tin cup. It asked, and finally got, a $250 million government loan guaranteed so it could stay afloat in the airplane selling business.

Last month in Japan, former Prime Minister Tanaka and 17 other ex-government officials and top businessmen were indicted for taking $12.6 million in Lockheed bribes. More recently Dutch Queen Juliana was nearly pushed off her throne by her husband's admissions of "unacceptable" dealings with Lockheed and the suspicion of having accepted more than $1 million in bribes.

In a few weeks, the already shaky Italian government is scheduled to identify which of three former prime ministers — one of whom is Italian President Leone — took Lockheed money.

The time plainly has arrived for some serious public discussion on the question of corporate corruption and its heavy impact on American foreign policy. And for President Ford, Jimmy Carter and members of Congress, to give us something besides tongue-clucking.

The Lockheed connection is by no means the only bad one, although it is bad enough. Last February, a Senate sub-committee released evidence that the nation's largest defense contractor had paid out $24.4 million to encourage the sale of its aircraft.

Call it bribery — as they are doing in Japan and elsewhere — or call it "compensation," as the business world prefers, the fact remains that the disclosures cloud the honesty of American corporate leaders. And raise questions of complicity among government officials.

A lot of businessmen here and abroad would simply shrug the whole thing off. We're told it's the way of life the world around, nothing more than the price of doing business in countries where gifts, gratuities and graft are commonplace. When in Rome, do as the Romans do.

Nonsense. If passing money to foreign leaders is so legitimate, why is it always done under the table? And if it's such an everyday thing, why have the disclosures come close to toppling the Japanese government and the Dutch Queen?

Other questions beg for answers, too. Why is it that American companies involved in overseas palm-greasing are primarily the firms most heavily dependent on U.S. government business — like the aerospace corporations? Or, like the oil industry and international contracting firms, are regulated by the U.S. government or dependent on it for licensing and tax credits?

The American companies caught up in the international bribery scandal aren't selling pencils or soap or candy bars. They are marketing expensive items of advanced technology, including weapons of war, for which most of the research and development was done under government contract and with our tax dollars.

Business bigwigs love to complain of government "interference" in the marketplace, of labor union excesses and the hot eye of the media. But payoffs to foreign officials aren't much different than sweetheart contracts with conniving labor leaders or providing free vacations at hunting lodges and seaside resorts for Pentagon aides.

"Corporate corruption is the dry rot of capitalism," says Senator Charles Percy (R-Ill.), the millionaire former president of Bell & Howell. What in the name of free enterprise are our corporate leaders and stockholders doing about it?

And what about our top public officials? The Ford administration seems in no rush to get to the bottom of it, least of all to punish the executives involved. Senator Frank Church (D-Idaho) has introduced a bill making corporate bribery illegal and not deductible as a business expense. But the bill is not going to be passed this year, if ever.

Most top U.S. diplomats, including Secretary of State Kissinger, fret more about the continuing disclosure of overseas payoffs than the practice itself. The revelations concerning Japan, Holland and Italy are said to have had an adverse impact on U.S. relations.

Good Maybe that's what it will take to produce a change. Ever since World War I, we've been taught that communism was the real threat to the free countries of the world. It would be more than ironic if Asia's biggest democracy and our allies in Europe were done in not by leftists, but by Lockheed and the other bag men of Yankee big business.

Rep. Young, Not Henry, Touted for Africa Talks

By Mary McGrory
The thing that would probably win us the most hearts and minds in Black Africa would be to recognize the government of Angola — the one we tried to keep from office.
The Ford administration seems disinclined to such a simple step.

Instead, the plan is to drop the secretary of state from the skies once again and dazzle the world with a new display of shuttle diplomacy — between whom and whom, yet to be determined.

The idea has some tentative support on Capitol Hill, particularly among Republicans who dream of a pre-election coup that will stiffen Gerald Ford's claims of superior foreign policy "experience." Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, who led the fight against the Angola intervention, is so pleased to have the United States paying attention to Africa at last, "even if it's for the wrong reasons," that he has given his blessing to the summit expedition.

If we have to send somebody, it's pretty obvious that a much better choice of emissary would be Rep. Andrew Young, D-Ga., not because he's Jimmy Carter's man, but because he knows what it's all about in Soweto.

Rep. Andrew Young

He is, for one thing, without Kissinger's hang-up on legitimate governments. He has, for another, gone through much of what the rioting blacks of South Africa are presently experiencing — beating, gassing and prison. Martin Luther King's deputy needs no instruction.

Said Young at a hearing on the African question before Clark's African Affairs Subcommittee, "One of the criteria of the legitimacy of a government is whether or not it survives without resorting to torture. Applying that standard to the government of South Africa, it is not a legitimate government."

The future rulers of South Africa are now in prison, Young noted, and if there is to be a rational solution, it must be worked out with them. "Working with Vorster is to help stifle the true voices of freedom," he said.

OPINIONS

Kissinger's record so far is bereft of any parleys with jailed nationalist leaders.

Young sees the conflict in Southern terms. John Vorster, the South African prime minister and devotee of apartheid, seems to him like Bull Connor, the sheriff against whom he and King so often marched — "The kind who are opposed to freedom even for their own people."

Young, whose own nonviolent struggle was climaxed by his election as Georgia's first black congressman, is well acquainted with the new young black leaders of the black African nations. Tanzania's president, Julius Nyerere, apparently would like to demonstrate a little statesmanship in the current crisis.

There is some question as to whether Nyerere actually invited Kissinger to intervene. Kissinger was plainly dying to make the trip to regain altitude lost in recent months.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., went to great lengths to extract from Young an unqualified endorsement of the enterprise. Young, who believes deeply in negotiations under any circumstances, was noncommittal. He wasn't sure whether Kissinger was wanted or could do any good.

Percy, who retains his belief in Kissinger's powers, also tried to prevail on Young to persuade Carter, in the interests of bipartisanship, to support Kissinger's journey.

Young replied diplomatically the tradition of a bipartisan foreign policy is very strong in the South and made good his exit by saying that he would not want the record to show that he "presumes" to be Carter's adviser.

But committee members treated Young with the extraordinary deference due a man who could be one of the most important figures in Washington, come November.

There's no question whom Carter will send when and if he thinks the United States can do anything about the storm brewing in Africa. It will be Andrew Young, who would start out half-way home with black Africans with tear-gas in their clothes.

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

The "Haymarket Square Caper" is how the Fairbury Journal-News branded Lincoln Mayor Helen Boosalis' plan to charge $4 per stall for those who use the city's Haymarket Square parking spaces on football Saturdays.

"This rip-off of Capital City visitors by the municipality is not only short-sighted but is a penny ante game as well," said the editor. He suggested that the $536 collected on a football game day would "about cover the postage bill of the mayor's office for a week."

The State Game and Parks Commission took it on the chin from the Chadron Record. It suggested the commission's action in allowing pheasant hunting in the Panhandle is a "serious mistake" which the agency will "regret in future years."

The editor pointed out that the pheasant population has not recovered from spring blizzards of two years ago and that "there are damned few pheasants in this area" despite the ideal-nesting conditions.

The editor was critical of commissioners who apparently think "revenue from the sale of upland game bird stamps is more important than the preservation of the scant pheasant crop."

Lay off, Omaha and Lincoln sportswriters, says the Keith County News (Ogallala) noting that without even scoring a point the Huskers are rated No. 1.

"Forget your individual predictions . . . Tell the Cornhuskers how great they are when the season is over, not every week. The gridders may be collegians but they are still kids and your overbearing proclamations of their greatness are bound to get to them sooner or later," the editor wrote.

The editor of the Ashland Gazette chastised Nebraskans for "heedlessly using our underground water far faster than Nature can recharge it" and called for a set of priorities on who gets what water and when.

"The early developers of deep well irrigation have had a full generation to exploit Nebraska's unique resource, and they love it. But there is good reason to fear that a second generation of pumpers . . . will unwittingly court unimaginable disaster to our state's way of life by running out of water," the paper said.

The desire of both of Scottsbluff's hospitals to acquire computerized body scanners prompted the Scottsbluff Star-Herald to expound on the machines and their high costs.

The editor discovered professional health organizations now are cautioning against indiscriminate purchase of the scanners. If the cost data talked about is right, the editor concluded "it is questionable whether or not Scottsbluff could justify buying one of the scanners at either hospital."

Carter: Political Exercise Strenuous

By The Associated Press

For the first time in a week Jimmy Carter was home Saturday and sighing about how tough it is sometimes to fake exuberance on the campaign trail. And Gerald Ford, who didn't leave home, said a president should be president first, candidate second.

It was long-distance sparring for the two contenders who have been tossing charge and counter-charge all week on a variety of issues.

Carter had said the President is niding in the White House. Not so, Ford told reporters in an informal meeting Saturday. Carter should make up his mind on how he feels, he said.

"A few weeks ago, in August, he was complaining because I was campaigning too much and not spending enough time on government business," the President said. "Now that I'm spending virtually 100 per cent of my time being president, he demonstrates his position of being inconsistent, as he has in many cases."

"The President ought to be president and get that job done and campaign if and when he can on the side," Ford said.

Carter, after a string of long days pressing the flesh and making speeches, aired a not-so-new problem of challenger versus incumbent.

"President Ford can walk into the Rose Garden and read a 1 1/2-minute statement that he and all his staff have worked on and he can go back into the White House," Carter said. "That's his only confrontation with the American people on the evening news and in the newspapers the next day."

"I, over a period of a day make maybe one hundred different statements that are analyzed and cross-examined. I think if (Ford) were out campaigning... there would be a lot more interrelationships between the two of us."

Almost as if to prove his point,

Ford's statement Saturday was made to reporters after he escorted Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to his car in the rear White House drive.

In a speech to a union convention in Hollywood, Fla., Friday, Carter said the President is "hiding out in the White House, not willing to face the American people and to account for what he has done. I think it's time for Mr. Ford to come forward and explain his policies on unemployment, inflation and health care."

But to reporters in late evening, Carter said: "It suits me fine for him to stay in the White House... I feel that I am making progress this week in comparison with him."

Carter's 16-city trip apparently left him in a good mood and he said he wasn't tired out.

"It's a fairly strenuous political exercise, being pulled in and out of crowds, shaking hands with thousands of people and being exuberant, either naturally and sometimes artificially," Carter said.

He admitted that criticizing Ford for not firing FBI director Clarence Kelley may have been a political miscalculation. He said the statement that Kelley should have been fired reflected his views accurately, but "it may have been better had I not gotten involved in the Kelley thing at all," Carter said.

And he acknowledged that he deliberately emphasized conservative themes because Republicans are labeling him "a spendthrift, irresponsible, ultra-liberal candidate."

Carter planned to spend the weekend studying issue papers before setting out again Monday — this time to the West and Midwest. Ford will make his first out of town trip of the fall campaign Wednesday to his alma mater, the University of Michigan. He planned to meet Sunday with his vice presidential running mate, Bob Dole.

Wealth of 'Nonprofit' Far-Mar-Co Keeps Growing

By H. J. Maidenberg
(c) New York Times

Hutchinson, Kan. — Of all the billion dollar businesses in the nation, few are as dedicated to not making a profit as the giant farm cooperatives.

And despite their growing wealth typified by the "prairie castles" — the tall grain elevators that are the familiar skyscrapers of the Great Plains — these co-ops are hardly known outside the farm states.

Yet among the wheat stalks and silos, a new agribusiness giant is being formed. This giant looks like its profit-making brothers, from its paneled boardroom to its computer bank to the 1,000 freight cars it owns. It even acts like a profit maker.

Right now, for example, this co-op is having trouble moving its goods. So it has set its scientists to work finding new uses for the product; its salesmen are roaming the world for new export markets, and its executives are talking merger.

250,000 Farmers
This giant is Far-Mar-Co,

owned by 250,000 farmers who in turn own 604 grain elevators. It is the largest grain marketing cooperative in the nation if not the world. This year Far-Mar-Co is expected to market 330 million bushels of wheat alone, 15% of the nation's output of that grain.

Its potential merger partner is Farmland Industries, another co-op, which has 220 stores owned by 500,000 members, and provides fertilizers and other chemicals, seed, machinery, fuel, food, clothing and other items to farmers and ranchers.

Farmland, based in Kansas City, Mo., is rapidly becoming a major processor of foods produced by its members.

If the merger goes through — and officials say talks are proceeding without major troubles so far — the combined co-op company will have sales close to $3 billion in its first year, enough to rank it among the nation's top 100 companies in sales.

A Major Part
What's more, the combination could be strong enough to make the "Farmland" label on food as familiar to shoppers as Del Monte or Campbell or Sunkist.

These cooperatives may be little understood outside of the farm states, yet they represent a major part of the agribusiness. Their owners, instead of being stockholders in the traditional sense, are those that need their services — mainly the farmers. And in the world of farm co-ops, profit is a dirty word.

"Our function is not to make money or to give it away. Our purpose is to help our members market their grain at a fair price by pooling resources. The problem today is that their grain is not moving because buyers are scarce despite the steady erosion of prices the past year," says Gary Montford, an officer of Far-Mar-Co.

Full or Filling
Indeed, there is hardly an elevator in the nation that is not full up or being filled because of bumper crops of wheat, corn, soybeans and sorghum this season.

Members of grain co-ops are not interested in the patronage dividends they receive from operational surpluses each year," a grain broker explained.

"If these dividends from surpluses are too great they believe the co-op managers didn't pay them enough for the grain. Why I know one manager in Nebraska who reduced spoilage below the normal one-half percent lost in handling and passed the savings on to members only to be sharply criticized," he said.

The broker continued: "They didn't appreciate his efforts at all. When they got their checks they assumed they had been underpaid when they delivered the grain in the first place. Co-ops are not supposed to make money."

"Country" Elevators
Farmers truck their grain to nearby "country" elevators, as they are called, and are paid according to grade, protein and moisture content as well as the going market price that day.

The country elevator co-op manager then tries to sell the grain at a slightly higher price to cover fuel, labor and other expenses. When the grain is sold to a domestic or foreign buyer, it is then shipped to "terminal" elevators near milling centers or ports for exports.

The grain co-ops took hold more than a half century ago after the success of a similar movement by citrus growers. The Sunkist Citrus Organization is believed to rank among the leading agribusiness co-ops in the nation.

"The co-ops were based on the fact that individual farmers were often victimized by the people they sold to because they had neither the financial resources nor storage facilities with which to hold back crops until prices improved," Larry Slaughter, another Far-Mar-Co official, explained.

Often Out of Touch
Highly individualistic, often out of touch with the market until harvest time and usually barely able to pay for supplies, the farmer in past years was frequently an easy victim of buyers with a handful of dollars, Slaughter added.

All that has become history, a tour of Far-Mar-Co's new headquarters emphasizes. The building, opened only last July in what was to have been a new department store, contains 300 of Far-Mar-Co's employees. The handsomely paneled board room serves the 10 farmers and two co-op managers who meet every six weeks to direct Far-Mar-Co's operations.

Far-Mar-Co's financial power comes from its ability to obtain large loans from banks and other lenders as well as smaller amounts from members and the general public.

Presently, Far-Mar-Co pays 6.5% a year on nine-month notes that can be cashed at any time, which means it is paying higher interest than obtainable at savings banks.

Hoover Liked His 'Freebies', Says Author

Los Angeles (UPI) — Author Irving Wallace says former FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover was a notorious freeloader.

The author reportedly uncovered that facet of Hoover's character while researching for the book the "R Document," a fictional account of an FBI chief taking over the country through a constitutional amendment.

Wallace said he uncovered several instances in which Hoover took advantage of so-called "freebies," particularly with meals.

For instance, he said Hoover and his friend Clyde Tolson dined for years at Harvey's Restaurant in Washington, never paying a bill. After a change in management Hoover was asked to pay, Wallace said, and he never returned.

Tropical Storm Hits California

Los Angeles (AP) — Rain from tropical storm Kathleen abated Saturday in Southern California's desert areas after a day-long drenching that left at least three dead in two states, an entire railroad out of service and a major interstate highway blocked. The storm caused millions of dollars in property and crop damage and left hundreds of homes destroyed or damaged. The freak tropical storm was the first to hit Southern California since 1939. Some regions had more than entire average year's rain in a single day.

Tokyo (AP) — Landslides and torrential rains killed at least 23 Saturday as Typhoon Fran moved toward Japan's southernmost main island of Kyushu, police said. Fourteen persons were reported missing and 64 injured. An estimated 76,000 persons were driven out of their flooded homes, police said. The rains have touched off more than 1,000 landslides and destroyed 367 bridges and dikes, according to police reports.

Strong Tremors Hit Northeastern Italy

From News Wires

Udine, Italy — The strongest earth tremors in four months Saturday hit an area of northeastern Italy devastated by a major earthquake in May, toppling buildings and driving terror-stricken residents into the streets.

Police said a man in Ragogna was fatally injured when he slipped and fell while trying to get out of his bathtub. About 40 persons in Udine and elsewhere were hospitalized with broken limbs or other injuries and many more were given first aid treatment for bruises from falling masonry.

In Venice, residents and tourists rushed through the narrow streets, heading into the city's squares. Some buildings were seen swaying, but there was no immediate report of damage.

At least six persons were injured in Gemona, the hardest hit city in the earlier quake, and rescue teams were looking for possible victims buried under the rubble of a collapsed building.

The National Earthquake Information Service at Golden, Colo., said the largest tremor measured between 5 and 5.4 on the Richter scale and the smaller one about 4.5.

'Pat' v 'The Hat' Tops All Primaries

New York — It's "Pat" versus

"The Hat" in New York.

"Pat" is flamboyant Daniel Patrick Moynihan, former U.N. ambassador, Harvard professor and itinerant urban expert whose professional baggage carries stickers from four administrations.

"The Hat" is feisty Bella Abzug, the New York City congresswoman.

40% Jewish Vote

Mrs. Abzug and Moynihan generated the excitement and grabbed the headlines in a race where all the candidates have been grinding out declarations of support for Israel. Jews comprise nearly 40% of New York's Democratic vote.

Hewing a "pro-America" line that won him attention at the United Nations, the 49-year-old Moynihan offers himself as a "centrist" candidate, hoping to split the three liberal opponents.

Mrs. Abzug, 56, rarely without a floppy hat, bases her candidacy on a six-year house record and an appeal: that the all-male Senate needs a woman.

Mrs. Abzug hits Moynihan's service in the Ford and Nixon administrations, calling him "the Republican's favorite Democrat."

Moynihan responded with needling attacks on Mrs. Abzug's voting record on defense and other issues, hoping to entice the volatile congresswoman to counterattack.

Stand Modified

It worked. At a county fair Mrs. Abzug told reporters she would not support Moynihan if he won the primary — a position she later modified.

While publicly deploring Mrs. Abzug's "run or rule" politics, Moynihan aides were joyous.

"In one fell swoop she's revived the old, shrill Bella," rorted campaign manager Sandy Frucher.

While Mrs. Abzug and Moynihan are the front-runners none of three others can be discounted in a race in which fewer than 25% of the state's 3.6 million Democrats are expected to vote.

Campaign aides to Clark, who won the Democratic nomination in 1974 but lost to Republican Sen. Jacob Javits, claim the Moynihan-Abzug squabble helps him.

The soft-spoken Texas raised more than $300,000 while limiting contributions to under $100, and has the busiest mimeograph, grinding out 19 position papers.

Buckley v Peyser

O'Dwyer, who lost to Javits in 1968, launched his 1976 effort with the endorsement of the Democratic State Committee but had organizational problems.

Hirschfeld is the weakest contender, despite his media blitz. On the republican side, Rep. Peter Peyser of Westchester is given little chance of beating Buckley in the first statewide GOP primary in 55 years. Buckley is assured of a place on the November ballot on the Conservative party line.

In other primaries Tuesday, Sens. Edward Kennedy and Hubert Humphrey are seeking renomination in Democratic primaries in Massachusetts and Minnesota; Meldrin Thomson, outspoken conservative governor of New Hampshire, faces opposition from a moderate Republican; and Rhode Island Gov. Philip Noel, whose off-the-cuff remarks have occasionally put him in trouble, is seeking a Democratic Senate nomination.

There also are primaries in Utah, North Carolina, Colorado, Wisconsin, Vermont, Nevada and Wyoming.

An 11-pound, battery-operated heart scanner is being used to detect heart ailments in children.

PTAs Scan Children's Hearts

By United Press International

A machine big as three loaves of bread, stacked one atop another, these days helps spot undetected heart ailments in children.

The 11-pound heart scanner operates on six C batteries — the kind used in flashlights and portable radios.

Some Parent-Teacher Assns. have bought the $5,500 device and put on screening programs costing 50¢ to $1 a child.

The examinations, performed by a layman trained in one hour, take a minute each.

Parent-Teacher Assns. in California helped to demonstrate the feasibility of the machine-aided layman's hunt for hidden heart troubles in boys and girls.

2-5 Out of 1,000

At least two to five out of every 1,000 children checked by the machine will be found to have previously unsuspected heart disease, experience has shown.

The machine consists of two tiny microphones which are fixed in place on a prone child's bare chest. The mikes can pick up heart noises that can't be heard by an ordinary doctor using a regular stethoscope.

One week in Central Park in New York City, mothers helped check 300 day camp children 6 to 12 years old. They found 11 previously undetected heart problems.

Middle Income

"These were middle income children who see a pediatrician regularly," said Jack R. Lyons. "Their mothers were really surprised when the red light went on, the phonocardiograph's way of signaling a suspected abnormality needing further checking by a cardiologist."

Lyons is president of Humetrics Corp. of Los Angeles, the firm that developed the prototype of the heart scanner about eight years ago.

"Doctors at Georgetown University Medical School came to us and told us they would like to have a machine that could help teach medical students sounds of the heart," he said.

Glassner Design

Harvey Glassner, a physiological engineer and general manager at Humetrics, designed such a teaching device.

The heart scanners used for children and one for adults are second-generation products of Glassner's invention.

Lyons emphasized the machines only define suspicious heart sounds or impulses. Persons with such reports are referred for a physician for medical follow-up. What excites Lyons: in the majority of cases, children with heart disease have an excellent prospect of recovery, provided surgical or medical intervention comes in time.

The little microphones on the child's bare chest picks up sounds of the heart, amplifies them and feeds them into a computer network system for comparison.

Beyond Normal Limits

If the sounds are outside normal limits, that will be indicated at once by a little red light going on. There are a number of these lights on the front of the machine; each of the quarter-inch lights indicates trouble in a specific part of the heart.

The quick-detecting machine for adults is called the electrocardiograph screening aid.

This weighs 28 pounds and costs $12,300. It looks like a solid state medium-sized television set — 11 inches high, eight inches deep and about 15 inches long.

Four sensors are attached to a prone man or woman — two on the bare chest and one each on the ankles, also bare.

Lyons said laymen, also trained in an hour, can screen adults at the rate of one a minute. This excludes the time it takes a subject to get ready: baring chest and ankles and lying down.

Electrical Signals

The sensors pick up electrical signals from the heart and the computer in the unit makes a comparison with more than 29,000 different heart sounds — ranging from normal to abnormal.

Signs pointing to one of 20 malfunctions are given when present. The troubles range from lesions in the heart artery to a murmur to a blockage.

If the examination is normal for the adult, the examiner does nothing. If lights flashing indicate abnormalities, a switch is flicked. Out comes a copy of the electrocardiogram — for the person to take to the doctor as a starting point in mapping the trouble in greater detail.

Smallpox All But Gone

Atlanta (UPI) — Smallpox — the disfiguring, blinding, killing scourge of mankind — is about to be wiped from the Earth, world health officials disclosed Saturday.

No new cases have been reported anywhere in the world for over a month — a clear signal of the imminent conquest of the disease which has plagued the human race for centuries and taken millions of lives, the officials said.

The latest word on man's long battle against smallpox came to the national Center for Disease Control (CDC) here from the World Health Organization (WHO) in Geneva, Switzerland.

WHO's weekly epidemiological record said there are only five remote villages in Ethiopia with existing cases of the disease and none of them is clinically active.

None Since Aug. 9

WHO said there had been no new smallpox cases reported anywhere since Aug. 9.

Dr. William H. Foege, one of the world's best-known smallpox epidemiologists and an assistant to CDC Director Dr. David Sencer, said Saturday the absence of new smallpox cases in Ethiopia "means there has been a break in known transmission of the disease, an almost certain clue that eradication is not far in the future."

Foege cautioned that there might still be some few villages in the rugged interior of Ethiopia with smallpox cases not yet located by World Health Organization eradication teams. He said a helicopter check is being made of these area by WHO doctors.

Foege said that because of the difficulty in reaching some of the villages, WHO will wait for 10 weeks after the last reported new case before making an announcement that smallpox has been finally knocked out.

Major Victory

Total eradication would be one of the greatest victories in the history of public health work. It would mark the first time that man has made a major disease extinct.

Smallpox is a viral infection that kills one of every four victims and leaves survivors scarred for life with hundreds of deep pits on their faces and bodies. It has blinded millions. WHO medical teams will continue to monitor smallpox hot spots in Ethiopia for any signs of a recurrence. It will then be two years before a World Health Commission issues a declaration formally declaring the country free of smallpox.

Foege said the greatest significance of the successful war against smallpox is that "it has shown that the countries of the world, for all their failings, are capable of collaborating to reach a global objective."

"To ask why this is taking place now, when we have had the technology to do it for many years, the real breakthrough is that we have achieved a condition under the function of the United Nations that has made it possible to put together such a world program."

"By using the lessons learned in the smallpox program, nations can work together to control the whole range of disease," Foege said.

By Brian Jeffries

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Ten years after his predecessor was knifed to death in parliament, South African Prime Minister John Vorster is in the center of a storm that may change the face of southern Africa.

Three months of bloody rioting against South Africa's race laws have undermined the apartheid system of separation of the races, the cornerstone of Vorster's policies.

The once-flourishing economy, which has made South Africa a land of prosperity for whites, is in the most critical condition since the depression of the 1930s.

The white-ruled buffer states that once protected South Africa from the surge of black nationalism in central and northern Africa have nearly all been swept away. Only in Rhodesia are whites stubbornly hanging on to power, and even there a guerrilla war is escalating.

Few international observers expect the white Rhodesian government to survive and diplomatic efforts are being concentrated on keeping the conflict from engulfing all of southern Africa.

The grim-faced South African leader, whose years in power have been marked by a mixture of pragmatism and iron-fisted action against opponents of apartheid, is in a pivotal position in that effort.

He is already backing U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's strategy, designed to bring a peaceful changeover to black majority rule in Rhodesia and independence for South-West Africa, now ruled by Voster's government. Kissinger and Vorster are to meet again next week for further discussions.

His response to racial rioting at home that has left more than 300 persons dead since June, has been to threaten of more police action while promising to consider "genuine grievances" of nonwhites.

This has led his opponents to charge that he is failing to provide leadership at one of the most critical periods in the nation's history.

But to his supporters, he is a strong leader not to be panicked into hasty action, a man committed to white rule but open to some change.

Vorster is expected to map out his strategy for peaceful change at home and abroad in a speech Monday — the 10th anniversary of his appointment following the assassination of Hendrik Verwoerd.

When Vorster took over, there were widespread predictions that he would follow a hard-line policy to bolster white rule, with no concessions to the nation's 18 million blacks.

The predictions were based on his five years as justice minister. Starting in 1961, he ruthlessly cracked down on opposition to South Africa's race laws. He introduced detention without trial and "banning" — restriction on speech, movement or association.

"If we in South Africa want to remain," he said then, "we must reconcile the freedom of the individual with the safety of the state."

After the Sharpeville incident in 1961 in which police killed 69 blacks demonstrating against apartheid, the militant black African National Congress and Pan African Congress were outlawed and leaders either jailed or banned. Other dissidents were deported or had their passports confiscated.

The tactic succeeded in dampening black opposition to white rule until June 16 of this year, when young blacks in the segregated township of Soweto, near Johannesburg, ignited the nation's worst racial upheaval. That upheaval shows no sign of subsiding.

Vorster also spread the color bar to politics in 1968, outlawing multiracial organizations to remove the threat to his government from the mixed-race Liberal and Progressive parties. In the same year, the nation's 2 million "coloreds," as people of mixed race are officially called here, lost their right to be represented in parliament.

However, in a vain attempt to get South Africa back into the Olympics in 1968, Vorster eased apartheid restrictions in sports and allowed multiracial teams.

A limited number of hotels were opened to all races and Vorster did not oppose moves by Johannesburg and other South African cities to desegregate public libraries and parks.

Vorster has been a pragmatist abroad. He offered friendship to countries willing to overlook South Africa's internal policies. At the height of his detente policy with black African states, he promised to move away from race discrimination.

Newly independent Botswana, Lesotho, Swaziland and Malawi, all economically dependent on South Africa, established diplomatic missions in Pretoria and accepted trade and aid from Vorster.

When the black president of Malawi, Kamuzu Banda, paid a state visit to South Africa in 1971, Vorster shocked some of his hardline white supporters by being photographed with the black statesman, sitting next to one of Banda's black female aides at dinner.

The same pragmatism that led him to seek detente with black nations to the north, including Liberia and the Ivory Coast, also persuaded him to back black majority rule in Rhodesia and move toward independence for South-West Africa.

The initial successes of detente brought a dramatic meeting with Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, a moderate leader widely respected internationally.

The meeting came at the opening of constitutional talks between Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith and the black nationalist African National Council aimed at a peaceful transfer of power from Rhodesia's 270,000 whites to the 6 million blacks.

It was the highlight of Vorster's detente diplomacy, but the talks failed.

Later, South Africa's image received a further battering in black Africa when Vorster allowed South African troops to cross into Angola on the side of

Deep Thought

London (AP) — A subway under construction in Prague, Czechoslovakia, is being dug deeper than necessary to make it "one big bomb shelter," London's Sunday Express reported.

Western-backed factions in the civil war that erupted after the Portuguese withdrew.

The arrival of 12,000 Cuban troops to fight alongside the Soviet-supported Popular Movement (MPLA) gave it the advantage and the MPLA won the war.

Family and friends say Vorster's forbidding public personality is belied in his private life by his charm and keen sense of humor.

He likes to relax by reading biographies and an occasional western novel and is fond of cowboy films.

"He is the easiest man on earth to live with. He doesn't ask much from life. He is a very contented person," says his wife, Tina.

Vorster says the major sacrifice of being prime minister is that "your privacy is gone forever."

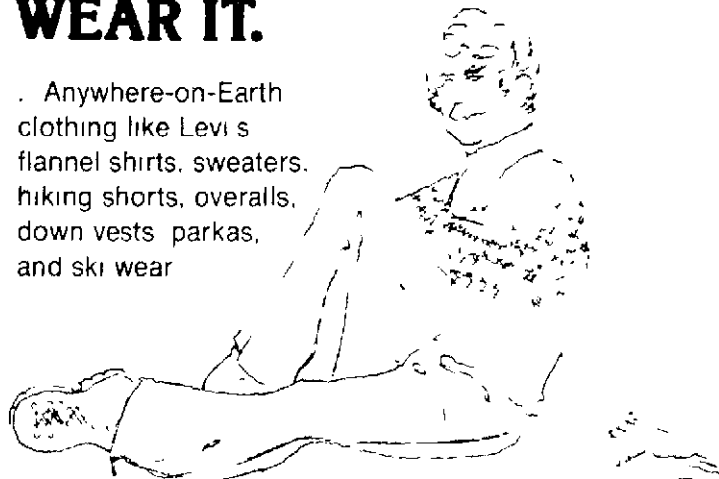

"You become public property in every sense of the word," he said. "Although you are never alone, you are the most lonesome man."

"I have taught myself to switch off. If you cannot switch off in this game, you cannot last 10 years."

China Leaders Get Pledge of Loyalty

TOKYO (AP) — The Chinese army and regional officials made a general pledge of loyalty to central authorities Saturday as more than 100,000 Chinese filed past the body of Chairman Mao Tse-tung, reports from Peking said. Mao's face was described as "firm and serene" in death.

His widow, Chiang Ching, presented a wreath of sunflowers, wheat, maize and flowers to be placed at the bier, which was surrounded by evergreen shrubs, the official news agency Hsinhua said. The chairman's body was covered with a Chinese Communist party flag.

Hsinhua said party and state leaders bowed three times before the bier and stood in silence for three minutes before taking up positions as an honor guard around the bier.

Doctors Probably Worst Patients

By Arthur Snider
(c) Chicago Daily News

Among the most poorly cared for persons in the country are physicians. Having seen so much disease they try to keep their personal health problem at arm's length or even run away from it and act only when a crisis arises.

Their excuse is not wanting to bother another doctor. Being physicians they know how busy he is. And they also know that 75 out of 100 complaints are not serious.

They become patients in a casual way. Dr. Arthur Fox, professor of medicine at New York University, says they may be having lunch with a physician friend or see him in the hall or in an elevator and say, "oh, incidentally I have been having this pain."

Or they may call up and talk about a hypothetical friend who has a list of symptoms.

Hospitalization Disliked
Once becoming patients they don't like to be hospitalized. Just as they are embarrassed to seek help from another physician they're embarrassed to expose themselves in a hospital to anonymity and the loss of control, says Fox, whose patient load is about a third M.D. That's particularly true in their own hospital.

They're more cognizant of the needlessness of such routine as the 2 a.m. temperature. And the efficient nurse is a little more abrasive to a doctor than to a lay person.

If allowed to take tests as an outpatient they tend to be dilatory. Dr. George Robertson a Boston internist who also treats many doctors, was himself told by his doctor to get certain laboratory and X-ray tests done.

That was two weeks ago and I haven't done it yet," he confesses.

Drs. Fox and Robertson describe in Medical World News, a doctors' magazine, some of the pitfalls in treating physicians.

One of the pitfalls is not treating them as patients, coddling them, begging them and bending to their desires, if they're forceful personalities, as many physicians are, said Robertson.

If you're a permissive doctor, as I'm somewhat apt to be, it's easy to find yourself along a trail that you hadn't planned at all, with your physician-patients directing therapy rather than you.

Doctors rarely charge other doctors for services. If there is insurance coverage that is accepted as the full fee. They'll usually see another doctor ahead of other patients in their office and would be more inclined to make a house call for him.

Chest Pain Fear
The symptom that frightens physician-patients most is pain, particularly chest pain, since doctors have a high rate of cardiovascular disease.

They'll minimize symptoms that might frighten the lay person but they'll often exaggerate symptoms they're sharp enough to detect — such as a red spot in the throat or a speck of blood in the stool.

Like laymen, some physicians want to be told about a malignant or other serious illness, some do not. When faced with the prospect of death, some need a lot of support; others are able to handle it well.

Not long ago, a physician-patient found out that he had cancer by asking for the X-ray reports, said Dr. Robertson.

He didn't accept hospitalization but remained at home and came to a death that he was well aware of. He was in complete control of his emotions and faculties and handled his imminent death in an exemplary fashion.

Of course there are patients who are not doctors who do that, too. And also a physician can be the most fearful, anxious and despairing of patients. That's part of being human.

Decisions Made by Women Affect Unemployment Rate

By Edwin Darby
(c) Chicago Sun Times

The current economic newsletter published by a leading bank features this report:

The nation's jobless rate rose to 7.9 in August from July's 7.8, as the number of idle workers rose to 7.5 million. The largest increase occurred in the unemployment rate for teen-agers, which rose to 19.1% from 18.1%.

As assistant to President Ford for economic affairs, L. William Seidman is passionately opposed to this kind of presentation of the nation's job picture, knowing as he does that the chances of his boss winning election in November may ride with public concern over the job outlook.

Naturally enough, Seidman would be delighted if economic reports and newspaper headlines on the subject read something like this:

The nation's total employment rose in August to 88 million, an increase of 74,000 in the number of people working and the highest total in history. In December 1975, employment totaled 85.4 million.

George W. Cloos, vice president and economic adviser to the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, agrees. "Not that I think everything is rosy and not that I want to appear callous about the plight of unemployed people," Cloos says, "but trying to talk strictly as an economist, I think the emphasis on the unemployment figures gives a false impression of the good, steady pace of the economic recovery. At the Chicago Fed, a semi-autonomous branch of the Federal Reserve Board administratively independent of the White House, Cloos makes something of a specialty of the unemployment — or employment — statistics.

The problem is women. And the fact that employment is increasing, Seidman and Cloos agree on that.

Cloos puts it this way: "Say business is increasing for Sara Lee Kitchens out in Deerfield. The plant starts hiring new people. It is a nice place to work, clean, pleasant conditions. The word gets around in the suburbs. A number of women wives apply. Sure they are looking for work. Everybody needs extra income these days."

But they are applying only because the plant is close by and the hours and working conditions suitable. They wouldn't take a job downtown for instance. "Maybe they haven't worked for years, or since the layoffs began in 1974."

However, once they apply for a job and don't get it, they are picked up in the sample and listed as unemployed."

That's the same tack taken by White House assistant Seidman. Why, he says, we could have an unemployment rate of 15% overnight if enough women suddenly decided there were attractive job openings around.

The problem, he argues, "is not with job creation, but with the phenomenal and unexpected increase in the size of the work force.

According to Seidman's White House figures, the economy has generated 4 million new jobs since the bottom of the recession, but that has been a magnet for bringing hundreds of thousands into the work force.

We had expected an increase in the work force of about 1.5 million, Seidman says, but instead the increase has numbered almost 2.4 million.

Between job offers, the high rate of inflation and the pressure on the family budget and the changing social ethic regarding women at work, no one knows just how many women may come into the work force in the months ahead, Seidman says. If, Seidman adds, unemployed were defined only as those looking actively for work for 15 weeks or longer, unemployment would be down to about 2.4 or 2.5% of the labor force.

That kind of figure, he adds, wouldn't be of any comfort to unemployed blacks, other minorities and the young, but it might allow for a more confident assessment of the economy and where it is going.

'Coldest Ever'

Hood River, Ore. (UPI) — Roy Webster, 75, said the 62-degree water was the "coldest ever" — but he still managed to finish the mile-long swim across the Columbia River, the oldest of 159 participants in the 11th annual cross-channel swim.

New York Dart Sniper Probably 'Just Gets Urge'

By David L. Langford
White Plains, N.Y. (UPI) — The sheriff poked his finger through a punctured window screen and allowed that Westchester County's dart sniper is a cagey young man, fleet of foot, who has a good shooting eye and a hangup about women.

"In my opinion, you're not going to find an out-and-out nut," said Westchester County Sheriff Thomas Delaney. "You're going to find a man who does his job, maybe goes out and guzzles a few beers, and then gets this urge."

At least 21 women in the affluent commuter towns just north of New York City have felt the sting of the night stalker's darts in the past few months. Only one has been seriously injured, thanks in part to the sniper's aim, but the suburbs are upset.

"The women are really afraid," said Delaney, who regularly calls together police officers from 15 surrounding communities to swap information about the attacks which began in February in a 23-mile stretch of suburbia between the Hudson River and Connecticut.

Delaney and other officers are now convinced the same man is responsible for all the attacks. They are keeping an eye on four possible suspects after eliminating others from the list.

With only one exception, the victims, who range in age from 15 to 72, were on the ground floor or garden apartments, full-dressed, when they were struck by steel-pointed darts with a tuft of short, brush-like feathers.

The missiles, just over an inch long, are fired from compressed-air pellet guns, sophisticated BB guns which sell for up to $60 at most sporting goods stores for target practice or shooting small animals and pests.

The darts will tear through a window screen from distances of up to 75 feet with enough force

Most of the victims just feel a painful sting, but in some cases the dart is imbedded in the flesh. A Greenburgh woman, shot June 23, was in surgery nine hours after the dart lodged in the carotid artery in her neck. Her left hand is temporarily paralyzed.

John De Leo, the sheriff department's chief of operations who is heading the investigation, said psychologists believe the attacks are sexually motivated.

"The sniper has almost the same aspects as a peeping tom, looking inside women's apartments," De Leo said. "It is an act against women, the inflicting of pain. The psychologists compare the penetration of the dart to intercourse."

While the attacks are believed to be sexual in nature, none of the women have been undressed at the time. On at least nine occasions men were present in the room at the time.

A 29-year-old woman at a Yonkers party on a Saturday night in July was sitting in the living room with 14 others when she was shot in the back with a dart and a copper BB.

Marines Will Change Clothes

Washington (AP) — The Marine Corps is going back to the mottled camouflage field uniform its men wore in the Vietnam war.

On orders from Gen. Louis H. Wilson, the Marine commandant, the switchback began Sept. 1. A complete changeover will take about two years.

A corps spokesman said Wilson decided the Marines should wear a distinctive uniform, rather than the drab green utility dress that has been the regulation field outfit in recent years.

UPI TELEPHOTO
Harold Colwell of Evanston, Ill., dusted off his circa 1800 penny-farthing bicycle during 1973 gasoline shortage.

Early Bicycles May Have Been Work of Demented Plumbers

Nottingham, England (UPI) — You're not supposed to giggle at a scholarly museum exhibition, but when the subject is the history of the bicycle it's hard not to.

This summer the Castle Museum in Nottingham followed the bumpy ride from the very first cycles to the very latest.

It's a much more complicated road than it seems. Every detour and blind alley produced machines apparently concocted by demented plumbers.

Like the Otto bicycle of 1880 — two enormous wheels side by side, with the rider suspended in the middle and only will power to keep him from falling over.

There's a cycle with five wheels, and one big enough for a whole military band to ride and play as it pedals. There are crazy looking tri-cycles and quadricycles, and a bicycle built for two who teeter in uneasy balance on either side of the wheels.

"In some cases," says the museum of the bicycles on display, "it is almost impossible to tell which way the thing is supposed to go."

Suitably in a city where (Raleigh) bike-making is a major industry, the Nottingham museum has its own historic bikes. But for this show, the most comprehensive ever — the earliest of its 87 bikes was made in 1820, its latest prototypes haven't been marketed yet — it tapped 13 other collections besides its own so it could tell the complete story of a profound invention.

A tool to improve lower-class life, a machine surprisingly useful in war, a boon to sports, the bicycle was the first great stride in personal transportation.

A fairly dangerous stride, at the start.

"Looking through old pictures of the pioneer days of cycling," the museum catalogue says, "can seem a cross between going to a circus and witnessing a public disaster."

"There are bodies flying through the air, people getting horribly mixed up with the machinery, chickens and other livestock being run over."

To understand the dangers, think of climbing onto the most famous early bicycles, "Penny-farthings," with a huge wheel in front and a tiny one behind. Even worse, think of climbing off.

"Dismounting," the catalogue says, "was an even more hazardous procedure unless there was a handy tree or high wall and one didn't mind cheating."

Worst of all, think of putting on the brakes.

The earliest bikes had none. When they came, brakes had the disconcerting habit of flinging the rider bodily over the handlebars.

The "Penny-farthing" grew out of much earlier bicycles. A French count was the first on two wheels in 1791 — two wheels, a bar connecting them, and that's all.

This was the "hobby horse." There were no pedals; you straddled the bar and ran.

Cartoonists of the early 1800s had a field day with the "Hobby horse." Bikes have been a favorite subject for gags ever since, and for popular songs ("Daisy, Daisy") and joke jewelry and funny pottery.

Special indoor riding schools were set up to teach hobby-horse riding. They reappeared when another Frenchman, Pierre Michaux, became the "father of the bicycle" about 1861 with a wood-wheel, iron-tire bike aptly named "The Bonecrusher."

It became widely popular because Michaux had the brilliant idea of putting pedals on the front wheel.

"It does seem extraordinary," says the catalogue, "that no one thought of applying this simple principle very much earlier."

But someone had.

In the show is a newly found drawing by Leonardo Da Vinci, that universal genius. His drawing, dating from 1497, shows an amazingly modern bicycle — pedals where they should be turning a chain which drives the rear wheel.

It took almost 400 years actually to build a Leonardo-style bike. Englishman H. J. Lawson did it in 1876, though his machine "was not a great success."

Pneumatic tires came to bikes in 1889 — the oldest surviving bicycle fitted with them is in the Nottingham show. By 1890 the modern — Leonardo-style — bicycle had evolved. It stayed pretty well unchanged until the "small wheel revolution" of the early 1900s.

Ultra-light, fold-up bikes seem to be the coming thing, the Nottingham show says, but in any case "the bicycle has an assured future."

Most Fair Concessionaires Cashing In

Massage chairs are selling well at the Nebraska State Fair.

By Jim Raglin
It's not scientific, but it is encouraging. A survey of concessions at the 1976 Nebraska State Fair indicates that drought, unstable grain prices and low cattle prices aren't inhibiting sales.

Nebraskans are buying and business is booming on the fairgrounds. Items selling for less than $1 to those costing $25,000 have been purchased in the past 10 days.

It all ends tonight. Exhibits and concessions pack up at 8 p.m., just when the Bob Hope show opens. The midway stays open till 11 p.m. for one last stomach grabber.

More than 600,000 persons probably will have flocked to the grounds, a record that surpasses the 578,500 of 1975.

Revenues — and expenses — for entertainment will break records. So will carnival receipts.

And a record 630 bought concession space to sell everything from cotton candy to cultivators. That's 125 above the previous high, thanks mostly to space in the new Sports Center.

Most concessionaires who have worked fairs in other states say Nebraska's is a winner by comparison. And business here this year was better than in '75 for most.

Sample comments:

George Baker, Omaha, American Sonoid, sells heat and massage equipment built into chairs.

"This is fantastic. I tripled business from a year ago in just three days. Imagine, three days being that much better than all 10 in 1975!"

His least expensive item costs $99 and the most expensive sells for $579. One change he sees is a shift in customers. "I've never sold so much to city people before," Baker says.

Fred Spuzello, Des Moines, sells Acme pianos and organs. His business is up 50% from a year ago and the average sale amounts to $1,700.

One difference in 1976 from last year is the decline in sales of "big ticket" items — those costing more than $2,000; still, he is enjoying more sales of lower-priced units and seems as happy as the music being played by his salesmen.

Spuzello says 90% of his customers are from small towns or farms and 80% of all sales are on credit. "That's just the opposite of what it was 20 years ago when cash was used in almost all sales."

Ralph Yochum, Ashland, sells confinement systems for swine. Prices range from $9.95 to $10,000.

"We want more space next year," he enthuses. "We have sold more this year than we did for the past two combined."

He finds the swine producers optimistic and points out that pork is selling for more at market than beef — and has been for "going on five months." That, Yochum says, has never happened before.

Walter Ackerman, Milford, sells livestock (beef) handling equipment and is well versed in the disparity between market prices for pork and beef. It's just part of a gloomy cattle situation, he says.

"This is the poorest year for sales I have had at the fair," he says. His sales have declined 66% in three years.

He told of a farmer who visited him at the fair Friday who had just lost $4,000 when he sold a load of cattle. "That's typical," Ackerman said.

Fritz Yilk, Grand Island, sells Heinzman irrigation equipment and couldn't be happier. "I have never," he emphasizes, "attended a fair like this. We're selling lots and lots of equipment and despite the low price for cattle and drought, the economy of the state is beautiful."

He said customers have come from Kansas, Iowa and Missouri as well as Nebraska. Equipment sells from $10,000 to $24,500.

Edith Stewart, Oklahoma City, has sold jewelry at 22 fairs for more than 30 years.

"Business is holding up real good," she says. That's in contrast to some of the 11 fairs she has worked so far in 1976. County fairs in Illinois were "off a lot because it is very, very dry there." The same holds for Missouri where her state fair business dropped.

She says business fluctuates on national election years. "They can be tough ones," she says while supervising sales of items costing 25c to $8.

What's so different about presidential election years?

"People are just a bit uncertain," she related.

Madonna Construction Goes Smoothly

By Jana Miller
It is generally agreed that construction of Madonna Professional Care Center's new St. James Hall went smoothly as union and nonunion laborers worked side by side.

What isn't agreed upon is the reason for the 18-month-long harmonious relationship between the Les Lindburg Construction Co., the general contractor, and Lindburg's 8 to 10 subcontractors.

About 60% of the subcontractors were union, Lindburg said. The remaining 40% were nonunion.

And he is pleased by the fact that construction of the 120-bed residence hall was completed on schedule with no major labor disputes or work stoppages.

Lindburg says the harmonious relationship may have been the result of a contract clause which said a subcontractor will be in default if he is unable to resolve a labor dispute within 24 hours of a written notice.

Lindburg told his subcontractors before the project began that after the 24-hour period he would exercise his right to terminate a contract.

Bill Harding, a Lincoln attorney, said Lindburg was the first Lincoln contractor to use the clause in a major construction project. Harding called it a success.

Known as the performance or harmony clause, the contract language was used at the suggestion of the Great Plains chapter of the Associated Builders and Contractors Inc.

Lindburg is one of 126 members of the chapter that includes contractors, suppliers and associates in Nebraska, South Dakota and North Dakota. Harding represents the chapter and Lindburg.

While Lindburg and Harding credit the smooth situation at Madonna to the performance clause, others cited different reasons.

Arlie Heald, business manager of the Electrical Workers union, said he doubted that the performance clause had much impact on the job. Heald is also president of the Building and Construction Trades Council.

Contract Not Binding
He emphasized that the contract was with the subcontractors, not the unions, and therefore was in no way binding on the unions.

"It is not at all unusual to build a job of that nature and that size without any union problems," Heald said. "I would be safe in saying that we, and I mean all construction unions, seldom have union problems on jobs of that size and nature."

Crafts Know Work
"It's work that has been conducted so many times before that most crafts know what work belongs to them," Heald said about the Madonna project.

He added that disputes are more likely to occur on larger projects involving installation of unusual equipment, or on projects

Building Gone, But Memories of the Great Bank Robbery Linger

By Bill Kreifeld
Today, it's just a hole in the ground, awaiting revitalization as a part of Lincoln's downtown core.

At 10 o'clock on a warm morning 46 years ago, however, 12th and O Sts. was the scene of what stood for decades as the biggest bank holdup in history. It was so big it broke the bank.

Joe Carroll and Eugene Masters remember it well.

The Sept. 17, 1930, heist at the Old Lincoln National Bank and Trust Co. resulted in a massive shakeup and enlargement of the Lincoln police force.

Carroll, who became the longest-tenured police chief Lincoln has had, was a rookie at the time. Masters, an established veteran (he had joined the force in the spring of 1927), was a detective when six men tapped the bank for $2,702,976 in securities and cash.

"I was at the station talking to an off-duty officer who had stopped by when Meyer and Schappagh roared into the drive and said, 'They're holding up the bank at 12th and O,'" Masters recalled.

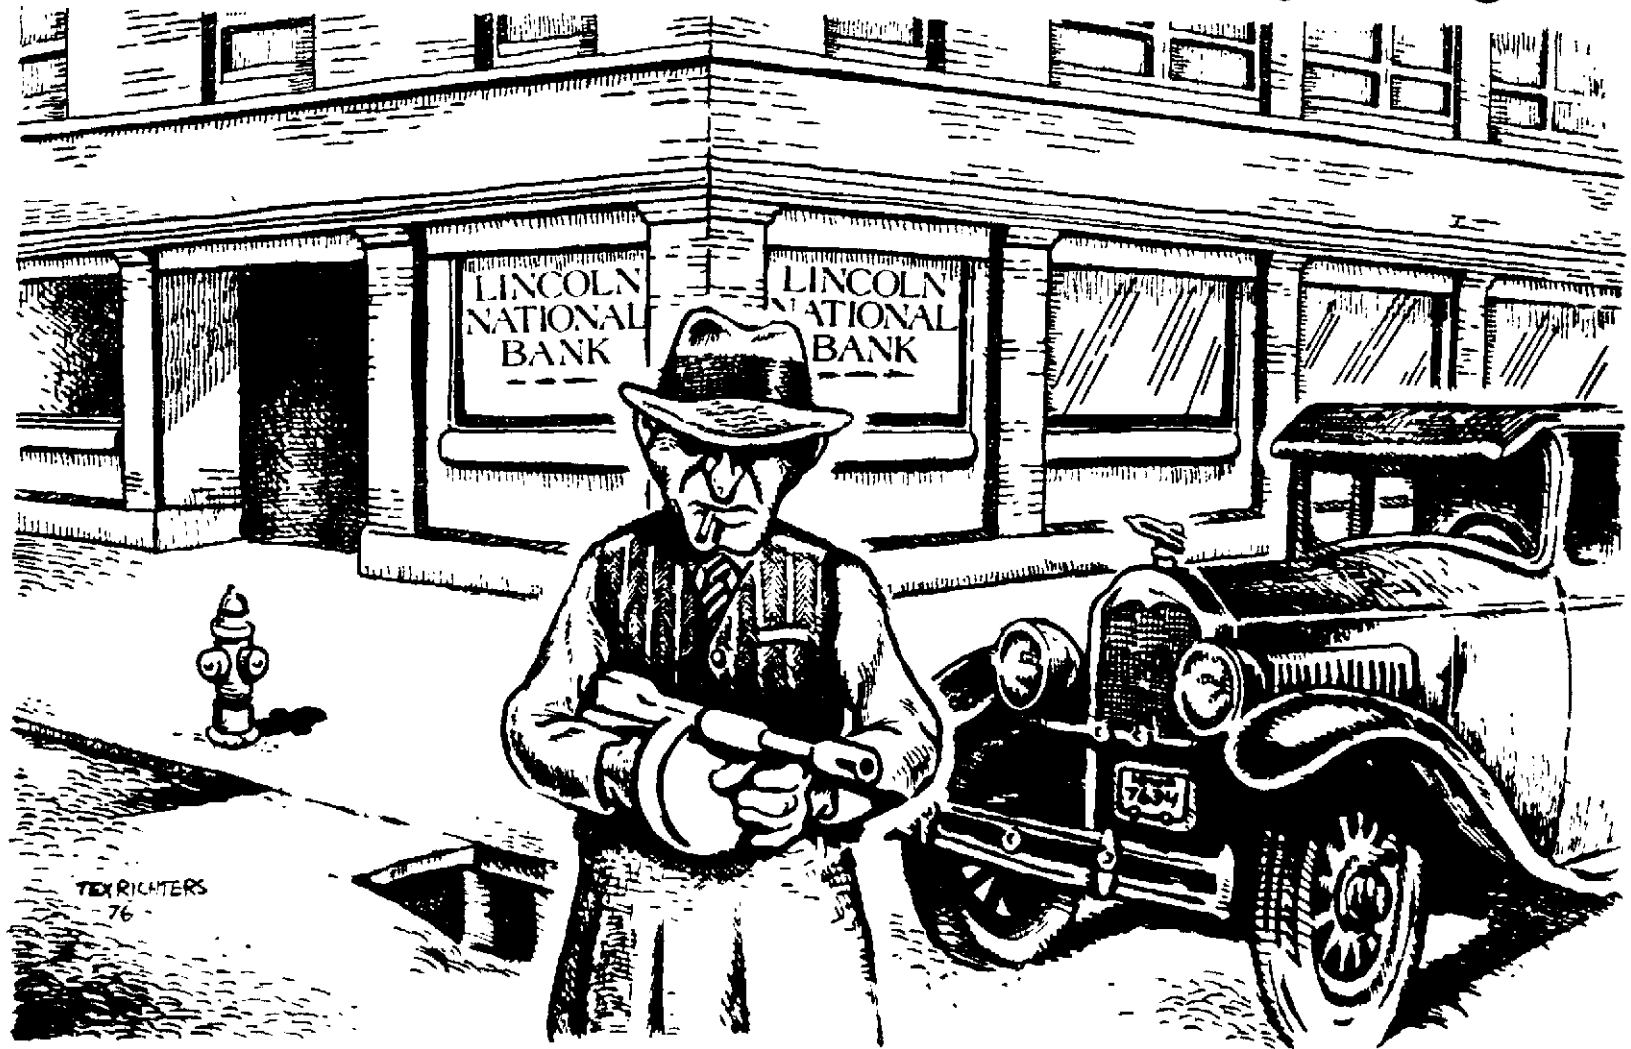

"Somebody had called the station and said that something was going on down there, and Meyer and Schappagh had been sent out on it. But when they got there, they saw a guy standing on the sidewalk with a machine gun.

"He stuck it in their car window and told them to get the hell out of there, and they did," said Masters, who retired from police work in 1969 after serving as assistant chief of the Lincoln force and as chief of police for the University of Nebraska.

No Radars
In those days before Lincoln police cars had radars, Detective Peter Meyer and Motor Officer Forrest Schappagh had no choice but to race five blocks back to headquarters and sound the alarm.

Sitting in his highway safety consultant office on the Anderson Building's sixth floor (overlooking the street corner where it all occurred), Carroll said Meyer and Schappagh "did the only sensible thing they could."

Meyer was a juvenile officer and was unarmed, "so they had one measly little .38 (revolver) between them, and that guy had a Thompson and was ready to use it," Carroll remarked.

Recalling that Police Chief Peter Johnstone was a frugal man "who operated on a low budget and wouldn't buy any equipment," Masters said that when Meyer and Schappagh reported the holdup, "we ran into the station and grabbed a shotgun."

"But we found there was a sum total of only six shells to take with us," he remembered, noting that even in those days of John Dillinger and Al Capone, "the department didn't have any Tommy guns yet."

Clean Getaway
By the time police reinforcements arrived at the bank, the robbers had made a clean getaway.

Moving quickly, they had scooped up some $25,000 in currency that had been distributed to tellers. They got the $2.5 million-plus in securities on a fluke.

The securities, both negotiable and non-negotiable types, were kept in a safe protected by a time lock. E. H. Lulhart, the bank's vice president, ordered a teller to work the combination to show the robbers that it couldn't be opened.

To everyone's dismay, the heavy door swung open and the robbers began stuffing the securities into a blanket one of them had carried into the bank. Someone had forgotten to set the time lock.

The getaway was classic. The robbers' Buick was equipped with a siren, and its scream as they sped south out of the city cleared the streets ahead of them.

KC Protection?
It is believed they made their way to Kansas City, Mo., where Johnny Lanza, ex-convict and politician, may have offered them protection for a price.

At any rate, the six men and their car disappeared and the Lincoln National Bank and Trust Co. ran short of money and closed its doors forever.

The Lincoln Police Dept. underwent a major shakeup and expansion, and until 1941, when Carroll became head of the force, "we went through several chiefs," said Masters.

Along with more men, the department got some new equipment, including Tommy guns and a massive, armor-plated touring car with bulletproof glass.

Masters recalled that three officers were assigned to the battlewagon, "and they mostly stayed with it at the station, waiting for another bank to be robbed, but none ever was."

Sail's Pace Progress
Progress in the case moved at a snail's pace until the spring of 1931, when two witnesses to the holdup viewed photographs of Thomas (Pat) O'Connor of East St. Louis, Ill., and identified him as the man who had stood guard outside the bank with the machine gun.

For several days thereafter, a group of Illinois policemen kept watch on a downtown East St. Louis apartment until O'Connor and five of his associates congregated there. They rumbled the apartment and arrested all six men.

Witnesses subsequently identified three of the six.

O'Connor, who was a guard at an East St. Louis gambling resort, Howard (Pop) Lee, a former coal miner who had taken to running rums from the Florida coast to the St.

Heavily Guarded

On May 18, 1931, they were returned to Nebraska from Morrison, Ill., in a special car on the Burlington's Ak-Sar-Ben Limited, guarded by heavily armed police. O'Connor, Britt and Lee played cards, apparently confident that Lancaster County Atty. Max G. Towle would never be able to convict them.

But Towle had a surprise witness.

George Stoy, who was serving a forgery term in the Nebraska Penitentiary, testified that he met Lee, O'Connor and Britt along with another man on a Lincoln street shortly before the holdup. Stoy said he wasn't living in Lincoln at the time but had chanced to meet them while driving through the city that morning.

Lee and O'Connor were convicted and sentenced to 25 years each. Britt was acquitted after two juries deadlocked at his trials.

Stoy was proved to be a liar. He wasn't even in Nebraska when the bank robbery occurred. He had made up the story of meeting Britt, Lee and O'Connor in the hope of gaining freedom.

No New Trial

Despite that turn of events and repeated legal moves by their attorneys, Lee and O'Connor were not granted new trials. They served 10 years each until September 1941, when they were pardoned of a crime that many people, including Masters and Carroll, say they probably didn't commit.

Meanwhile, in late 1931, Chicago hoodlum Gus Winkler was arrested in connection with the Lincoln holdup and was brought to Nebraska to stand trial.

A close associate of gangster chieftain Scarface Al Capone, Winkler actually was on an errand for Capone in Buffalo, N.Y., on the morning of the robbery. However, as he saw what was happening in the Lee and O'Connor trials, he apparently grew apprehensive that his alibi might not stand up.

Facing a deepening financial depression, Lincoln National's stockholders were trying desperately to recover some of the stolen Liberty bonds, and Winkler told Towle he'd try to get the securities back if he could return to Chicago.

Charges Dropped

Towle conferred with Nebraska Gov. Charles Bryan and other officials, then decided to drop the charges against Winkler. Gov. Bryan called the affair "one of the blackest pages in Nebraska history."

Through Winkler's efforts, plus assistance that Carroll and Masters say Towle got from a Chicago private detective group known as the Secret Six, Towle's gamble paid off.

In early January 1932, Chicago police received a telephone call directing them to go to a certain street corner at 2 a.m. When they got there, officers found a suitcase containing nearly $600,000 in Liberty Bonds and an affidavit declaring that an additional $2 million in securities taken from the Lincoln bank had been burned.

It was said the bonds surfaced one night during a meeting of several underworld figures in Cicero, Ill. Capone himself was said to be one of the negotiators.

Whatever happened, Masters and Carroll say Winkler must have made a mistake along the way because his body was found on a Chicago street a few months later. He had been murdered gangland-style with a shotgun.

Had the Liberty Bonds not been recovered, Masters observed, "a lot of people in this town would have gone bankrupt. That was all they had."

FBI List

In 1930, the FBI was not empowered to enter bank robbery investigations, but years later it listed a half-dozen men who were believed to have been the actual participants in the Lincoln robbery:

- Avery Simons, who became a rancher in Bolivia after the robbery.
- Gus (or Cas), Stone, a minor underworld figure.
- Homer Wilson, a Chicago hood, possibly leader of the holdup gang.
- Charles Joseph Fitzgerald, a participant in the Hamm kidnapping at St. Paul, Minn.
- Eddie Doll (alias Eddie LaRue), an Iowan who reportedly gave some of the stolen bonds to a friend in Des Moines.
- Edward (Willy) Bentz, a man with a long criminal record, once a member of the infamous Machine Gun Kelly gang.

Unfilled Gaps

Unlike the hole in the ground at 12th and O Sts., information gaps in the story of the robbery and the recovery of the bonds probably will never be filled.

Lancaster County Atty. Ron Lahners says that when the late Mr. Towle left office in 1947, "he took every one of his old records with him, and I don't know who'd have any idea of what became of them."

But when two retired self-described coppers like Masters and Carroll gaze at the spot where the old bank once stood and start reminiscing about the holdup that so touched their lives, details like that aren't really needed.

Newspaper Readers May Be Asked

Building Commission Is Seeking A Better Name for the SOB

By Don Pieper

Nebraska newspaper readers may be asked to recommend a name for the new state office building, according to Administrative Services Director Stanley A. Matzke Jr.

He said the State Building Commission may select several finalists from among the scores of proposed names and ask newspapers throughout Nebraska to print coupon ballots.

Under the law, the commission has authority to make the final selection.

Although the building is to be ready for occupancy in November and although the Legislature twice has urged that the structure be named in honor of the late Sen. George Gerdes of Alliance, Matzke said a firm name-selection procedure hasn't been established.

As construction work nears completion, the block-square facility is known informally, if inelegantly, as the SOB (for "state office building").

1975 Resolution

The legislative recommendation came, initially, as a resolution adopted 42-0 during the special session in November 1975.

The commission was reminded during the 1976 regular session of the senators' nomination of Gerdes.

But Matzke said the Exon administration has been taking a go-slow attitude because "several senators came to me after that resolution was adopted and said they were in a box on it because there weren't any alternatives."

Matzke was asked how many senators had warned him that Gerdes might not be the true favorite among legislators for the building's name. "Three or four," he said, without identifying them.

Letter Circulated

The resolution was sponsored by Sen. Roland A. Luedtke of Lincoln and was a response to a letter circulated in August 1975 by two former senators.

Eric Rasmussen of Fairmont, now a member of the Public Service Commission, and Ross Rasmussen of Hooper, now executive director of the Nebraska State School Boards Assn., wrote current and past senators about Gerdes.

"When you consider the many people over the years who have served our state, surely George Gerdes typified the kind of Nebraskan in which we can all take pride. His rugged individualism, high standards of performance and wealth of intellect and personality made a mark on our state which should be rewarded in memorial," the letter said.

Gerdes, who was executive director of the Legislature at the time of his death in 1974, was a senator from 1959 through 1969.

Tax Mahal?

The general public was encouraged last winter to submit names. Although some were serious, that solicitation also netted such nominations as Tax Mahal, Ripoff Building and the Carpenter Shop (a reference to another former senator, Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff).

U.S. Sen. George Norris, three-time presidential nominee William Jennings Bryan and Poet Laureate John G. Neihardt were among others suggested for memorial consideration.

The building, which is to cost $30 million plus interest, is being financed with revenue from a portion of the tax on cigars.

Name that building.

Washington Perspective

By Andy Montgomery

Estate Tax Reform Not Dead

Washington — Nebraska farmers, ranchers and small businessmen dismayed over congressional failure to enact estate tax revisions shouldn't give up just yet.

But hopes of getting future relief through reform of the present outdated and burdensome inheritance or "death" tax law before the October adjournment are fading fast, however.

Although it's unclear exactly how they play to resolve the stalemate, there is some evidence that the congressional leadership has now backed up from the "it's dead" position on estate tax changes.

(The Senate-House conference committee reached agreement on the issue Thursday night, but there is still some doubt that it will be cleared by a majority of members of both houses.)

If the legislation does die this year, the mortal blow will have been delivered by the House of Representatives on Aug. 30.

Spoiled Kids

That's when members acting like a bunch of spoiled kids, refused to play any longer unless they got their way on the rules of the game. Although both Republicans and Democrats blame the other for killing the bill, there's enough fault to go around.

When House Ways and Means Committee chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., lost two procedural votes involving a modified closed rule allowing votes on only two amendments and a motion to recommit, he stalked off the floor, preventing further action on the bill.

For their part, Republicans hooted and jeered Ullman, rubbing in their victory of opening up the bill to practically any and all amendments. But they could not have been unmindful that time is running out on this Congress and prolonged debate could kill the bill just as effectively as Ullman's pigeon-holing of it through his walk.

While Democrats were correct that the Republican victory could open up a can of worms, they were a bit demagogic when they charged, as one did, that "estate tax reform is being sacrificed on the altar of Republican special interests."

Those making the charge overlooked several points:

In rejecting the "rule," 88 Democrats joined 124 Republicans in defying Ullman and the leadership. On a second vote to permit the almost unlimited amendments, 92 Democrats and 126 Republicans teamed up to defeat the leadership.

Also, the two liberal-oriented amendments fed the full House for votes by the leadership could be said to be selective at best and short of overwhelming Democrat consensus at worst.

The first amendment would have struck the tax exemption on "generation-skipping" provided for parent-to-child-to-grandchild trusts of $1 million or less. The second would have set a two-tiered estate tax credit, increasing the tax exempt amount of $120,000 across-the-board but raising it to $200,000 for family-controlled farms and businesses.

The leadership refused to have anything to do with a popular amendment sponsored by Texas Democrat Omar Burleson and more than 100 others. This would have provided for a $200,000 exemption for farmers, ranchers and small businessmen.

Caucus Vote

The Democratic caucus authorized the two amendments on a vote of 125 to 64, hardly representative of either the party membership or the full House membership. Approximately 100 Democrats were not present or did not vote in the caucus. In the final analysis, 29% (125) members dictated what the other 71% of the House could vote on in considering the state tax bill.

The bill sent to the floor included replacement of the present tax-free exemption of $60,000 with (in stages) a $40,000 tax credit equalling a $153,750 exemption, raising the marital (widow) deduction to a minimum of $250,000, permit farm land to be valued on basis of current use rather than as potential housing developments, shopping centers and the like.

But as a quid pro quo for these "tax breaks," Ullman exacted a price which Republicans and conservative Democrats from rural areas couldn't stomach: higher capital gains taxes on inherited assets. They viewed this as offsetting the amount of tax relief acquired through the other provisions and therefore unacceptable.

As a sop to them, the leadership would have allowed a vote on a motion to recommit the bill with instructions to strike this higher capital gains tax provision.

But the leadership also knew chances of recommitting the bill in the dying days of a congress wanting to get home to campaign were slim, if not nil. Which is the major reason opponents wanted the bill opened for additional amendments.

Nebraska Resources

By Harold Simmons

Memo to Game Unit: Don't

The State Game and Parks Commission will be jumping head first into a fight if it recommends that the Legislature adopt laws setting or authorizing minimum flows for streams and rivers.

Such an idea is hardly new. What has been lacking so far is a method for doing it that might find majority or general support throughout the state.

Drought conditions this year illustrate the need for stream flow. Dry and reduced-flow streams and rivers left many fish dead and put a severe strain on wildlife.

But suppose there were minimum stream flow laws or regulations today. Where would the water come from to provide the minimum flow?

Only One Answer

The only answer is that you take water away from someone who has it and push it through a stream or river for fish and wildlife use.

That's what bothers many people because it raises the obvious question of who loses water. Will it be farmers or ranchers, which means reduced food output when there are worldwide food supply problems? Industry, which would put people out of work when unemployment is already high? Or perhaps municipalities, which could mean reduced supplies for drinking and other uses?

As in most other states, water use in Nebraska is a complex interrelationship of surface and groundwater, assorted physical structures, water law and real and assumed needs.

Simply declaring the righteousness of one particular water use without offering a solution to meshing that use with others amounts to little more than putting gasoline on a fire.

Gas Prices Going Up

People upset about steadily increasing costs of electricity had better prepare themselves for another assault on their pocketbook. Natural gas prices will begin climbing before too long.

The Federal Power Commission (FPC) has lifted the ceiling price on gas from new wells from 52¢ to $1.42 per thousand cubic feet. Kansas-Nebraska Natural Gas Co. already has notified several dozen Nebraska towns of retail rate increases because of that ceiling boost.

The FPC move, analysts point out, puts the price of regulated interstate gas from new wells closer to the present price of unregulated intrastate gas. Unregulated gas is selling for nearly $2 per thousand cubic feet.

The unregulated price undoubtedly is closer to the true value of natural gas and is supposed to provide the financial incentive for more exploration to find new supplies.

It also suggests what critics of deregulation of natural gas prices forecast will happen if controls on gas prices are lifted: something in the neighborhood of a fourfold increase in wholesale costs of gas.

Krivosh: Only Losers

Lincoln Electric System (LES) attorney Norman Krivosh warned the LES Administrative Board last week that it shouldn't view LES lawsuits against the Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) in terms of winning or losing.

"I suggest there are only losers in lawsuits among public bodies," Krivosh said.

The lawsuits LES will file against NPPD are not to fix blame for real or imagined transgressions or collect damages, he said, but to get a final determination of rights for both LES and NPPD.

United Way-Aided Family Shelter Place of Last Resort

By Linda Olig
The farmstead appeared to be recently deserted as if everyone had dropped what he was doing. There wasn't a soul around. Not in the barn, not in the farmhouse.

The old Army barracks appeared to be equally deserted this early morning. Suddenly from the barracks came the tinkling of a piano, voices chimed in, singing a Sunday school song. Wednesday Bible class had just begun at the Family Shelter, 84th and Adams.

The Family Shelter is the place of last resort, says James Dunn, residence manager.

Its doors are open 24 hours a day, seven days a week, to people and families who have hit rock bottom. It is a refuge for families whose homes have been redtagged or burned down, whose cars have broken down going through town, for women and children running from irate husbands.

Changing Roster
A division of People's City Mission one of 26 United Way agencies, the Family Shelter has a constantly changing roster of guests, more than half of them Lincoln and Lancaster County residents. Since its opening in February 1972 the shelter's caseload has grown from an average of 15 cases a month to 29. The peak was in July-August and September 1975, when the shelter served 147 families.

When a family arrives, basic needs — food and shelter, clothing and furniture — are met. Counselors work with residents to establish priorities: work, housing, improved family relationships.

The Family Shelter refers its clients to other community agencies and goes one step further: counselors accompany clients there.

"We take them by the hand," Dunn said. "It's definitely self-help, but they need some direction in getting this help."

Free as Needed
Clothing and furniture are given free as needed. "This is a handup, not a handout," he said.

In addition to supervision the Family Shelter operation and grounds Dunn counsels clients.

He and his family and two other couples live in the family house adjacent to the barracks.

Calls come in at odd hours. If a bus company calls to report that a family has just arrived in town and doesn't have money to purchase a ticket to move on, the couple on duty picks up the family.

If the Police Dept. calls to say there has been another wife and/or child abuse incident and the victims are on the way out in a police cruiser the couple stands by to check them into the "comfortably uncomfortable" shelter.

No Hopeless Cases
"I don't feel there's any hopeless case," Dunn said, "but some are harder to take than others. Anytime you work with people you have your highs and lows."

Rescue mission work is one field in which Dunn never expected to find himself.

The son of Pastor Jerry Dunn, director of the People's City Mission, he grew up in that kind of environment.

"I've been a mission brat or a mission kid for 20 years," Dunn said in describing himself as a "rebellious preacher's kid who was not on solid ground until I was about 25."

Good Home, Job
He had a good job, a three-bedroom suburban home, a wife, three children.

Then the word of God started to work in my heart," Dunn said. He and his family gave up their home, security and suburbia and moved into rescue mission work.

We feel this is where we need to be and where we can do the most good," he said.

"It's a thankless job in a lot of ways. People, for whatever reason, haven't learned to say thank you."

Our thanks comes from the community."

Smoke Gets In Your Things

I have recently begun renovating a house that was damaged by smoke and fire. Several things, such as lace handkerchiefs and ceramic beads were badly smoke damaged. How can I get the odor and color back to normal?

— H. S., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Smoke stains are "some of the hardest to get out," according to Esther Wyant, Lancaster County Extension agent. For washable fabrics she suggested washing the piece in undiluted detergent or dampening the stained area and rubbing in undiluted detergent until thick suds are formed. Work in till the outline disappears. Runse well. If necessary repeat process. Ms. Wyant said if it is repeated, it sometimes helps to dry the piece between washings. For nonwashable things apply a grease solvent with a sponge, or try soaking the item in a chlorine bleach solution or a denture cleaning solution. With any of the processes, it's best to test a small patch of the item first.

Where and How?

As a homeowner I often have small amounts of used paint thinner that I need to discard. How can I legally and ecologically dispose of this?

— J. H., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Otis Sunderman, of the Occupational Health division in the Lincoln-Lancaster Health Department said the question doesn't really have a "good" answer. He said it is against city regulations for the landfill to accept flammable or combustible items, and paint thinner comes under that head. It is also dangerous to leave the liquid around the home in containers. For small quantities, Sunderman recommends burying the liquid in your backyard. He said although this isn't an easy method of disposal, it seems to be the best.

Rent Lost, Deposit Returned

On Aug. 1, I rented an apartment. When I looked at it, the manager promised it would be cleaned before I occupied it for school. Several times during August I came from out-of-town to check if it had been cleaned, but it never was. When I moved in, Aug. 28, it was still not clean. The next day I moved out, stating that I considered the lease nullified because they had not lived up to their part of the agreement. I asked for a refund. I was referred to the apartment owner who refused my request. How can I get my month's rent and deposit back?

—Ronald G. Kucera, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Samuel Zolot, owner of the apartments, said he was not informed of your dissatisfaction until the first week in Sept. He also contends that the apartment was cleaned thoroughly, except for the carpet, which was held up because of a back-ordered part for the shampooer. Zolot said when the part came, your rug was to be the first cleaned and you were aware of the situation. Your August rent will not be refunded, Zolot said, because "for all we know, you used the apartment that month." Your deposit, however, will be returned as soon as the apartment is rerented, minus a small amount for the number of days it was empty.

Times Alters Its Format

New York (AP) — The New York Times Tuesday ended its 63-year-old tradition of an eight-column news and advertising format and adopted a format of six columns of news and six columns of display advertising on a page.

The reasons for the change are to give readers a more open, easier-to-read format and to conserve newspaper to lower costs and to minimize advertising rate increases. Times publisher Arthur Ochs Sulzberger said when plans to change the format were first announced.

Episcopal Meet in Turmoil Over Female Priesthood

By George W. Cornell

St. Paul, Minn. (AP) — The Episcopal Church on Saturday launched its 65th triennial general convention in a state of turmoil over proposals to admit women to the priesthood and to revise its historic Book of Common Prayer.

Both issues have stirred deep conflict in the three-million member denomination and could affect much of Christianity.

Whatever the outcome, the convention was seen as a watershed in the life of the church.

Amid charges and countercharges, opposing groups pledged to maintain "mutual respect" in the aftermath. But there were many signs of entrenched and hardened difference over the matters.

The Rt. Rev. John M. Allin, the church's presiding bishop, said that in view of the strongly conflicting positions, the church must find a way to encompass both sides in order to preserve its unity.

"We are obliged to do so in order to be more responsive as a community of faith to the whole mission of Jesus Christ to a broken, divided alienated, dying humanity," he said in an address for the opening worship service.

Thousands Present

Among thousands gathered for the service at the St. Paul Civic Center were 912 official deputies. Half were clergy and half were lay, elected from the church's 113 dioceses. Most of the church's 235 bishops also joined in a colorful procession.

The rest of the 13-day meeting will be across the Mississippi River in Minneapolis, at the Minneapolis Auditorium and Convention Hall.

The house of delegates and house of bishops together form a bicameral church legislature, much like the two branches of the U.S. Congress. Concurrence of both is needed for decisions.

'Face Reality'

Bishop Allin urged them to face the reality of two distinct wings in the church on the prayer book and women's ordination proposals, and to allow room in the church for "one household of faithful people."

"Affirm the good faith and conscientious convictions in both wings of this church," he pleaded, proposing the assignment of women priests, if they were authorized, only to parts of the church where there were not conscientious objections to their ministry.

Bishop Allin's advice was characteristic of the historic tempering solutions of worldwide Anglicanism, of which the Episcopal Church is one of 22 national branches.

Their tradition, with its origins in the Church of England, has always been hospitable to diversity and draws both from Protestant and Catholic forms of worship. Indeed, many Anglicans regard their church as a "bridge" between the two approaches.

Estate Tax Law Running Obstacle Course of Legislative Zigs, Zags

By Andy Montgomery
Special to The Sunday Journal and Star
Washington — If you want a reliable assessment of the chances of congressional passage of estate tax revision this year, don't bother your congressman or senators for a few days.
They're too busy trying to sort out the zigs from the zags the legislation has taken in the past several weeks, the latest zag coming this past Thursday.
The only thing certain is the uncertainty. At the moment it looks pretty good that the Senate and House will clear estate tax relief as part of a new general tax reform bill sometime in the coming week. But like Washington's weather, the outlook could change by Monday.

Commentary

Nebraska Sen. Carl Curtis, for one, is confident the provisions reducing estate taxes, while making it slightly tougher to latch onto some types of inherited wealth, will remain intact in the bill approved Thursday by Senate-House conferees.

Battle This Week

But there is some feeling in the House and especially in that body's Ways and Means Committee that estate taxes should be handled apart from the general tax bill. That battle also will be fought this week.

If anyone should be in a position of forecasting, it is Curtis. As a member of the Senate-House Conference Committee, he was one of those instrumental in wearing down the opposition of Ways and Means Chairman Al Ullman (D-Ore.) to including estate taxes in the general tax bill. Ullman until then had been insisting estate taxes should be treated separately.

Dead or Alive

But then Ullman and the House leadership have been playing a now-it's-dead-now-it's-alive game with estate taxes for weeks. So until the legislation passes and is signed into law, Nebraskans shouldn't hold their breath.

The play-acting that took place at Thursday's Senate-House conference illustrates the point. It came at one of those face-saving moments that seem to occur at all such conferences, enabling the defeated to report back to his respective membership that he did his damndest. Ullman asked Senate Finance Committee Chairman Russell Long (D-La.) if he insisted strongly on including estate tax provisions in the overall tax reform bill. "We do strongly insist," Long responded in a scenario already written in an earlier private session with Ullman.

'Weak Insist'

"Well," yielded Ullman, "we're not going to give in to a weak insist."

And with that, a provision was left in the general bill making it more attractive to conservatives while at the same time mollifying liberals who wanted a bigger hunk of estate tax channeled to the federal treasury.

Essentially, the current $60,000 exemption will be raised in steps to almost $176,000 by 1981. The marital deduction would be increased to $250,000. But as a quid pro quo, capital gains taxation of stocks and other inherited assets would be heavier.

The compromise may have been acceptable to the conferees but whether the new combination will get to the House remains unclear.

Track Record

The track record tells why. On Sept. 1, both Ullman and Long indicated action on legislation revising the estate tax law would be withheld until the House approves its own version in early October. This was just after a majority of the House won a procedural vote opening a separate estate tax bill to various amendments.

Ullman also said at the time of the vote on Aug. 30 that there was no way he could bring the estate tax issue to the House floor as part of the general tax bill. He said the House must be given a chance to vote on estate taxes separately.

At various times in August, estate tax reform was sentenced to death by Ullman and the leadership and then the sentence was subsequently commuted. Republicans and Democratic conservatives still insist on excising the capital gains tax section while liberals want it beefed up.

Work Ethic Strong With Carters

Chip Carter says the work ethic is more than campaign rhetoric in his family.

"I've been working since I was 10 years old and haven't asked my parents for any money since," he said in an interview during last week's visit.

"I had to pay for my own education and all that kind of stuff. Oh, once or twice, mom and dad made the payment on our mobile home while Karen and I have been out campaigning."

What kind of work did he do as a 10 year old?

"Well, there are a series of state tags which have to be attached to bags of certified seed peanuts, and when you're small enough you can crawl over the bags and attach the labels without hurting the peanuts."

"We used to get 10¢ for each 100-pound bag we labeled and we could earn $2.50 to $3 a week if we worked hard."

That wasn't the only way Jimmy Carter's kids earned money. "We had an awful rat problem in the warehouse and we used to get a nickel for every rat we killed," Chip recalls.

Chip, now 26, was still on the payroll, but not on the rat patrol, until he was assigned campaign duties in June 1975. Being the boss's son didn't involve any special treatment, he says. "I was No. 7 in pay among 15 employees, but I do have the unique ability to get a job there anytime I need one," he says.

He says he enjoys campaigning, but is anxious to get the suspense of the election over and get back to driving a tractor on the peanut farm in Plains.

Chip says he finds it "kind of eerie" to read about himself and his family in newspapers and magazines.

He had just bought a copy of Newsweek, which devotes more than 40 pages to an article called "Sizing up Carter."

"We made the cover," Chip said, referring to a picture cropped so closely that just the center of his dad's face showed.

How do you know it's him? "The blue eyes. Also, it says so."

The Carter campaign didn't always command that kind of media attention. "I remember when we first were getting started in New Hampshire we tried every way we could think of to get even a paragraph about any of us printed. Then Ford's kids came for a weekend of skiing and made all the front pages," he says.

Chip says candidates' children have a common bond. He hasn't met the Ford children, but he says he would like to. He knows they would share a lot, just as the Carter kids have enjoyed sessions with the children of Udall, Bayh, Shriver and other campaigners.

Chip said he came to Nebraska with good vibes. His brother Jeff had been here. "He told me Nebraska is a beautiful state. He really enjoyed it," Chip said. Pretty good line for a rat-killer.

Political Paragraphs

• Iris Jacobson, the advance person for the Chip Carter trip, is a Boston lass who usually is assigned to Rosalyn Carter. "I'm on lend lease this week," she said.

• Republican John Y. McCollister is on the road a lot as he campaigns for the U.S. Senate. He finds his citizens' band radio helpful in locating the meeting place when he is unfamiliar with a community. McCollister's CB handle: Soap Box.

• All you Edward Boland fans will be disappointed to learn the Massachusetts congressman isn't coming to Lincoln, after all. It is Missouri Rep. Dick Bolling who will make an October appearance on behalf of First District Democratic candidate Pauline Anderson, despite what you might have read here a week ago.

• Believe it or not, Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky, the Democratic nominee for the Senate, seriously considered becoming a brain surgeon once. He decided instead to enter his dad's wholesale tobacco and vending machine business. Mrs. Anderson's work experience includes World War II duty as what her congressional campaign brochure describes as "shipyard burner," whatever that is.

Fair Crowd Gets Hooked On Mac Davis' Home-Spun Style

By Holly Spence

The scene was a cross between a political rally, a hot football game and a rowdy and raucous musical concert.

The occasion was the appearance of singer Mac Davis at the Saturday concert of the Nebraska State Fair.

Flashbulbs gave the effect of a continual barrage of strobe lighting, people rushed forward in droves throughout the concert to press flesh with their singing hero and a packed Sports and Entertainment Complex gave him a lengthy standing ovation before the program was even over.

Davis, making his second appearance at the Nebraska Fair, was visibly shaken by the crowd's overwhelming ovation.

There are two things, he said, that make his life good — one is "I can always come back to Nebraska" and the other — why, of course, he "believes in music."

The home-spun entertainer, who was not ashamed to start a song again after a forgotten lyric and never shied from the demanding crowd of hand-shakers, was completely in control.

His warm, homey touch was added to the show when he softly sang "Watching Scotty Grow" and offered an emotional "Baby, Don't Get Hooked On Me" and "In the Ghetto."

The ballads pleased, but so did a rock 'n' roll segment that proved to be a foot-stompin' energy-packed musical bit. It was great fun for the wildly enthusiastic audience and Davis' energy level was exhaustive. The tunes ranged from Elvis to the Big Bopper.

The show opened with a very funny routine by comedian Kip Addotta, who covered the comic waterfront from supermarkets to filling stations, bathrooms, cars, kids, parents, dentists and TV shows.

Addotta and Davis were a perfect blend for a show packed with intense, warm feelings, good music and tons of fun.

Mid-October On-Air Hoped For Seward Radio Station

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Seward — Someone else's fear of a small town put Frank Newell where he is today: behind 30 pounds of paperwork and anxious to open a new radio station.

Newell hopes to put his station, KSRD, on the air by mid-October. But then, he wanted to have it broadcasting by Jan. 1, June 1, and July 4, too.

There's nothing wrong, he said. It's just that the volume of work being handled by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) is so great that all of it, his included, is taking longer than normal.

Paperwork Frustrating

"It's frustrating," Newell said of the FCC and the paperwork required to start a station. "If I ever build another from scratch, I'll know not to be in a hurry. You can kick, scream and bite but you can't do anything about the delays."

At present, KSRD is completing assembly of its electronic gear, preparing for tests and FCC inspection of the facility.

Newell said he has submitted some 30 pounds of paperwork to the FCC, obtained construction permits and is awaiting approval of a permanent broadcasting license. "We hope to be on the air by Oct. 10," he said.

Newell, 29, is a veteran of 15 years in radio, including five years with Lincoln station KLMS. "I started at the ripe old age of 14, working after school until 10 at night."

For several years, Newell said, Seward has been allocated FM frequency 96.9 by the FCC. "But it just sat there. Many people fear going into a small town."

However, Newell said, "I cut my teeth in a small (broadcasting) market and that gave me a big advantage." Also the owner of a countrywestern station in Fairbury, Newell was willing to foot the $300,000 bill and try Seward.

Seward's growth, from 4,000 in 1960 to an estimated 6,500 now, was a big factor in his decision.

"Seward was showing signs of great progression; it's a growing, very active community. It has always been served by stations from other communities — York and Lincoln — but I thought it was ready to try radio," he said.

Businessmen Supportive
Mrs. Pat Dickinson, manager of the Seward Chamber of Commerce, said many businessmen are enthusiastic about having a local radio station.

"For the most part, they're excited and anxious," she said. "We were sitting here wondering whether we could support a station. If he gives us the coverage he's talking about, it will be of real benefit."

KSRD will play "adult contemporary" music, Newell said.

Its news operation will place most emphasis on weather, local sports and news, with less attention given to national news stories.

KSRD moved into part of a new building on Aug. 1, and began installing computer-controlled broadcasting equipment. A 610-foot tower is being built near Valparaiso.

KSRD will use an FM frequency, rather than the more widely used AM frequencies, and that will be something of a problem, Newell admits.

However, Newell said surveys have shown the majority of homes have an FM receiver and that an increasing number of automobiles are being purchased with AM-FM radios.

Because the station expects to broadcast to some 4,800 square miles, Newell said gaining listeners outside Seward County may pose some problems.

But in Seward, he is expecting a good audience. "This has been an exceptionally receptive community. Now it will finally have a voice."

Kids Day Not Just Kid Stuff at Fair

Saturday was Kids Day at the State Fair, but it wasn't all kid stuff for the fairgoing crowd, estimated at 60,000 by Fair Manager Henry Brandt.

In the Exposition Building, Roger Zabel of Western demonstrated how Nebraska pioneers made cornhusk floor mats.

Zabel, whose great-grandparents settled in Nebraska in 1861 with squatter's rights, learned to make the mats when he went to country school.

Making these mats was a way the pioneers used one of their natural resources, he said. After tamping the husks, he breaks them into 10 to 15-foot lengths and then forms a circular mat with the braided piece.

Zabel, 62, said he has made the mats all his life. His five children, plus numerous other people he has given the mats to, have learned to wipe their feet the pioneer way, he said.

Zabel also can be found demonstrating spinning in Heritage Village every afternoon on the hour. His father, who used to make his own clothes, taught Zabel how to spin when he was a small child, he said.

After a mid-week breather food concessionaires once again geared up in anticipation of hotter temperatures and bigger crowds.

One fairgoer, having satisfied his annual urge for a pineapple whip, walked to his car muttering "fantastic." He said.

The guy who invented them should get the Congressional Medal of Honor.

The beef showmanship gold medal was won by Loren Tejki, 15, a Stanton FFA member. The silver was won by Greg Choquette, 15, of the Franklin FFA chapter.

The open class goat show drew large numbers of curious kids and a few livestock officials as well. Glenn Nicklas, FFA swine superintendent said, "This is the first goat judging I have ever seen. I wouldn't say the FFA will have a goat show soon but there is a growing interest in goats."

Beetles Make Appearance

Ramsgate, England (UPI) — A colony of 150 Colorado beetles has been discovered in a potato field on the English Channel coast, the first time the pest has appeared in this country in 24 years.

The insect, which can reproduce at the rate of 500 a month and ravage potato crops, is rare in France.

Blacks, McCollister Discuss Conservatism

Omaha (AP) — A group of black leaders has questioned Rep John Y McCollister (R-Neb) about his campaign for the Senate.

McCollister helped open a North Omaha Republican headquarters, then met with several members of the Greater Omaha Concerned Citizens.

A B (Buddy) Hogan, city human relations director and one of the questioners noted McCollister and his Democratic opponent, Omaha Mayor Ed Zorinsky, say they are conservatives. Hogan asked McCollister to define conservative.

He said the main issue between so-called conservatives and so-called liberals "is where the decision-making will be done with conservatives favoring less federal decision-making and liberals favoring more.

He said schools were one area where the federal government is providing 10% of the financing and 90% of the decision-making, and added I believe local citizens will do a better job of determining educational policy than the education office in Washington.

Hogan questioned McCollister's reasoning when applied to civil rights. He said, in the area of civil rights almost all the relief has come at the federal level."

McCollister said he did not favor any changes in citizen's constitutional rights, but doubted the ability of the federal government to enforce its civil rights directives and various other programs.

Several members of the group challenged McCollister with questions about busing for court-ordered integration, food stamps and whether African countries should have majority rule.

McCollister defended his views and denied one allegation by John Guy that he had inflamed some groups in Omaha by attempting to block busing.

McCollister said he does not believe in busing. He said his efforts were to determine whether the lower federal courts, which ruled in the Omaha integration case, were actually following Supreme Court opinions.

$176,000 Exemption OK With Cavanaugh

By The Associated Press Omaha — State Sen John Cavanaugh of Omaha, 2nd District Congressional candidate says he advocates passage of legislation to allow a $176,000 estate tax exemption.

However, Lee Terry, the Republican candidate for the congressional seat called for its abolition as a benefit to farmers and small businessmen.

Throughout my campaign I have strongly advocated raising the current unrealistic exemption of $60,000 to $200,000. Cavanaugh said in a news release. But I would accept the $176,000 exemption for now and it is far better than no action at all on the estate tax during this session.

Terry said "The estate tax is pure and simple robbery by the government.

Arguments For Doniphan Power Plant Concluded

By The Associated Press Arguments supporting construction of a coal-fired power plant near Doniphan were concluded Saturday before the Nebraska Power Review Board in a special session.

The board recessed until Sept 20 when opponents will present their case against the Grand Island and Hastings municipal proposal.

Before the board recessed, Arlen Beam, attorney for the opponents, asked it to dismiss the application by the Great Plains Power Agency. Beam was asked to submit a brief supporting his motion.

The Great Plains Power Agency was formed by the two cities to construct and operate the 150-megawatt plant as an alternative to buying power from the Nebraska Public Power District. It has selected a site near Doniphan but villagers and landowners are fighting the agency's application for a construction permit.

Robert Olson, utilities manager for Grand Island and a member of the power agency board testified Saturday that the project is economically feasible and will not duplicate energy service.

The hearing will reconvene in a Nebraska Supreme Court hearing room.

'Free' Checking Account Not Always That Way

(c) Chicago Daily News When a bank advertises a "free" checking account, is the account really free?

Some banks offer free checking if the depositor maintains a minimum balance in the account. Some of them require that the depositor sign up for a bank credit card. Some require that the depositor pay a small fee for the checks used in the account.

If a bank demands any of these requirements, it cannot advertise a "free" checking account, according to a new code of advertising ethics adopted by the boards of the Bank Marketing Assn and the Credit Union National Assn.

Specific Areas
The code was accompanied by a set of guidelines covering specific areas believed to be the most susceptible to advertising misinterpretation. These include the advertising of "free" checking accounts for other services, premiums and giveaways, deposit insurance and packages of financial services.

The Bank Marketing Assn started looking into the establishment of an advertising code of ethics after the measure was called for nearly two years ago by Alan B. Eirnborg, senior vice president and marketing director of Chicago's Exchange National Bank.

The association eventually set up the Financial Advertising Committee on Ethics (FACE), which was headed by bank marketing consultant Jack Whit. The Eirnborg also served on the committee.

Among guidelines provisions: An institution can advertise a "free" checking account only if there is no charge for statements or checks if there is no minimum balance required and no requirement to use any other bank service. A bank could charge for special printing, such as pictures on checks and for personally imprinted checks, but it also should offer some kind of check that a customer can use without any cost.

Banks that require a minimum time for deposits in order to make customers eligible to receive free premiums should state the requirement clearly and prominently in the advertising.

Institutions should not claim that they pay the highest interest when there are other financial institutions paying identical interest on the same type of accounts. An institution can say "No bank pays more on savings or we pay the highest bank rates allowed by law."

Eirnborg emphasized that the code of ethics is purely voluntary and there's no way to put together the money and the staff it would take to enforce the code. He said the associations will rely on "peer group pressure" to encourage adherence to the code.

About 4,500 banks are members of the BMA, and 23,000 credit unions are in CUNA.

Vacation Home for Casual Life

By Andy Lang, AP

Vacation houses lend themselves to distinctive designs, not only because an effort is made to achieve an atmosphere of casual living, but because architects are not hampered by confining building restrictions.

This vacation house has an unusual and interesting exterior, an effect achieved by placing the siding at an angle. Add to this the striking window treatment and the use of clean angles and you have a structure that shouts informal comfort.

Inside, an immediate atmosphere of spaciousness begins with the cathedral ceiling sheathed in attractive V-joint decking. A "bulkhead" stairway divides the living room with its massive stone-veneered fireplace and the dining room on the opposite side. Many windows and sliding glass doors are spread out to capture the view and breezes in all directions. Three wooden decks extend space outdoors.

Adjoining the dining room is the step-saving kitchen designed to satisfy the most demanding of homemakers, containing more than ample counter and cabinet space, including a clothes washer and dryer. Completing the first floor is a bedroom, with a full bath and two closets.

For those who might want a house of this type for year-round living, provision is made for the air-conditioning or heating equipment in the closet where indicated. Although this plan of architect William G. Chingotis is of basementless design, a full basement is possible with the basement stair located under the main stairway.

The second floor, which may be finished at a later date if so desired, consists of the main bathroom and two bedrooms with cross-ventilation. Each has twin closets. Both bedrooms lead onto the balcony overlooking the living room. Should the second floor be finished at the time of the original construction, the extra room downstairs can be used as a den or in any way desired. Note that it is a "dead-end" room and thus can be closed off to ordinary household traffic.

This distinctive design is tailored to suit a family's needs for enjoyment of leisure time or year-round casual living.

Col. Khadafy Getting Scared

Tripoli, Libya (AP) — Personal security for Libya's top leaders has been tightened considerably in the face of supposed threats from abroad. Libyan ruler Col. Moammar Khadafy has taken to wearing a revolver and no longer strolls through the alleyways of the capital to chat with his people.

Both Libyan and foreign officials here insist there are no internal threats to Khadafy's seven-year-old revolutionary government. They say the threats, if any exist, come from outside Libya, especially from neighboring Egypt, whose president, Anwar Sadat, has twice said he wants to get rid of Khadafy.

OUT-WITTING HUMAN NATURE
An escrow account is money which is held by a third party to pay off a future debt. When you make your monthly mortgage payment, you are probably paying money into an escrow account over and above the loan installment for hazard insurance and property taxes.
In one way, the escrow account helps you out-wit human nature. It is said that the first thing that gets out when the budget has to be balanced is the monthly savings deposit.
Here's how your escrow account is probably set up. At the beginning of each year, your account is reviewed and your costs are estimated for the next year. The total is divided by 12 to get the monthly payment. This payment may be adjusted for one or a combination of three main reasons: 1) Your tax rate or premium rate has changed; 2) Your assessed valuation has changed; 3) Additional funds are needed to make up a deficit in your escrow account. As a result of the escrow account, your payment remains level throughout the year, even though amounts for real estate taxes and hazard insurance are paid out in lump sums.

Thimbleberry Resembles 'Neanderthal Raspberry'

"It's a pest. It's a nuisance. In fact, it's driving me crazy. As fast as I clear it away, it comes back again."

The man was trying to clear a tract of land for a cabin on the northernmost tip of Wisconsin and each summer when he returned to his property, he found it once again covered by a curious kind of weed.

This had a raspberry-bush leaf, but this leaf was immense — about the size of a giant's hand. In fact looking at the plant a man could have easily concluded that it was a Neanderthal raspberry, a missing link to plants that grew way back during the stone age.

Midst literally thousands of leaves is one or two red berries. If a person picks one of these, he'll find that it fits perfectly over his little finger — thus the name thimbleberry.

Thimbleberries are edible, but they have a wild, pucker-pucker taste. Natives say that ten thimbleberries eaten at one time are guaranteed to grow hair on the chest of a three-year-old boy.

Man first encountered the tenacity of the thimbleberry at the time of the Chicago fire. Of course after this disaster there was a tremendous need for wood to rebuild a whole city and some smart promoters bought practically all the forests of northern Wisconsin to fill this need.

As they raped the forests, they left the earth naked and very vulnerable to erosion. Then came the thimbleberry. It acted as Mother Nature's Band Aid. It covered the ground and gave it a chance to heal — time to grow more trees that would permanently protect the earth.

Of course, in some places the thimbleberry was not permitted to cover these man-made wounds. One such place was the village of Bayfield (population 900). This town is on the shore of Lake Superior at the bottom of Bayfield Mountain, and at the confluence of three ravines. Instead of the much-cursed thimbleberry, grass was planted on practically all of the three ravines.

One night in 1940, it began to rain. And it rained and it rained and it rained. And instead of being held where it fell, as would have happened if the thimbleberry had been there, the rain raced down the mountain faster and faster. It loosened boulders the size of cars. The boulders crashed through stores sending cans of beans and tomatoes and corn right out into Lake Superior.

In fact, one auto service station was literally picked up and set down in the harbor with only its sign above water.

And the water kept cutting and cutting. It loosened tombstones in the graveyard on the side of the mountain and coffins finally began racing each other through the main street of Bayfield.

Of course, all the citizens stood there horrified as they watched their dearly departed ones float by — that is everyone, but the town drunk.

He stood there cheering: "Atta boy, Uncle Charlie — keep a-going. I always said you were the fastest guy that ever lived in this damned town — even if you had to die to prove it."

When last seen, Uncle Charlie's coffin was halfway across the bay to Madeline Island — still in the lead.

Moral: Don't rape the earth, for your sins — and your relatives — may come back to haunt you.

Garden Gossip

Start Fall Lawn And Garden Care

- Keep the foliage on peonies as long as possible this fall.
- Weeds in the garden compete for water and nutrients.
- Make plans for spring bulb planting.
- Plan to construct a compost pile this fall.

By Brent Hoadley

Extension Horticulturist, Southeast Nebraska District

Does your lawn look as though the Nebraska football team practiced on it? "Athletes Foot" was a name coined by W. W. Sanderson to describe the effect football players have on turfgrass soils.

Soil compaction can be one of the worst enemies of a good home lawn program. Air, fertilizer and water must penetrate into the soil and turf root zone for healthy growth. A compacted soil puts your turf under stress and your water program may run down the city streets. If you do water your lawn to keep it green, relieving soil compaction will make your water dollar go further.

In order to relieve compaction, aerate the lawn by using a hollow-tined aerator. This piece of equipment should be run at least two directions on a home lawn. Proper penetration of these hollow tines is very important and directly related to soil moisture content. A soaking rain or an inch of irrigation water applied two days before aeration will provide good soil moisture levels for aeration.

This type of aeration program can be a help in preventing thatch buildup too. The soil cores brought to the surface can be left to "melt" back into the turf. The soil fungi and bacteria they contain will help break down turfgrass clippings and residue.

Garden Club Meets Monday

The Garden Club of Lincoln holds its first meeting of the fall at Culler Junior High School, 52nd and Vine, at 7:45 p.m. Monday. Anyone interested in gardening is invited.

A sound film on the Bellingrath Gardens and Home will be shown. Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Talcott will give pointers on how to use the harvest from a garden, and Elton Lux will entertain with "Fads and Fancies."

Brownville Will Dedicate Missouri River Museum

Brownville — The annual tour of historic homes here will share the spotlight today with dedication ceremonies for a Missouri River museum site.

The museum will be housed in the Meriwether Lewis, a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers dredge boat, which will be brought to the site later. It is currently located near Jefferson City, Mo., awaiting the collection of some $8,000 to $10,000 needed to finance its trip upriver.

The 2 p.m. dedication of the site will include appearances by Marvin Kivett, director of the Nebraska State Historical Society, and Eugene Mahoney, director of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission.

Special 10 a.m. services at the Methodist church will set the mood for the day, which will include recognition of various bicentennial projects in the community. Numerous craftsmen will be demonstrating their skills throughout the day.

Violin Recital At NU Tuesday

The first in a series of free public recitals by University of Nebraska-Lincoln School of Music faculty members will feature Arnold Schatz, professor of violin, at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Kimball Recital Hall.

Performing with Schatz will be pianist Audun Ravn and cellist Priscilla Parson, both faculty members.

Schatz will play selections from Bach, Beethoven, Chausson, Debussy, Mendelssohn and Moszkowski.

When Peavey Meets in G.I., It's News

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Grand Island — It was some pretty illustrious company that dropped in on Lloyd Wheeler the other day.

Like six officers and a dozen directors of the nation's largest flour miller, the Peavey Co. A two-hour quarterly directors meeting at Riverside Country Club was the official event.

To understand all the fuss and flurry, you have to realize this was only the second such meeting ever outside home base Minneapolis. And Peavey goes back 102 years.

Prompting the corporate fly-in was the firm's $15 million acquisition last November of the farm store chain founded by Lloyd and his father Ted under the family name. Since the original 1955 Wheelers in Grand Island, 29 other retail stores have been established in Nebraska, plus 17 in Colorado, Wyoming, Kansas, Iowa and Georgia.

Part of Package
 Now running the Wheeler Division of the giant Peavey, Lloyd was an important part of the merger package. Fritz Corrigan, board chairman and chief executive officer, said "the management that comes with it" figures heavily in any Peavey merger.

"Conceptually, we have never been a company looking for turnaround situations to acquire," said Corrigan, who started with the firm's grain operation 40 years ago. "Through transactions such as that of Wheelers, we have deliberately been trying to shift our balance of earnings. But we don't do it by buying anything cheap."

As noted in the directors meeting, the shift within the firm's four-group structure was more significant than the "slight earnings increase" over the previous fiscal year. Agricultural profits accounted for 55% of pretax earnings, compared to 60% last year, while consumer foods and the retail group (including Wheelers) zoomed from 12% to 31%.

Performance Keys
 The Wheelers merger, along with a strong building supply market, were cited as main factors in the retail group's performance. Corrigan said the change in pattern added strength to a company that until recently

At a press conference, Corrigan and President William G. Stocks declined to make specific predictions about further expansion in Nebraska. But they noted that the company will be "constantly on the lookout for other opportunities here."

Of 4,800 employees in its overall operation, Peavey has some 500 in 35 Nebraska communities. The annual payroll in the Cornhusker State exceeds $3.5 million.

Visited Thursday, in addition to the Wheeler store and offices, was the firm's 1.25-million-bushel grain elevator at nearby Kearney. Since its acquisition in 1966, that operation has quadrupled in volume.

3 Branches
 Peavey's Commodity Service

Division has three of its 27 branches at Lincoln, Gering and Elkhorn. They provide brokerage services for all commodities traded on U.S. futures markets.

Northwest Fabrics, another retail activity of the company, has one store in Lincoln and three in Omaha among its total of more than 50. Another well-known line of products, ranging from croissants to frozen baking doughs, is marketed under the Brownberry Ovens label.

Exporting comparatively little grain in the past, Peavey expects to gain substantially with the anticipated 1978 completion of an export grain elevator and docking facilities at New Orleans. The installation will increase the firm's grain-handling capacity about 120 million bushels annually.

Statistics Cited
 Although business was secondary as some 150 area community leaders attended a dinner at Stuhler Museum, Peavey did manage to drop a few further statistics on its progress. It is among the nation's 10 largest grain merchandisers and had sales of $506 million last year.

Following Thursday's quarterly meeting, net earnings of $13,645,000, or $2.73 a share, were announced for the fiscal year ending July 31. This compares with earnings of $15,203,000, or $2.68 a share, for the previous year.

In the fourth quarter, earnings were $3,293,000, or 58¢ a share, on sales of $125,467,000. For the same period a year ago, Peavey earned $3,233,000, or 57¢ a share, on sales of $105,682,000.

5 Named to Special Ed Council

Five persons have been appointed to the Special Education Advisory Council of the State Education Dept.

New on the board are James Jacoby, Blair; Tom Gardner, Omaha; Fred Rickers, Wayne; Margaret McIner, Falls City; and Larry Nedrow, Lincoln.

The group represents parents, handicapped persons, government and social service agencies, schools and the public at large. It advises the department and State Board of Education on special education policies, legislation, diagnosis and regulations concerning the handicapped.

Don Stroh, Millard superintendent of schools, is chairman. About 25 persons are on the full committee.

Warnings Will Be Seen as Well as Heard

Washington (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has ordered television stations to transmit all emergency warnings visually as well as vocally so hard-of-hearing persons will be informed. The commission said a 1980 notice requesting TV stations to broadcast such warnings visually had brought only a limited response. The action was requested by organizations representing the deaf.

Cement Surf Summer

Kids on Skateboards Everywhere

By Phil Sandlin

Associated Press Photographer

It's been a summer of cement surf and skateboards. Kids on skateboards everywhere.

Some on sidewalks Others shooting out dangerously from where you'd least expect them

In some towns riding is outlawed. In others the schools teach children the fine points.

Often, the place to go is a skateboard track like Skateboard City in Port Orange, Fla., or the Paved Wave in Cocoa Beach, Fla.

Mandatory headgear and pads help hard surface surfers fight "road rash" and "jeans burns."

Pride is the only thing that goes in a fall at the track. Manufacturers estimated summer sales of 20 million boards with fancy names like "Big Foot" and "Power Paws."

One version has a molded board and sophisticated wheel and bearing design, which facilitates stunt riding.

A decade ago a skateboard fad rolled across the nation and then disappeared over the concrete horizon. Now it's back, perhaps to stay.

What about a cement surf winter?

Well, there's at least one manufacturer turning out skateboards with ski bindings attached — just in case.

HARMONICAS

Music Lovers Stomping Feet to Sounds of 4,500-Year-Old 'Voice'

By Linda Ulrich

A Hohner harmonica tuner was picking sample reeds from the assembly line to check for trueness of pitch when an engineer visiting the German factory pointed out the job could be done with greater precision and speed electronically.

The tuner, (tuners hold the top position among harmonica craftsmen because of their perfect sense of pitch) is said to have replied "Sir, Mr. Hohner would not have allowed it — nor will we."

Then, or so the story goes, the tuner muttered as he turned away, "Ridiculous. No machine can put soul in a reed."

He's right, of course, and other than tuners, the only other way to get soul into those reeds is for people to play them.

Harmonicas are small rectangular wind instruments consisting of graduated free reeds which vibrate and produce tones when air is blown or sucked across them. They were first popularized in this country by Civil War soldiers.

Harmonica history varies according to the source consulted. But a good bet is that the harmonica was invented in 2500 B.C. when Chinese Emperor Huang Ti bound together five bamboo tubes with matching reeds which he had whittled. He called his invention the "sheng," which means "sublime voice."

Somehow the sheng made it to Germany where Christian Buschmann improved it by substituting 15 metal pitch pipes for the bamboo. But even Buschmann, who is also credited with inventing the accordion, didn't name the instrument.

Also credited with inventing the aeolina, another name for harmonica, is Sir Charles Wheatstone who supposedly did the job in 1829. And Ben Franklin got into the act in 1757 when he improved on a series of graduated glasses which were rubbed with a wet finger to produce a tone. This also was known as a harmonica.

The greatest harmonica maker of all was H. Hohner, who in 1857 made his first 650 harmonicas in Trossingen, Germany, on the edge of the Black Forest. By 1880, production hit a million annually.

In America, harmonicas fell on hard times in the 1950s with the growing popularity of the guitar.

"People were afraid to tell their neighbors that they played (a harmonica)," said Gordon Mitchell, president of the Society for the Preservation and Advancement of the Harmonica (SPA). He said SPAH was formed in 1963 in an attempt to "stop guitars from taking over the world."

The harmonica has enjoyed a resurgence among popular musicians lately.

Harmonica playing notables include astronaut Wally Schurra who smuggled one aboard Gemini VI.

Even Pope Pius XI gave the harmonica world a boost when he had one custom-made. While nothing much was recorded about his playing, his harmonica is remembered as the most expensive one ever. With the exception of the reeds, it was solid gold.

But most of the estimated 40 million harmonica players in this country achieve neither the fame nor the income of those players. Nonetheless, the advantages of choosing a harmonica as a musical instrument are obvious.

—Inexpensive — the Hohner Marine Band retails for around $6 (although if the Marine Band 5 20 reeds aren't enough for you, you can try the orchestral model which has 384 reeds and a price tag of $245).

—Portable — try putting a piano in your pocket.

—Versatile — gospel, western, pop, classical, blues and more can be played on a mouth organ.

—Easy to play — or so some people say.

O'Linda Won't Let Old Harmonica Go

At 92, O'Linda Helvey continues to do what she has always done.

She keeps a clean house, cooks and makes music. She has a fiddle, an autoharp which she plays flat on the table, a piano and a harmonica.

But first and foremost, she said, "I'm a gardener. I do like to plant things. I like to watch things grow."

"When I garden, the fiddle is forgotten."

But when kinfolk get together, she still entertains, playing her mouth harp and piano at the same time.

She remembers the old German songs her mother sang. The old-fashioned hymns, especially "Uncloudy Day," are her favorites.

Mrs. Helvey began playing the harmonica when she was five. Her first teacher in a country school near Roca gave her one and she's been playing it ever since.

"There have been years when I didn't have an instrument but someone would always get me one. 'You don't want to let that go,' they'd tell me," Mrs. Helvey recalled.

"I still think this little instrument can produce a lot of music."

O'Linda Helvey

Leroy Fisher

Mike Burdic

Leroy Fisher Blows 'Them Old, Old Tunes'

Leroy Fisher has been playing the harmonica since he was seven years old.

"A girl gave me a double reed and said, 'here's something you can play with.' I tried to play 'Home Sweet Home.' When I'd get to where I was balled up, I'd start over and work it out some other way."

Now 69 and retired after 50 years with the Burlington Railroad, Leroy is still playing his harmonica, "a common 10-hole outfit."

He doesn't know how many songs he can play but "there are oodles and gobs of 'em that I know — hillbilly tunes, fiddle tunes, anything but rock and roll. I don't care for that."

His dad played fiddle for dances and that's where he learned the fiddle tunes. He first heard "Do You Ever Think of Me" played by the Paul Whiteman orchestra on the Brunswick label in 1920.

He can play that one and "Sailor's Hornpipe," "Blue Skirt Waltz," "On the Wings of a Dove," "Red River Valley," "Dill Pickle Rag," "Try a Little Kindness" and many more. "Them's old tunes," he said.

He knows one new one, "Me and Bobby McGee."

His harmonicas are Hohners — "nothing but" — and although he has a chromatic, his favorite is a Marine Band model.

Playing a harmonica is a lot of fun, he said, but "it's just a common thing to me anymore."

Young harmonica players don't understand how he can bend notes the way he does. His answer is that he learned everything he knows about it by himself. "I'd hear a tune and then just try to play it."

Every once in a while, you'll find a tune and "the notes just don't fit. You can't play it on a harmonica," he said.

Mike Burdic 'Sings' Simple, Honest Blues

Mike Burdic doesn't know how he makes music but "blues are the only kind of music I know."

"The reason I play blues is that it's simple. It's not easy but it's simple — and honest. You don't have to wear purple underwear to play it," he said.

Some of the harmonica players he admires most are Sonny Boy Williamson, Big Walter Horton and James Cotton, but Burdic adds, "I like them all."

He plays mostly Chicago Blues, the style of music originated by players who were first country blues musicians but moved to Chicago because it was the only place to go if you wanted to make money playing the blues, he said.

Like many blues players, Burdic doesn't read music and has no formal music training. "I can't tell you what notes I'm playing but I know I can play," he said.

Burdic, 27, was a road manager for a band and as a result of that experience decided the harmonica was the easiest instrument to play.

"The only way to learn to play one is to practice," Burdic said. "I was God awful for a long time."

He prefers practicing in jam sessions by picking a key and improvising.

"It's hard to teach them," he said. "You just have to work at it until you hear it."

To play the blues it is important to break the harmonica in, he said. He soaks the instrument in water, which swells the wood, and then even up the mouthpiece with a razor blade.

When the respected blues harpman Big Walter Horton heard Burdic's style, he told Burdic never to come down in his neighborhood and play. Burdic tells the story on himself with a smile.

Blues Made Good Sound Better

I played with Little Walter seven and a half years, from 1952 to 1960... It was an amazing thing what that cat could do with a harmonica. We used to be on the bandstand and people would come up and open up his hand to see what he had in there to make that beautiful sound. —Luther Tucker.

Although all kinds of music have been played on the harmonica, (called "French harp" or more commonly just "harp" in the blues), blues harpmen stand out as innovators in their use of the instrument...

George (Bullet) Williams who played harp in the late '20s is believed to be the first to use the harmonica as a solo instrument.

Little Walter, who played with Muddy Waters for several years, is credited with being the first to record using amplified harmonica.

Harp bluesmen also are noted for playing "cross harp." "Straight harp" is playing the instrument in the key of the song, while cross harp is playing the harmonica in a different but complementary key to the song.

Another unique feature of harmonica music as played by bluesmen is "bending" notes. Since there are no natural sharps or flats in the harmonica, the pitch of the note is "bent" or flattened by a particular way of sucking air across the reed.

But more than anything, blues musicians are noted for their creativity and skill in improvisation. Many of them cannot read music. The blues, says Johnny Shines, "are not wrote, the blues are lived."

And when harp bluesmen play, they simply blow what they feel.

Breast-Feeding Seeing Rebirth; Embarrassment Stigma Fading

"Breast-feeding is a simple, normal function — a natural system of supply and demand that best serves mother and baby... Breast-feeding has not become complicated, only our attitudes toward it have created problems."

—LaLeche League publication

By Debbie Murphy

For thousands of years the only practical way to feed a newborn child was to breast-feed it. There were no plastic or glass baby bottles or prepackaged formula.

Experts on breast-feeding speculate that somewhere along the line it became fashionable among the upper classes to bottle-feed babies and the trend caught on.

In recent years, however, there has been a reversal of this movement, with more women returning to breast-feeding infants.

As Pat Bouse, instructor of local LaLeche classes put it, "It's more vague to breast-feed a baby now than it is not to."

The Pros

Why should a mother breast-feed her baby? Melanie Ways, a certified representative of LaLeche League — a breast-feeding advocacy group — said, "It's important for a baby to develop a trusting relationship with one person. That person can best develop that trust through breast-feeding."

She added, however, that because a mother bottle-feeds a baby doesn't make her a bad mother.

"She can still meet the emotional needs of the child," Mrs. Ways said.

"It's just that we feel it is easier to do that if the baby is breast-fed."

Emotionally, Mrs. Ways feels breast-feeding is beneficial in building a bond between mother and child. During feeding sessions the mother must cuddle the baby and have greater skin contact with it than she might if she were bottle-feeding.

Material prepared by the Lincoln LaLeche League explains, "Babies need skin contact to survive. It's almost impossible for the nursing mother to avoid this, though it's unusual for the bottle-feeding mother to expose skin of chest and stomach when she gives a bottle."

Emotional Bond

Besides the emotional bond, Mrs. Ways said there are many practical reasons for nursing a baby.

"Breast milk is especially designed for infants," she said. Literature from LaLeche League further explains that mother's milk is nutritionally balanced and contains a number of immunizing properties that help keep the baby healthier.

"The supply adjusts to the demand and there's no bother with heating formula and cleaning bottles. And the milk is always the right temperature," she added.

Besides the natural properties which make it healthier and easier to supply to the baby, the mother's milk is also economical.

Mrs. Ways figures approximately $40 a month could be saved by not having to "buy bottles, formula, and baby food. "And who's to say how much time you save by not having to mess with bottles and formulas."

There are many reasons a woman may not want to breast-feed her baby, but few medical reasons why she cannot contend Mrs. Ways.

"A mother shouldn't nurse if she is receiving radiation treatments, if she is on medication that is harmful to the child..." she said.

Many of the reasons mothers don't wish to breast-feed are physical. "They think that by breast-feeding a baby they won't be able to go anywhere," Mrs. Ways said. "There's nothing easier than picking up the baby and leaving. You don't have to take along bottles and formulas — just yourself and the baby."

Lifestyles

She added that just having a child will change a couple's lifestyle and limit, to some extent, their previous activities. "But breast-feeding won't be any more limiting," she said.

Others are afraid they will lose their figures. LaLeche advises that the baby's sucking produces contractions which help get the body back into shape faster.

While the league believes sagging breasts are not caused by breast-feeding but by pregnancy in general, some women do feel that as the months go by firmness also goes.

"Done properly physical breast-feeding problems can be kept to a minimum," said the league representative.

On the other side of the issue, however,

De Etta Moss and son Jonathan

Nursing Adopted Baby Is Possible

De Etta Moss is a nursing mother. The big difference between her and other mothers of newborn infants is that the son she breast-feeds is adopted.

The decision to breast-feed son Jonathan was an easy one after she learned it was possible for a woman to produce milk even if she has not just given birth to a baby.

"I had wanted to breast-feed our second child and was planning to. However, it was stillborn," Mrs. Moss said. Her daughter now 9, was not breast-fed "because I went back to work six weeks after she was born. I'm sorry now I didn't do it with her."

She read in a Reader's Digest article about women nursing babies that were not their own and contacted the Lincoln LaLeche League to see if the information was indeed true.

Mrs. Moss also talked it over with her doctor who "was for me breast-feeding our adopted son."

The time between her decision to breast-feed an adopted child and the time the Mosses received their son was so close that she did not have time to

Boehmer Has Found Success

By Linda Ulrich

When Larry Boehmer invited well-known Chicago bluesman Luther Allison to play at the Zoo Bar he began with an apology.

"Well, it's not much. Do you think you can play here?" Boehmer asked Allison. Allison walked through the place and started laughing. "Man, it's just like Chicago, just like the clubs I was raised in. We're going to have a good time here," he replied.

Boehmer, part owner and manager of the Zoo, tells the story with obvious pleasure, because it is, for him, an indication of success.

Place for Art

"My job," he says, "is to give musicians a place to present their art."

The Zoo is "an effort at an art form — instantaneous music art. I try and avoid commercial music. I want the Zoo to be in a sense, an old-fashioned honky-tonk."

He also wants it to be "terribly congenial. We want everyone to get along and we flat out expect it. The Zoo is a working place for musicians and the audience must be considerate."

Blues is immediate, depends on emotions and on audience rapport, he said.

Boehmer's bar — and his philosophy behind it — are unique. "Nobody books bands like I do. I book basically what I want to hear myself, not what music sells the most beer." So although Lincoln is 550 miles from Chicago, every three weeks or so, Chicago bluesmen drive here to perform.

But Boehmer's unique booking philosophy is not without unique problems.

Getting Here

Sometimes a blues band can't come, because none of the members have a car that will make the trip.

Sometimes a musician can't come because he can't get away from his day job or because he's not physically strong enough or because he's drinking too much, Boehmer said.

But, when those factors aren't operating, "the band you hear in Chicago is the same one you hear here," Boehmer said.

"By and large the bluesmen we get are poor and struggling, the old masters that can't get work in Chicago," he added. "One of the really interesting ones is Magic Slim. He's been playing in Florence's in southside Chicago for seven years and it makes the Zoo look refined — and clean."

The bluesmen coming to Lincoln are "people I've idolized for 15 or 20 years. Now, they're not just idols, they're friends," he added.

First Blues

Boehmer first heard the blues in Little Rock, Ark., when he was six years old and fell asleep at night listening to a radio station out of Shreveport, La.

"They played Muddy Waters a lot. The blues was just a sound, that stayed with me. I didn't know what it was. I was raised on a farm by Pawnee City and I didn't know it was called the blues until I was in college but it's always been a sound that knocked me out."

"It's a strong reaction, a gut reaction."

He began his association with the Zoo when he was working on his master's degree in art at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and he started slipping blues 45s on the jukebox.

His idea of bringing live rhythm and blues and jazz here became a reality when Bob Riedy, who has his own band and also books other blues musicians, agreed to play at the Zoo.

"It was instant karma," Boehmer said. "It was funky enough that the musicians felt comfortable and the audience here was starved for that kind of music. The vibrations were real good."

Nursing Baby 'Right Choice'

prepare herself for the nursing experience as adequately as she would have liked.

"During a normal pregnancy, a mother who wants to breast-feed usually does some exercises to toughen the area, but I didn't have time for that type of preparation," she says.

Since the baby's sucking eventually produces milk in the mother, Mrs. Moss had to use a "Lact-Aid" kit to supplement until her own milk "let down."

The kit contains plastic sacks of formula which are heated in boiling water then hung on an elastic cord around the mother's neck. A connecting tiny plastic tube runs from the sack and is placed through the nursing bra next to the mother. When the baby suckles he not only stimulates the mother's milk production but also gets nourishment.

The supplement is used anywhere from two to six weeks depending on the time it takes for the mother's milk to be produced, Mrs. Moss said.

Her own milk came in about two and a half weeks after she started nursing the baby.

"You have to really want to do it," Mrs. Moss added. "For the first few weeks it's quite painful. The pain is enough to make a lot of people not want to continue, but it's worth it," she said.

The decision to nurse her adopted son was easy. "It makes me feel much more like his mother. I just feel so close to him."

She added she couldn't have done it without the support of her doctors, family and the LaLeche League.

"My husband, Ted, supported me on the decision to breast-feed Jonathan. I told him I didn't think I could do it if he wasn't for it," Mrs. Moss said.

The entire family has pitched in to make the newcomer welcome and the extra help has been a big bonus for Mrs. Moss, since she is adjusting to her new role as nursing mother.

She said she coped with a lot of the frustration a new nursing mother goes through by relying on members of the league. Frequent visits to show her how to hold the baby properly for nursing has helped her gain confidence.

"It's a terrific experience," the new mother said. "My friends thought I was crazy to want to nurse an adopted baby," she said. "But I'm doing it."

from its crib for the night feedings, or changing its diapers.

"Other mothers are afraid of failure. Breast-feeding is a really giving relationship," Mrs. Way said.

"If women are uncomfortable or continually nervous about nursing their baby, that discomfort could be passed on to the child," one doctor said.

Other women are embarrassed to nurse in front of family members.

The league believes part of the reason many women experience embarrassment or nervousness is because they haven't been exposed to breast-feeding in general.

some women say the fullness of their breasts during nursing is uncomfortable. As one woman put it, "For women who are well-endowed before pregnancy, during nursing they may feel bigger than what they'd see in a Playboy magazine. For some women that may be as embarrassing as it is uncomfortable."

Emotionally, a mother may not want to nurse because she may feel it leaves the father out of the early parent-child relationship. Mrs. Ways said the father, while not being able to feed the baby, can play an equally important part in the baby's care by bathing it, getting it

s-s-stuttering

There Are No Miraculous Recoveries or Surefire Cures

By Kathy Moore

"You can cure stuttering to the degree that you can cure behavior," according to Dr. Walter Manning, speech pathologist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

"In other words, you can't cure stuttering," he said. "You can monitor it, you can teach clients to know what they're doing and hopefully you can modify that behavior," he said. "But a complete cure? Almost impossible."

Manning originally became interested in speech pathology because he was a stutterer and received therapy. It encouraged him to help others with their speech problems.

Puzzled Therapists

Manning said that over the years stuttering has puzzled therapists and the people it affected. That pause or repetition of sound before a word can turn a simple statement into an embarrassing situation.

Before therapists understood that stuttering was a behavior pattern, the problem was experimented with in different ways.

Manning said 200 years ago stuttering was often considered related to a malfunction of the tongue. In severe cases the tongue was the object of surgery or letting blood. He said there was an old Indian myth advising the medicine man to place the affected tongue through a knothole, begin chanting and pound on the tongue. The results usually changed the manner of speech, not because the stuttering had been cured, but because the tongue was damaged.

'Normal Disfluencies'

About 20 years ago, some theorized that when children were learning to speak they encountered "normal disfluencies" that parents interpreted as the beginnings of stuttering. When parents demanded the child stop the child became flustered, couldn't stop and began a pattern of stuttering.

Stutterers will go to great lengths to avoid a word or phrase they have trouble saying, according to Manning. As an alternative they may say another word or preface remarks with "Uh Uh" before beginning the sentence.

Manning remembers one student who was asked by his teacher what grade he received on a test. The student had gotten 90%, but couldn't get those words out. He tried "80" but that word got stuck in his throat too. The student finally said "70." He had lowered his grade by 20 points to avoid stuttering.

Psychological Problem

Manning said that most authorities recognize stuttering as a psychological as well as speaking problem. He said they are concentrating more on changing the behavior, rather than on how it began, as they might have 20 years ago.

Getting temporary fluency for a stutterer is not difficult to accomplish, according to Manning. He said there are several ways to do this, but the problem is usually more complex.

Some methods of temporary fluency he uses to stop stuttering include getting the patient to sing or have him tap as he talks.

Manning said the two techniques in this week's "Parade" magazine are modifications of past tries at curing stuttering. "They may establish temporary fluency, but I would hesitate to call them cures," he said.

Metronome Can Be Crutch

The use of a miniature metronome, placed in the ear, has been introduced before, according to Manning. He said one of the problems has been that the rhythmic ping is so loud in the patient's ear that he can't hear when people are speaking to him. "It could become a big crutch," he said.

The other theory, developed by Dr. Martin F. Schwartz, seems to Manning to be "not very soundly based or supported." It stresses the unlocking of the vocal cords by exhaling and letting the air flow directly into the first word, phrase or sentence to be spoken. Manning especially questions the part of theory that states the tendency to lock vocal chords is inherited. "It is not very well supported," he said.

Manning contends that therapy should concentrate on the patient modifying his own behavior. It is a long process and Manning said he never suggests miraculous recoveries or surefire cures.

Therapy for stuttering at the University of Nebraska Speech and Hearing Clinic usually begins on a three-weekly basis. After the primary behavior is identified (blocking out words a "Porky Pig" stutter) they work on secondary behaviors. Does the head jerk or eyes blink?

Facing The Real World

After the first few sessions, the therapist and client "head for the real world." This includes walking downtown or on the UNL campus and preparing clients for people's reactions. When you stutter, you don't concentrate on how people are reacting, Manning said. "The majority are very understanding of the problem."

To get the client to realize this, the therapist will voluntarily stutter, stopping a passerby to ask for directions. The client observes the listener's behavior.

The ultimate for the therapist is getting clients to be "in charge." Even if they are going to stutter, it will not leave them helpless; they can continue, Manning said.

He added that with stutterers it is "realistic" to think in terms of relapses. "When that happens they must try to be their own clinician," Manning said. "Hopefully they can identify new behaviors and modify them."

Persons who have stuttering problems can contact the UNL Speech and Hearing Clinic. Manning said therapy begins after a preliminary evaluation. Fees are variable, depending on the services.

Dancing After Bridge Puts Wife in a Tizzy

Dear Ann Landers: Your reply to "Slow Boil in Boise" was off target. The woman complained because her husband was too enthusiastic about his weekly duplicate bridge games. The part that bothered her most was the social hour after, with live music and dancing. He often got home at 2 a.m. — or later.

You advised the suspicious wife to go to the games with her husband and take along a good book to keep herself occupied while he "did his number."

You should have told her to stay home with the book until 11:30, then join him for the dancing. A man who has been married for 35 years doesn't need a babysitter. What's more, the wife would look out of place with her book and her husband would be embarrassed by her obvious attempt to keep an eye on him.

It's pretty silly, really. How much fooling around can a man do while he is playing duplicate bridge?

Woman's Editor,
Fremont (Neb.) Tribune

Dear W. Ed: Your point about the silliness of the situation is valid, but if wifey showed up at 11:30 p.m. for the social hour it would look as if she came to police the action. If she arrived with him (even though she had a book) her motives would be less apparent.

Thanks for writing, dear. It's nice to hear from one of my bosses.

Dear Ann Landers: For goodness sake, Ann, please put this letter in the paper. My friend and I are both 10 years old. She slept over last night. This morning we decided to cook our own breakfast.

When we finished cooking, the frying pan caught on fire because we left it on the stove with a small flame under it. (Dumb) I panicked and rubbed the frying pan to the back and ran cold water on it. The whole pan blew up. The fire did go out but the kitchen was filled with black smoke. We were scared to death my mother would find out and never let us cook again. What should we have done to keep the frying pan from blowing up?

Still Shaking

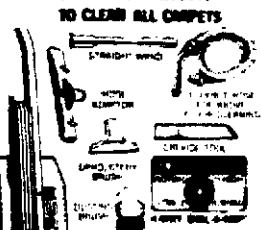

Dear S.S.: When grease catches on fire the best thing to do is throw salt on it immediately. This puts out the flame at once and there is very little smoke.

You're lucky you didn't burn down the block!

2 New Kidney Units Given St. E by IOF

Two new kidney dialysis machines are being made available at St. Elizabeth Community Health Center thanks to the efforts of the Independent Order of Foresters (IOF).

This brings the total units to four for chronic patient care and one for acute patient needs. Jack Stiles, hospital administrator, said the units now serve 13, but that figure fluctuates from week to week. The average dialysis treatment takes four to six hours with visitations two or three times a week.

Purchase of the new additions is financed through IOF contributions of $10,533. The long fund drive by the 2,500-member fraternal organization involved several projects, including collecting aluminum cans, a card raffle and collecting junk for resale.

Richard Schweitzer, chief IOF ranger, said, "We do sincerely hope that through our efforts many lives will be saved."

In Lincoln, St. Elizabeth is one of two hospitals offering dialysis treatment. The other is Veterans Hospital.

Nurse Gail Kohtz sets up a kidney dialysis machine at St. Elizabeth Community Health Center.

At 90 Forburger Has a Lot to Remember

By Betty Stevens

Clarence Forburger will be 91 next month and claims his memory is pretty well shot.

But that's only half right.

Forburger is a little hazy on current names and dates, but back a ways, Forburger can remember lots of things.

Like living in a house "in the country near what is now 30th and Holdrege, with the closest neighbor a mile away. And when he was three years old his mother calling him to the window to watch the great snowstorm — the blizzard of 1888.

He remembers well going to work for his father in a stone quarry at the age of 15. His tools were a five pound wooden mallet and chisel. He worked six days each week for 50¢ a day.

One of the first stone cutting jobs he tackled was for an addition to the State Penitentiary, he said.

That same year he remembers going with his father to hear William Jennings Bryan (Forburger calls Bryan "Bill") declare his intentions to seek the Democratic nomination for the presidency.

"I've been a Democrat since, but can't vote for Jimmy Carter this time. I've got to go with experience."

Carter's just a young upstart with too many crazy ideas. You got to think bigger thoughts than he does — worldwide thoughts. Too late to be self-contained, Forburger said.

He remembered with a laugh that the newspaper Bryan published was called "The Commoner" which local Republicans promptly dubbed "The Cow Manure."

Forburger said his father started in the stone business "before Portland cement was available for mortar." The elder Forburger used to burn limestone and mix the residue with sand from the creek bed for mortar.

His mother, he said, was a direct descendant of Commodore Matthew Perry.

Forburger built the stone business into a corporation that operated in three states. When he was 60, his sons gave him a two-passenger Cessna which he learned to fly to cover his far-apart quarrying operations.

Forburger said he has sold his stone company now (at 90 on a 10-year contract!) because his eldest son, John Casper, who was supposed to take his place as head of the firm, died in 1959.

Forburger says he now "Does nothing as hard as I can," and doesn't plan to get old. "My Swiss grandmother lived to be 105. I expect to do likewise," he said.

Married four times, Forburger said getting married was the most fun he ever had. He never took a vacation, and the closest he ever came to it was a stone cutter's convention in Atlantic City, N.J. He can't remember when that was, but knows it was during prohibition because they brought their own booze.

For his 91st birthday he plans to drink a thimble-full of whiskey. "My mother would spank the hell out of me if I even mentioned beer. She was a prohibitionist, you know."

Teatime Special With Traditional Tea Cozy

By Phyllis Fiarotta

Many countries take their tea seriously. Teatime is the time of day when work stops and the body is put to rest for awhile. Tea is nature's relaxer. Traditions attached to tea are as varied as the types of tea.

The Irish treat their teatime as a special occasion. The traditional tea cozy was originally made of scrap tweed cut from worn-out garments.

The cottage cozy basically follows the traditional shape shown. Applied and embroidered features can be very simple or very elaborate.

1. The cozy should be large enough to comfortably fit over your teapot. Although the cottage cozy is designed to fit over the short, squat teapots used in Ireland, it can be made taller to slip over larger pots.

2. Cut two house shapes from a tan or grey fabric. They should extend beyond the spout and one inch beyond the handle and should be high enough to cover the pot.

3. Cut two roof shapes from a darker color felt than the one used for the house. They should be as long as the house shapes but not quite as high. The sides are slanted starting at the bottom corners.

4. Cut two more of each shape from the same felt or from fabric lining. This will add body to the cozy.

5. Sew each roof shape to a house shape. Do the same with the lining shapes.

6. On one assembled house shape sew scrap fabric windows and center a door. Embroider a roof design and simple flowers along the bottom edge. You can also add embroidered detail on the windows, door, or even add a fieldstone design. Decorate the second assembled house shape, omitting the door.

7. Place a decorated house shape on top of an assembled lining, right sides facing. Sew together along the sides and bottom leaving the top of the roof unsewn. Do the same with the remaining shapes.

8. Turn the fabric of each completed shape inside out.

9. Place a thin layer of cotton or polyester stuffing in each completed shape.

10. Sew the tops closed

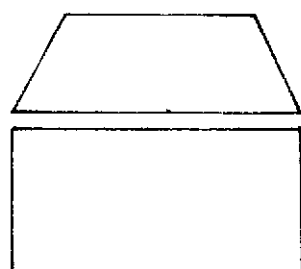

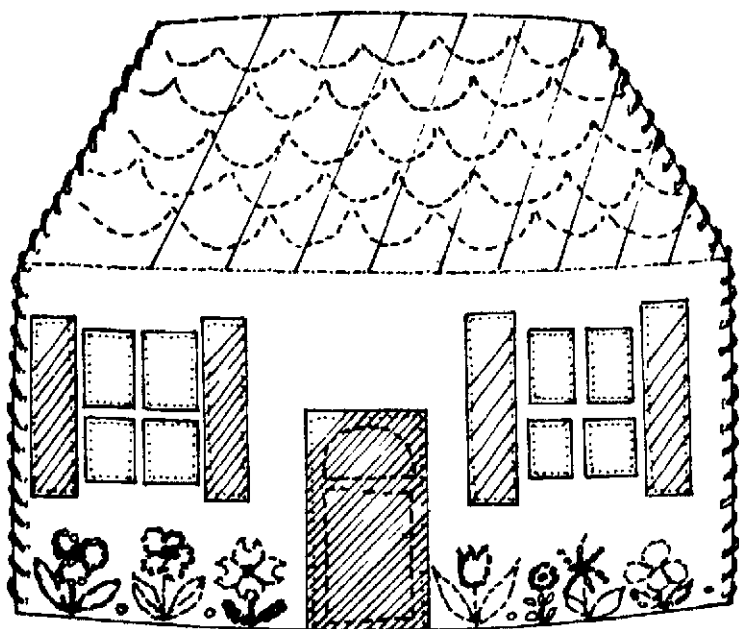

11. Place the two sides of the house together, right sides facing.

12. Sew the two shapes together along the roof only. Flip the sewn shapes over to expose the appliques.

13. Sew the remaining sides of the roof and the house with a whip stitch. This is an outside stitch going at an angle.

14. Although the colors suggested are in the grey and brown tones, you can make a colorful cozy using bright shades of felt.

Ethnic Crafts Still Thrive in America

Phyllis Fiarotta is author of the column "Leisure Crafts" which appears above in today's edition of The Sunday Journal and Star.

By Jeanne Lesem, UPI

Don't try to tell Phyllis and Noel Fiarotta the United States is a melting pot.

Their recent two-month cross-country tour researching for a book about ethnic crafts proved just the opposite. This sister-brother team found the nation chockablock with craftspeople of many heritages keeping alive the customs of their antecedents.

One crafter was in their own home town, West Orange, N.J. She is Barbara Lyons, secretary to a New Jersey senator. Miss Lyons makes felt paintings, a modern interpretation of fabric painting. The latter was developed by Irish immigrants, who pasted scraps from worn-out clothing on larger pieces of used fabric.

In Key West, the Fiarottas received a lesson in shellwork from a restaurant waitress, a descendant of English pirates who settled the Florida Keys in the 1700s. The settlers, called conchs for the shellfish of the same name, made boxes, lockets and other decorative articles from shells collected on local beaches.

"The conchs have kept their community intact," said Fiarotta. About 200 of their descendants still live in Key West.

Miss Fiarotta said her brother does most of the writing for their books and she illustrates them. Both work on crafts. Their latest is the You and Me Heritage Tree (Workman), a how-to book for children.

Visiting a fair in Eastern Pennsylvania, they admired valentines made by a technique called pin-pricking. The Amish who were exhibiting the cards were not eager to talk, Miss Fiarotta said, but a young Amish teen-ager did. She told how the cards are made, and said they are exchanged not just by sweethearts, but by friends and relatives in much the way that Christians of all faiths exchange Christmas cards.

In Chatham, N.Y., they found a recent Swedish immigrant with a Danish husband who is rearing their children in Swedish traditions — including the making of cornhusk dolls.

"They were originally made in straw, but it is difficult to get and work with straw here," said Miss Fiarotta. It's interesting to see how each crafter adapts his craft to the materials at hand, she said.

Take patchwork dolls, several of which appear in the Fiarotta book. Indian tribes in both Florida and Canada have made them since the early days of fur trading, when they used scraps of fabric, leather and fur left over from bartering.

The Fiarottas have several ways of tracking down esoteric crafts and craftspeople. They visit libraries and museums, craft shops and fairs.

Their travels showed two-way dolls such as Topsy and Eva of the Old South are not uncommon. In Pennsylvania Dutch country, they came across a doll that reversed from a girl to a pig by a flip of its skirt. In a shop in Lincoln, Neb., they saw a three-way doll, a combination of Little Red Riding hood and grandma, who turned into the wolf with a flip of her cap.

"It's amazing that this country didn't become the melting pot everybody said it was," said Miss Fiarotta. "Except for the big cities — New York, Los Angeles and Chicago — ethnic communities do remain intact. That's where you find all the native crafts being practiced."

"One of the hardest things is tracking down where groups went," said Fiarotta. "We know Scandinavians settled in Canada and the upper Midwest, and the Chinese on the West Coast and in New York City. But where are there communities of Japanese, for instance?"

Wherever they are, the Fiarottas are apt to find them sooner or later, in their on-going effort to preserve the world's handicrafts in books and in practice.

Baptists To Attend Convocation

By Anita Fussell

American Baptists are resurrecting the importance of preaching, which in recent years has been held in low esteem, as their contribution to America's Bicentennial.

Over 1,000 Baptist clergy will attend a preaching convocation this week in Providence, R.I. at the famed First Baptist Church in America.

Emphasizing "Preaching and the Continuing American Revolution," the convention was planned to "stir up the gift of preaching," according to Dr. Jitsuo Morikawa, American Baptist official and theologian in charge of the event.

"Preaching has played a major part in the shaping of American history," he said, "and must be restored to its place of centrality for the salvation of persons and renewing of American history in the coming century."

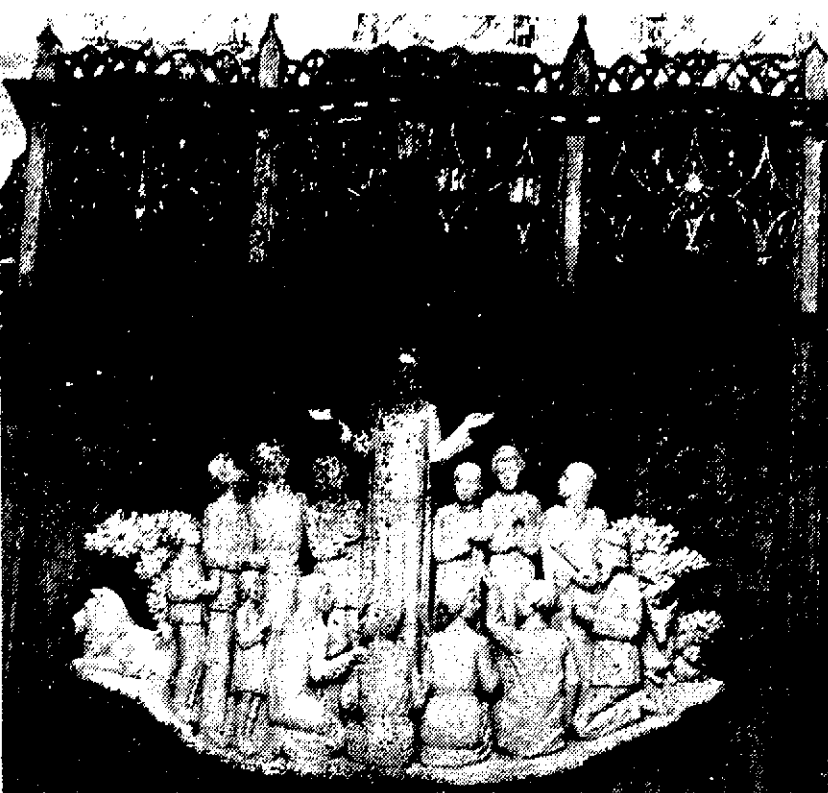

Attending the five-day meeting from Lincoln are the Rev. and Mrs. Tom Kramer of First Baptist Church. In addition to being associate pastor, Kramer is chaplain to Baptist students attending the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

He said that in his student days at North American Baptist Seminary in Sioux Falls, S.D., preaching was criticized as being an ineffective way to reach or help people.

"But I didn't really expect preaching to die out," he commented. He sees preaching as being an important means for evangelism, for helping people to grow spiritually, and for raising people's consciousness about social concerns.

At the convention, said Kramer, he will hear a variety of preaching styles from some of the world's great preachers, including Dr. C. Reye Padilla of Buenos Aires, Argentina, Prof. Juergen Moltmann of Tubingen University in Germany, Dr. Lloyd Ogilvie, Hollywood, and Dr. Jitsuo Morikawa, Valley Forge, Pa.

He also will attend a small discussion group of around 10 ministers "to deal with our own perspectives on preaching."

Jesus Christ, surrounded by people of all races, dominates the new reredos at First Presbyterian Church. Symbols of the Old and New Testament form a carved border for the central sculpture.

Faith United Methodist Church Is Celebrating

Faith United Methodist Church, 33rd and Starr, is celebrating its history today by unveiling and dedicating pictures of all its past and present ministers.

The church has had five mergers — two local and three national — as branches of the Evangelical Church united with each other, with the United Brethren and finally with the Methodist Church.

All of Faith's former pastors or their representatives will participate in the 10 a.m. dedication service.

In addition, the congregation will dedicate a new organ taken from the former Epworth Church last year upon merging with Faith Church.

The organ will be known as the Maize-Heim-Epworth Memorial Organ.

Baugh Will Speak At Liberty Lunch

The founder and national chairman of Christian Business and Professional Women will be among several national speakers at a Stonecroft Ministries Area Conference Friday through Sunday at the Lincoln Hilton Hotel.

Mrs. Helen Duff Baugh will speak at a Liberty Luncheon, 12:30 p.m. Friday, and a Spirit of '76 Brunch, 10 a.m. Saturday.

Other speakers contributing to the conference theme, "Blessed Is the Nation Whose God Is the Lord," include Miss Mary E. Clark, national chairman of Christian Women's Clubs, and R. Stanley Tam, founder and president of United States Plastic Corp., Lima, Ohio.

Established in San Jose, Calif., in 1938 by Mrs. Baugh, Christian Business and Professional Women was the beginning of Stonecroft Ministries, headquartered at Kansas City, Mo.

The nondenominational organization also sponsors Christian Women's Clubs, Business and Professional Couples Clubs, Village Missions and Rural Missions, and Friendship Bible Coffees.

Representatives of 80 clubs and councils from parts of Kansas, Missouri and Iowa are expected at the conference.

Catholics to Welcome Questions—and People

Following three weeks of door-to-door calling, Lincoln's Roman Catholic churches will hold open house next Sunday afternoon for their friends and neighbors.

Featuring explanations of Catholic beliefs and exhibits of sacred vessels and vestments used in worship, the citywide program is a spinoff of the 41st International Eucharistic Congress held in Philadelphia this summer.

Fr. Joseph Mroczkowski, pastor of St. John's Church and public relations director for the open houses, said they are designed to answer questions members of the community might have as a result of the many news reports about the congress.

The Rev. Paul Martin of Calvary Church will speak Friday, recalling memories of revival meetings from his youth. Mrs. Harold Sandall, widow of a circuit rider, will present notes on the historical church in Nebraska. The Rev. Dr. Richard Carlyon of Trinity Church will lead the singing.

3-Day Celebration

A three-day bicentennial celebration will begin Friday with an old-time tent revival on the lawn of Christ United Methodist Church, 45th and A Sts.

Following a 6 p.m. ethnic foods potluck dinner, the tent meeting will kick off a weekend of speakers, songs, historic displays, craft exhibits and food booths, and a Sunday noon homecoming picnic.

Ornamental Panel Dedicated Today

A carved figure of Christ, shown as he might have appeared preaching to the multitudes, looks down on worshippers for the first time today at First Presbyterian Church.

The sculpture is part of an ambitious, intricately carved wooden reredos (ornamental panel back of the altar), which is being dedicated today, 50 years after First Presbyterian laid the cornerstone of its present church at 17th and F Sts.

Given by Miss Viola Jelinek as a memorial to her mother, the reredos was designed and built by Arcangelo Cascieri of Boston, Mass.

The Rev. Dr. Glover A. Leitch, senior pastor, said Miss Jelinek was never a member of the church but had many friends in the congregation and enjoyed coming to the sanctuary occasionally to play the organ.

Miss Jelinek, who lived in Lincoln many years, died in California in 1973, leaving a major portion of her estate to the University of Nebraska. She also left $200,000 to Pinewood Bowl.

Her gift of $25,000 to First Presbyterian Church was specifically designated for use in the sanctuary chancel area, said Dr. Leitch.

He said Arcangelo Cascieri, Dean of the School of Architecture at Boston Architectural Center, was recommended to First Presbyterian by local architect Lawrence A. Enersen.

Resignation Is Submitted by Rev. Mr. Edds

After an eight-year pastorate at First Christian Church, 430 So. 16th St., the Rev. William Harold Edds has submitted his resignation for reasons of health.

The Rev. Mr. Edds said his resignation, effective Wednesday, will allow him to take about a year to evaluate his future work in the ministry. The Eddses will live near Owensboro, Ky., during that time.

A former assistant to the executive secretary of the International Convention of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ), Edds also has been director of church relations for Lexington (Ky.) Theological Seminary.

While in Lincoln, he was a member of the administrative board of the Christian Church in Nebraska.

Bridge

Dear Mr. Corn
Rubber bridge last rubber what should I have responded to partner's strong two diamond opening with this hand?

On Marlin Waco Texas

Answer Your hand is on the borderline between a negative response and a positive one would make a negative two no-trump response because the diamond void is a minus factor and because no suit is strong enough to bid. However I would attempt to bid vigorously later to try to show some values.

Dear Mr. Corn
We held this hand recently and went down in the atrocious contract of four spades because of a 5-1 break. How do you suggest we reach the club slam?

Answer The slam is not an easy one to bid especially since the partnership has only 24 high card points between them. An aggressive pair might reach six clubs this way.

Dear Mr. Corn
My partner of the moment irritates me by telling me how a former partner of hers would have bid my hand. Naturally, he would always reach the ideal contract on hands where I slip and stub my toes. Any suggestions?

Touch and Go San Francisco

Answer You probably have answered your own question by referring to your partner as one "of the moment." I remember a humorous story which might apply to your case.

"Adam and Eve had a ideal marriage. He didn't have to hear about all the men she could have married — and she didn't have to hear about the way his mother cooked it."

Dear Mr. Corn
I held this hand and missed an easy slam by playing the hand in three clubs. What should I have bid when right hand opponent overcalled my partner's one no-trump with two hearts?

Wasn't Forced, Corpus Christi Tex.

Answer When an opening one no-trump bid is overcalled, a simple suit bid by responder is generally a competitive effort and is not a forcing bid. To make sure that partner would bid again, you should have cue bid three hearts. This would force to game and if a good fit were found, you could then appreciate your chances for a slam.

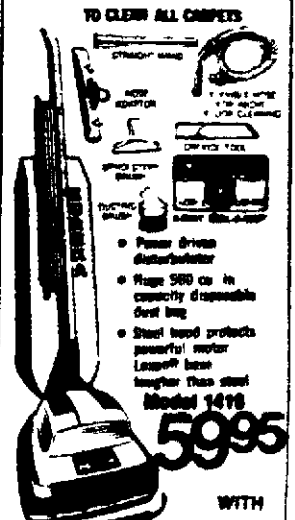

Dear Mr. Corn
What is the general meaning of the immediate double of a one no-trump opening?

Wrong Bid Brownstown Ind

Answer While some assign other meanings, the general meaning of the double is "Partner I have a balanced hand with the strength of an opening one no-trump bid myself. If you have a few scattered face cards, let's defend. If you have nothing but distribution, let's play the hand in your best suit."

Huskers Suffer Blues In The Night, 6-6

Nebraska's offensive wasn't exactly sparkling against Louisiana State Saturday night, but there were bright spots. One of the brightest was the performance of fullback Dodie Donnell (45) who rushed for 91 yards and caught a pass for 10 more for 101 total yards against the tough Tiger defense. Here Donnell gains a few yards before being brought down by an unidentified defender.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Freshman Hoppy Langley kicked a 34-yard field goal in the fourth period Saturday night to give Mississippi's once-beaten Rebels a 10-7 Southeastern Conference upset over sixth-ranked Alabama.

Ole Miss, taking advantage of Alabama's fumble-fingered offense, kept the Crimson Tide shut out until the third quarter, then had enough offense left to drive to the Tide 17 to set up Langley's field goal.

That kick handed Alabama its first SEC loss since a 17-16 defeat by Auburn in 1972. Langley kicked three field goals in Ole Miss' loss to Memphis State last week.

The Rebels scored their touchdown in the first quarter, when linebacker George Stuart intercepted a pass by Alabama's Jeff Rutledge after it was deflected by Ole Miss end Gary Turner.

Stuart tucked in the ball at the Alabama 24 and raced down the sideline to score.

Alabama, which had shown consistent gains through the middle of the Ole Miss line, seemed unperturbed until sub quarterback Jack O'Rear fumbled away the Tide's best chance for a first-half touchdown.

That chance came in the first minutes of the second period when Ole Miss' Reg Wouillard fumbled and defensive back Mike Tucker caught the ball and raced 30 yards to the Rebel 27.

But on the fourth play, O'Rear fumbled at the 10 and the rest of the half was a comedy of errors, featuring both teams.

Alabama revived on its first possession in the second half and drove 56 yards to tie the score. Halfback Calvin Calliver's running and Rutledge's passing moved the ball the 3, from where Calliver circled right end to score.

Hoosier Snyder Breaks Ankle

Minneapolis (AP) — Indiana's all-time leading rusher, Courtney Snyder, suffered a broken ankle in the first quarter of the Hoosiers' game at Minnesota Saturday.

Snyder, whose career rushing total is 2,789 yards, had carried five times for eight yards before being hurt on a tackle midway through the first period.

The 196-pound senior from Steubenville, Ohio, needed 925 yards this year to become the Big Ten's No. 2 all-time rusher behind Archie Griffin. There was no immediate word how long Snyder would be out.

Minnesota's Bobby Holmes, who led the Gophers in rushing last season with 573 yards, suffered an elbow injury.

Connors, Borg in Finals

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Chris Evert confirmed her position as the "Queen of Tennis" Saturday by defeating arch-rival Evonne Goolagong, 6-3, 6-0, to retain the U.S. Open Tennis Championship after Jimmy Connors and Bjorn Borg produced almost flawless tennis to reach the men's singles final.

The top-seeded Connors, bidding to regain the title he held in 1974, defeated Guillermo Vilas, 6-4, 6-2, 6-1, and Borg, in a repeat of the Wimbledon final, beat a strangely subdued Ilie Nastase, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

The men's final is scheduled for 4 p.m. Sunday.

In losing to Chris for the second straight year, Goolagong finished runner-up for the fourth time. Her previous losses in the Open, the only title she needs to complete a "full house" of major championship wins, were to Margaret Court and Billie Jean King.

Evert and Goolagong have contested some great matches in the past, including the final here last year and at Wimbledon in July, where Chris beat Evonne on grass for the first time, but Saturday's 52-minute match failed to excite the capacity crowd of 16,244 because Evonne never mounted a serious challenge after opening the match by winning seven of the first eight points.

Chris, whose baseline game was better suited to the windy conditions, simply did not make an error after her nervous beginning. Evonne, who now is 11-18 to Chris lifetime, was forced to play from the back, something she said she did not want to do.

Evert, 21, was a doubtful starter 11 days ago because of a freak hand injury—injured tendons in her right hand—but she swept through the championship for the loss of only 12 games in six matches to clinch the $30,000 top prize and raise her 1976 earning to $252,485 with her 101st straight claycourt victory.

In this year's two major women's events — Wimbledon and the Virginia Slims Championship — the women had played three tense sets with the score 1-1 after Chris took Wimbledon and Evonne the Slim in Los Angeles.

After she had received her winner's check, a gold tennis ball and the championship trophy, Chris said: "Evonne was a bit off today, but I'm sure we'll have some more great matches in the future."

"It's always tough against Evonne, but I'm glad she was not playing her best tennis today."

Evert chided the crowd for not rooting for her, but said, "I'd like to thank you for coming out."

Goolagong said she'd be back to try again. "Maybe I'm not allowed to go beyond the final and win it. But I'm still trying and I'll be back to try again."

The 25-year-old Goolagong started in brilliant fashion by taking seven of the first eight points in racing to a 2-0 lead, but that was the only time she was to be ahead.

Goolagong never was allowed to play her net game, nor was she permitted to display the wide range of shot-making which has charmed audiences the world over. Errors just flowed from her racquet. She tried to hit with Chris from the baseline, but in the end she'd lose the point.

Chris broke back to 30 in the third game when Evonne was into the net with a forehand, and then took 10 straight games from 3-all for the set and match.

Goolagong was reduced to the stature of such lesser players like, Mima Jausovec, Natasha Chmyreva, Sue Barker and Glynnis Coles whom Evert defeated en route to the final.

When Evert won a questionable point in the eighth game of the first set, she asked the umpire to reconsider. The point was given to Goolagong. It made no difference. Chris still held service to 15.

The massacre continued in the second set in which Goolagong won just seven points.

Goolagong has lost only four times this year in 11 finals. Each time it was to Chris Evert. Her $15,000 loser's check brought her season's winnings to $198,285.

Chris, who virtually assured herself of the world's No. 1 ranking by her lopsided victory, has now won eight tournaments and lost three finals—two to Goolagong and one to Martina Navratilova, a first round loser here.

"This has to be the best year of my life," said Chris. "Evonne really did not have enough patience today. Mentally, this was the toughest match of the tournament."

"Evonne is still unpredictable and there is no set way to play her."

Goolagong said, "I just felt flat. I wasn't moving at all well."

The popular Australian said, "Chris is a better match-player than I am, particularly in big tournaments."

Nastase, for the second straight time, was simply destroyed by Borg and he said afterwards, "I'm never coming back (to Forest Hills)."

The 30-year-old Romanian had the crowd with him, but nothing he tried could break the rhythm of Borg, who left his normal baseline game back in the locker room and attacked the net at every opportunity.

Nastase, who created such a storm earlier in the tournament with his bad court behavior against Hans-Jurgen Pohmann, never raised his voice. He went quietly.

He remained quiet when Borg, who normally accepts every decision without changing his expression, queried a call during the eighth game of the first set. The call was reversed in Borg's favor, but when the blond Swede asked the umpire "to play two" Nastase conceded the point, anyway, but deliberately damped his return into the net.

Baton Rouge, La. — Football fans across the country won't be making jokes about the Poles anymore. The jokes will be about the polls.

The Nebraska Cornhusker, ranked No. 1 in the nation by both major wire services in the pre-season polls, had to settle for a 6-6 tie against a fired-up band of LSU Tigers in Tiger Stadium here Saturday night.

LSU wasn't even picked to finish in the top half of its own Southeastern Conference race.

Even then the Huskers came out better than a lot of others chosen in the pre-season polls to be among the top ten teams in the country.

On Thursday night, Arizona State, third on one of the charts, was dumped by UCLA. Other victims Saturday were Texas, a 14-13 loser to lowly Boston College, highly regarded Alabama, a 10-7 victim of Ole Miss and Missouri, which was picked to finish fourth in the Big Eight, downed USC.

For Nebraska it was shades of the UCLA game of 1972 — the last time the Huskers opened on the road and the last time NU was beaten in a season lid-lifter.

In that one, Brian Herrera sank Nebraska with a last-minute field goal to break a tie and give UCLA a 20-17 victory.

LSU kicker Mike Conway pulled the Tigers into a 6-6 deadlock with fielders from 35 and 18 yards out.

With 40 seconds left, Conway had a shot from a distance of 44 yards. It was long enough, but barely missed to the right.

Nebraska, still trying to pull off a miracle in the closing seconds, saw three futile passes miss the mark. The Huskers were forced to punt with 15 seconds remaining.

That gave LSU one last chance — and as it turned out — a final opportunity for the Huskers.

LSU quarterback Pat Lyons' pass was picked off by Husker defensive end Ray Phillips who had dropped back into the defensive coverage.

Phillips returned to the LSU 30 and in a desperate attempt as he was tackled, latered the ball to linebacker Jim Wightman who scampered all the way to the end zone.

But the officials ruled Phillips had been run out of bounds before his lateral. The second-largest crowd in Tiger Stadium history — 70,746 — sank back into their seats, limp from the exciting finish.

"There's no question but what Phillips was out of bounds before he latered the ball," NU defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin admitted later. "But I was arguing that he was out of bounds before the clock ran out. We should have had one more play."

Though it was the first time since 1961 that Nebraska has gone three games without a win — counting two season-ending losses to Oklahoma and Arizona State to wind up last year's campaign — Kiffin feels the Huskers have a good chance to bounce back.

"We had an early tie in the 1970 season, (21-21 tie with USC in the second game) and still came back to win the other 11 and the national championships."

"I don't want to take anything away from LSU," Kiffin added, "but we didn't play a very good game — certainly not up to our capability. We're going to have to regroup and get better."

Nebraska started out like it deserved its No. 1 ranking. The Huskers took the opening kickoff and moved 65 yards in 11 plays — aided by a 39-yard pass interference penalty against the Tigers — to score on a three-yard pass from quarterback Vince Ferragamo to tight end Ken Spaeth.

The extra point attempt by NU kicker Al Eveland went awry when holder Randy Garcia couldn't corral the snap. Garcia picked up the loose ball and tried to skirt left end, but was stopped short and the Huskers then and there settled for their six-point total.

Eveland had two other kicking chances to give Nebraska a winning margin, but his 34-yard field goal try late in the second quarter sputtered low and way to the right. At the outset of the final frame he had a 39-yard try blocked. That led to LSU's tying fielder.

Though Nebraska's offense sputtered in the second half, the Huskers dominated the statistics before intermission, but couldn't get any more points on the board.

Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne, criticized by the second-guessers in past years for not being daring enough, let his troops go for it twice on fourth down in the first half. Both times they made the needed distance — once during the touchdown drive when fullback Dodie Donnell powered for nine yards and another time when Ferragamo connected with spit end Chuck Mahlo for a 15-yard gain on fourth-and-five.

But the strategy backfired twice. The first time didn't hurt. Ferragamo tried a quarterback sneak on fourth and one from the LSU 35 — and appeared to have it made the distance — before the officials moved the ball back for the measurement.

The fourth such attempt may have been a case of going to the well once to often. With fourth and three at the LSU 36 a putoff to I-back Richard Berns resulted in a five-yard loss and gave the Tigers excellent field position on their 41.

Nine plays later Conway locked his first field goal to close the gap to 6-3. Later came Conway's fielder following the block of Eveland's try and the deadlocked final score. Not to mention the heartstopping last-second attempt which missed by inches.

September 12, 1976

Nebraska piled up a commanding edge in the statistics during the first half, recording 12 first downs to just four for the Tigers. Nebraska also held a 176-67 total offense advantage.

But LSU's strong showing after intermission closed the gap. The Huskers had a slim 18-15 edge in first downs at the end and held on for a 256-229 advantage in the final total offensive figures.

After a lot of concern over possible hot, sticky, muggy weather — which usually prevails in Bayou Country at this time of year — certainly wasn't a factor.

It was a mild 76 degrees at kickoff time, with the humidity a moderate 54 percent.

The "Tiger Pit," regarded the noisiest stadium in the country, wasn't a factor either. Ferragamo had to call time out once because he couldn't make himself heard, but the Huskers never suffered a penalty because of confusion caused by the highly partisan crowd.

So, now it's "regroup time." Indiana and TCU are next. If the Huskers can't win those two, they don't belong in the top 50, let alone No. 1.

Without a major reversal, those games should give Nebraska some momentum before tangling with Miami (Fla.), in what could prove to be a tough final non-league game and the start of what promises to be a dog-eat-dog Big Eight campaign.

The chances for a high spot in the final national rankings — even a return to No. 1 — isn't eliminated, despite being seriously dimmed.

Based on what happened to some of the other top ranked clubs in the first week of action, the collegiate season is likely to continue to be an unpredictable scramble.

BOSTON (UPI) — Senior linebacker Gene Brown snuffed out a two-point conversion try by Johnny "Gold Medal" Jones Saturday night to push Boston College to a 14-13 upset victory over fifth-ranked Texas.

The Eagles had taken a 14-0 lead on a 74-yard touchdown run by Neil Green on the second play of the game and a one-yard keeper by quarterback Ken Smith.

Texas scored in the second period on a 35-yard pass from Mike Cordaro to wide receiver Alf Jackson and pulled to within a point on an 18-yard run in the fourth quarter by Jones, a member of the victorious U.S. Olympic relay team.

The Longhorns, losing an opener for only the tenth time in 54 years, elected to rush for the two-point conversion. Jones took a pitchout from Cordaro and tried to swing the right corner. But Brown, who won the starting job in the last week of practice, shouldered Jones to the artificial surface one-yard short of the goal.

Texas got a break with no time remaining on the clock when Boston College was called for roughing the passer, but Russell Ertel's 33-yard field goal was wide to the left.

The Eagles, shooting for the national prominence that has deserted them since 1942, jumped into the lead at the 50-second mark of the game. Starting on their own 23, the Eagles moved three yards on first down before Green took a handoff, swept to the right side, and cut inside the wide receiver to sprint to the goal line.

Texas lost All-America candidate Earl Campbell to a hamstring injury late in the first period and the Eagles capitalized on a Cordaro fumble at the Boston College four midway through the second period.

The Eagles moved 96 yards in 14 plays, keyed by an 11-yard pass to Buckly Goddard and a seven-yard run by Glenn Capriola that was accompanied by a personal foul call, bringing the ball to the Texas 24. Smith pushed over the goal line at 9:13 of the period.

Texas mustered its only offense of the first half late in the period, moving 74 yards in nine plays. Cordaro, on a third-and-nine situation, found Jackson in the right corner of the endzone.

The victory was considered Boston College's greatest triumph since the 1941 Eagles nipped Tennessee 13-13 in the 1940 Sugar Bowl.

At this stage of the season, the one positive factor shared by Lincoln Southeast's Frank Solich and Fremont's Jack Bryant, was that both coaches left Seacrest Field with unbeaten football teams following a 20-20 tie Saturday night before 3,400 fans.

With both teams coming off impressive first week victories, Southeast's defensive line had to respond late in the fourth quarter with a goal line stand to preserve the tie.

Statistically, the Knights should have had the upper hand on the scoreboard, holding a 304-192 yard edge in total offense and doubling Fremont's first down total of 18-9.

But the visiting Tigers weren't about to let the stats dictate the outcome as quarterback Scott Berg caught the Knight defense napping for two second half aerial scores to Tony Weinandt to go with a first half screen pass scoring strike to Ted Husar.

The Knights, who had been impressive their pass rush in a 25-0 drubbing of Northeast last week, let Weinandt in over the middle from 15 yards out to tie the game 14-14 with 3:12 left in the third quarter.

It was after an interception in the ensuing Southeast drive when Weinandt hurt the Knights the most, breaking a 37-yard post pattern touchdown as time ran out in the third quarter.

Southeast middle guard Felix White broke through to block the point-after try.

Southeast's drive stalled at midfield and the Knights were forced to punt but regained possession on an interception by Mark Lanik in Fremont territory.

It took just 5 plays for Southeast to cover the 28 yards for the touchdown as quarterback Ed Davis sneaked over from one yard out to tie the game with 5:24 remaining.

The point-after attempt by Kyle Sink was wide left, leaving the score knotted at 20-20.

Not wanting to settle for a tie, Fremont's Dave Stewart took the kickoff at the 17, moved up field to the 47 where he was apparently stopped and pitched back to Mike May who carried it down to Southeast's 33 yard-line.

With the momentum clearly in Fremont's favor, the Tigers marched to the 4-yard-line with first and goal and just over two minutes remaining in the game. Husar blasted three yards to the one, but Southeast's defense repeatedly turned back the charge despite an offside penalty on fourth down that moved the ball from the two-foot line to the one-foot line.

Husar tried the middle again and when the pile was uncovered, while Southeast's Will Hewitt held the ball out on the 10-yard-line after he had taken it away from the pile, it was determined that Husar didn't get the needed yardage.

Working from the one-foot-line, Davis got the Knights some breathing room, but the only threat was when one of his passes was just over the outstretched hands of receiver Gary Gager, who was open at the 50-yard-line.

The game ended with Davis being called for intentional grounding, but the final score held as the official ruled the game could end on an offensive penalty.

Both teams are now 1-0-1 with Southeast traveling to Ralston Friday night to test the unbeaten Rams and Fremont going to Grand Island.

Fremont — The Midland Warriors capitalized on an early Peru mistake and battled to a 17-0 victory over the Bobcats here Saturday night at Military Memorial Field.

Peru fumbled on its 35-yard-line on the third play of the game and the Warriors marched to the four in 11 plays when Midland's Dexter Brown took a pitch and zipped in to score, giving Midland a 7-0 lead.

Peru drove from its 12-yard-line to the Warrior 31 in eight plays, but two consecutive sacks by the Midland defense and an interception by John Feala halted the only major Bobcat drive of the first half.

The Midland defense, not surprised by Peru's use of the information, held the bobcats to 42 yards in total offense and just three first downs in the first half.

Midland boosted the score to 10-0 when kicker Jon Holmes booted a 20-yard field goal after the Warriors stalled on the Peru three.

Neither team's offense was able to generate any consistent drive on offense in the third quarter and it wasn't until midway through the final period that Midland threatened to score. But a fumble on the Peru nine, recovered by Bobcat Mike Hall, halted that threat.

Following a short punt, the Warriors moved the ball to the Peru 30, aided by a personal foul penalty and sophomore quarterback Garland Perry then hit Grandee West with a 30-yard touchdown pass. Holmes added the extra point for the final score of the game.

"We were kind of surprised Peru didn't come out in a wishbone offense, but we had prepared our defense for anything," said Midland coach Don Watchorn. "Maybe we shouldn't scout any more games because that might give us a certain overconfidence about somebody."

The Warriors rolled up 226 yards rushing and 110 yards passing, with sophomores Gregg Newton and Perry at quarterback for injured senior Walt Olsen.

Junior halfback Dexter Brown gained 86 yards rushing while fullback Ben Siebler rushed for 60 yards for the Warriors.

Highly-touted Iowa State transfer Todd Nelson gained 68 yards rushing for the Bobcats, who netted just 65 yards.

"Senior linebacker Doug Moeller played a great game and really sparked our defensive secondary, which had a great game," said Watchorn. "Peru has some great running and blocking backs and I'm glad we got to play them this early in the season because I don't know if our defense would have done as well against them later on."

Peru coach Jerry Joy said he was not disappointed with his club's performance, but was concerned with the lack of offensive consistency.

"We don't have much experience on our offensive line, and we kept getting beat coming off the ball," he said.

"Defensively, I thought our team did an exceptional job and even though we gave up a lot of yards, they only scored on the one fumble in our territory and a desperation pass late in the game," Joy said.

The Warriors, who have only lost two games in their last 23 outings, will travel to Indianola, Ia., next week to face Simpson College while Peru will host Tarkio College in the annual Apple Jack Bowl at Nebraska City.

AMES, Iowa (UPI) — Quarterbacks Wayne Stanley and Buddy Hardeman accounted for five touchdowns and led Iowa State to a 58-14 shellacking of Drake Saturday in the Cyclones' season opener.

In resuming the rivalry that had been dormant for 11 years, Iowa State took command from the start and scored on its first play from scrimmage before jumping to a 34-7 halftime lead. The Cyclones totaled 527 yards on offense, including 387 on the ground, and ran up their highest point total in 17 years.

Stanley, the starting signal-caller, threw three touchdown passes in a little more than two quarters of playing time while Hardeman passed for one touchdown and ran for another. Those four TD passes tied a school one-game record.

Stanley passed to Luther Blue for a 40-yard touchdown on ISU's first play of the game, hit Al Dixon with an 11-yard scoring pass late in the first quarter and buried the pigskin 26-yards to Glover Rogers for a score early in the second quarter.

Stanley threw only seven passes but completed five for 108 yards.

Hardeman threw a 32-yard scoring pass to Blue late in the second quarter and then dashed 15 yards for a score late in the third period. Hardeman had non-scoring runs of 55 and 28 yards and finished the day with 100 yards rushing in only 4 carries.

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Kansas quarterback Nolan Cromwell scored two touchdowns, set up two others and rushed for 98 yards Saturday to lead the Jayhawks to their second straight victory, a 35-16 romp over Washington State.

On its first possession, Kansas marched 79 yards in five plays with halfback Laverne Smith, who carried three times, dodging up the right side on a 60-yard touchdown run. It was his fourth longest from scrimmage.

Smith led the Jayhawks, who rushed for 467 yards, with 142 yards and left him 233 yards short of Gale Sayers all-time Kansas rushing record of 2,675.

On the second possession, Cromwell fumbled at his own 20 and Washington State tackle Terry Anderson recovered to set up the first Cougar score. Three plays later quarterback John Hopkins hit flanker Brian Kelly with a 17-yard pass over the middle to tie the game.

The Jayhawks bounced back in the lead with 7:36 left in the first period as Cromwell went around the left side on a five-yard touchdown run to cap a 75-yard drive. But Cromwell's second fumble of the period, on the Kansas 48, was recovered by linebacker Dean Pedigo to set up a 20-yard Washington State field goal, making it 14-10.

Kansas opened the game up in the second quarter. Cromwell ran 15 yards up the middle for one touchdown and reserve quarterback Scott McMichael hit tight end Jim Michaels with a six-yard touchdown pass two seconds before the half ended.

Interceptions by Steve Jones and Les Barnes set up both scores.

Kansas scored its final touchdown with 11:04 remaining after free safety Chis Golub recovered fullback Dan Doornink's fumble on the Cougar's 36. Cromwell moved the Jayhawks 64 yards in eight plays as he carried the ball for gains of 21, 15 and five yards into the end zone. But he fumbled in the end zone and tackle Lindsey Mason leaped on the ball to save the touchdown.

Washington State got its final touchdown late in the third period following a fumble near his own goal line by McMichael. One play later Doornink carried the ball in from the two making the score 28-16 and a two-point conversion failed.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Defending national champion Oklahoma overcame a sluggish first half with two quick touchdowns shortly after intermission to put down surprising Vanderbilt 24-3 Saturday.

The powerful Sooners, their wishbone attack held to one touchdown in the first two quarters, blitzed the stubborn Commodores with touchdowns on runs of 11 yards by Horace Ivory and two yards by Dean Blevins early in the second half.

Soccer-style kicker Uwe von Schanann booted a 27-yard field goal and three extra points for the Sooners.

Although Vanderbilt was picked to finish no better than last in the Southeastern Conference, its defense showed frequent flashes of brilliance, forcing Oklahoma into various mistakes.

Oklahoma scored first on a six-yard run by Elvis Peacock in the second period, but Vanderbilt came right back with a 32-yard field goal by Greg Martin, set up by a 58-yard interception return by Reggie Calvin.

The Commodores missed a scoring opportunity shortly after the opening kickoff when the Sooners' Kenny King fumbled on the Oklahoma 35, vandy drove to the Oklahoma nine but had to settle for a field goal attempt by Martin which was wide to the left.

Oklahoma got its first touchdown after Vandy's Martin Cox fumbled a punt and the Sooners recovered on the Vanderbilt three. Peacock took it over on a reverse.

The Sooners, embarrassed by only a 7-3 halftime lead over a team they were favored to beat by 26 points, opened the second half looking like their 1975 team, which lost only to Kansas in winning the national championship.

The Sooners kicked off but Vandy was able to move the ball only one yard in three plays and Mike Wright punted for just 33 yards. Oklahoma quickly moved 20 yards in four plays for the score.

Vanderbilt took the next kickoff, fumbled on its own 20 on the second play and the Sooners scored again in just three plays.

Missouri Cowboys Rally To Stop Tulsa USC

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Speedster Curtis Brown raced a kickoff back 95 yards to break a 7-7 tie in the opening quarter and contributed two other touchdowns Saturday night as underdog Missouri spoiled new University of Southern California's debut with a smashing 46-25 victory.

For this second straight season, the Tigers from Columbia, Mo., upset one of the nation's traditional premier powers in their season opener. Missouri manhandled Alabama in its first 1975 game.

Brown, a 5-11 200-pound senior who understudied Tony Galbreath last season, stunned the Trojans, who went into the game as seven-point favorites, at 9:26 of the opening quarter. He took Glen Walker's kickoff on the Missouri 5 and outraced the USC defenders, sprinting down the right sideline for the score that put the Tigers ahead to stay.

It came just 11 seconds after USC scored its first touchdown on a six-yard run by All-America tailback Ricky Bell that tied the score at 7-7.

Brown tallied Missouri's first score on a four-yard run at 5:06 in the first period and took a pass from quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz and raced it 40 yards for his third score of the night with just nine seconds left in the first half to give the Tigers a 30-10 halftime lead.

Pisarkiewicz, a senior who led the Big Eight in passing with 1,792 yards last season, passed for two other touchdowns, completing 25 and 15-yard scoring aerials to split end Leo Lewis STILLWATER, Okla. (UPI) — Cornerback Milton Kirven sprinted 23 yards with an intercepted pass to score one touchdown and recovered a fumble to set up another in a 33-21 comeback victory by Oklahoma State over underdog Tulsa Saturday.

The Cowboys, favored by approximately two touchdowns, could muster only a 47-yard field goal by Abby Daigle in the first half of the regionally televised game and Tulsa led 63 at intermission on a one-yard TD run by reserve quarterback David Rader.

Rader's score capped an 89-yard drive engineered by starting quarterback Ronnie Hickerson. Hickerson completed 26 of 40 passes for 310 yards and had three intercepted. He also rushed for 43 yards.

Oklahoma State defensive tackle Phillip Dokes sacked Tulsa quarterbacks three times for 14 yards in losses, had two unassisted tackles and five assists.

Daigle's 24-yard field goal tied the score, 6-6, midway through the third quarter and Kirven's fumble recovery on the Tulsa 20 set up a four-yard touchdown by running back Robert Turner.

On the next series, Kirven grabbed a Hickerson pass and sped 23 yards untouched to the end zone.

Running back Terry Miller scored on a five-yard run at the end of the third quarter and Turner wrapped it up with a five-yard touchdown run with 39 seconds left in the game.

Hurricane fullback Thomas Bailey scored on a 13-yard run and Hickerson threw nine yards to Marcus Hatley for another touchdown and Tulsa picked up two more points on a safety.

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI) — Kansas State's "Purple People Eater" defense, led by middle guard Theopolis Bryant, set up a two-yard touchdown run by Tony Brown and field goals of 58 and 48 yards by Bill Sinovic Saturday in leading the Wildcats to a 13-3 season-opening win over Brigham Young.

Brigham Young, in losing its fourth consecutive season opener, scored its only points with 3:03 left in the third quarter on a 23-yard field goal by Dave Taylor after a BYU drive was stopped on the Kansas State five-yard line by Bryant who batted down a Gifford Nielsen pass in the end zone.

Brown's run, with 7:22 left in the first quarter, came on the first play after Wildcats' defensive end Vic Chandler tackled BYU punter Perry Winder on the two-yard line. Winder had chased a bad snap from center Chuck Carlson.

Sinovic's 58-yard effort, the longest in Kansas State history, came after the Wildcats had held Brigham Young on downs at the KSU 32, with Bryant catching Nielsen for a threeyard loss on a fourth-and-three situation.

Kansas State's offense, held to 146 yards, then moved the ball to the Brigham Young 40 to set up the first field goal by Sinovic, who was kicking with a 25 mile per hour wind at his back.

The Wildcat defense held Brigham Young, billed as one of the top offensive units in the country, to 219 yards total offense. BYU's Nielsen, the second-leading returning passer in the nation, finished with 15 completions in 29 attempts for 142 yards, but was intercepted twice in the second half to kill BYU's scoring drives. He completed only four of six passes for 35 yards in the first half, while Kansas State was building a 10-0 lead.

Kicking Errors Kill Husker Hopes

By Bob Owens
Baton Rouge, La. — Three errors in the kicking game cost Nebraska a chance for victory over Louisiana State Saturday night in Tiger Stadium in a game Coach Tom Osborne said was "a heckuva football game in terms of effort and hitting."

The Husker coach called the 6-6 tie "very disappointing" to the players and coaching staff, but added, "They (LSU) earned a tie and could have beaten us."

The first kicking game mistake was a mishandled snap on the only extra point attempt of the game after the Huskers had marched 65 yards to score a touchdown in 11 plays right after the opening kickoff.

"It wasn't a perfect snap, but it should have been handled," Randy Garcia said of the bobbled ball that prevented kicker Al Eveland from getting the kick away.

The other two errors came on field goal attempts by Eveland. Near the end of the first half, Eveland hit a line-drive 34-yard try that went wide to the right of the goal posts. "It might have been because of a lack of follow-through," Eveland said.

The other field goal try was blocked by LSU linebacker Rusty Domingue, who blitzed through from the left side. It one was from 39 yards out.

Quarterback Vince Ferragamo held the ball on the two misfired field goals. "The ball might have been tilted to the right on the line drive kick," Ferragamo said. "Al probably just didn't get enough of his foot on the ball. A soccer-style kicker (Eveland boots them straightaway) gets more of the ball."

"Any one of those kicks could have put us over the hump," Osborne said. "A lot of things that happened in the game gave LSU a lift. LSU played a great football game, an inspired football game."

Osborne thought the defensive team played very well, but got tired in the second half. "The offense played well between the 20s," he added.

Twice in the game, Nebraska went for first downs at the LSU 35 and failed to make it. "We generally go for it if it's at the 35 or inside," Osborne said. "If its outside we punt the ball."

He said he thought about punting in both instances, but "we thought we could make a couple of yards, but we just didn't do it."

On the fourth play of the second quarter, Ferragamo ran a sneak into the line and appeared to it the first down, but when the ball was spotted he had failed to gain an inch.

With 10:22 left in the third quarter, the Huskers again went for it on fourth down and seven at the LSU 36. The pitch went to I-back Richard Berns, who was met by safetyman Mike Leonard and left end Lew Sibley.

He was thrown for a five-yard loss, one of the plays Osborne mentioned as giving the Tigers a lift.

They took over at their own 41. After an exchange of punts, they gained good field position at midfield and marched to their first field goal to trail just 6-3 with 2:42 in the third period.

The blocked field goal gave LSU the ball at its own 30 and they went 70 yards to their other three-point 15 plays later to tie the score.

Defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin said the Tigers ran a "gimmick-type offense," that won't beat people week-in and week-out."

He said, "They gave us a lot of motion and formations, more than I've ever seen done against us since I've been coaching."

His main complaint about the play of the Black Shirts was letting the Tigers complete a couple of third down passes to keep drives going.

"We didn't pressure the quarterback enough," he said. "We tried to blitz, but he had too much time to throw in the second half."

Split end Chuck Malito, who caught three passes for 42 yards, thought he was interfered with on a pass from Ferragamo early in the third quarter, but the officials didn't see it that way. It was a long throw that would have given the Huskers good field position.

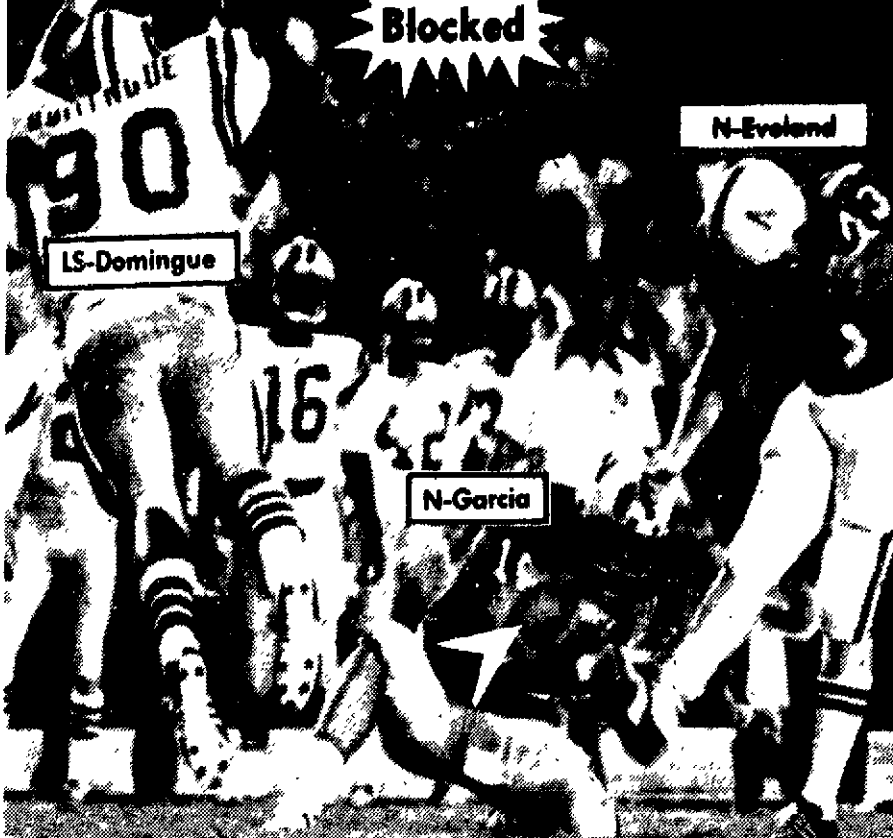

As it turned out, the Huskers had to punt and LSU drove for its first field goal.

"I thought I was held up," Malito said. "The rules say you can't be hit on the side or by a player going past you whether the ball is in the air or not."

Osborne referred briefly to the No. 1 rating in the preseason press association polls.

"It looked like two pretty even football teams playing," he said. "That No. 1 rating was put on us by the pollsters. We're going to have a good football team, but we're probably not the No. 1 football team."

Results of the first weekend of action across the country undoubtedly will cause a revamping of the ratings as the writers, as well as the coaches, go back to the drawing board.

Nebraska had a chance for three points early in the fourth quarter, but Al Eveland's (43) field goal attempt was blocked by LSU's Rusty Domingue (90). Quarterback Randy Garcia (1) holds the ball.

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — Quarterback Tommy Duniven and tailback Larry Isaac each scored touchdowns in the second period Saturday to lead Texas Tech past Colorado 24-7 in an intersectional season opener.

Isaac scored on a one-yard plunge and Duniven had a four-yard touchdown run four minutes later as the host Red Raiders ran up a 24-0 halftime lead, then held on for the victory.

Fullback Jimmy Williams scored on a 35-yard first-quarter run and Brian Hall kicked a 30-yard field goal and three extra points to complete the Texas Tech scoring.

Colorado fullback Jim Keller scored the only Buffalo touchdown on a one-yard run in the third quarter.

A season opening record crowd of 44,132 saw the Raiders intercept four passes off Colorado quarterback Jeff Austin in the first half.

On the fourth play of the game, Raider Greg Frazier intercepted an Austin aerial at the 47 and returned it to the 30 to set up the Raiders opening score. Six plays later Hall booted his three-pointer.

A second Colorado third-quarter touchdown was wiped out after fullback Tony Reed had raced 47 yards by a holding penalty.

Phil Maddox Ends Holdout

Philadelphia (UPI) — Garry Maddox signed a multi-year contract with the Philadelphia Phillies Saturday, ending an eight-month holdout.

The signing of Maddox, the National League's fifth leading hitter with a .330 batting average and 62 RBI's, leaves the Phils with only one unsigned player — Dave Cash.

Jerry Kapstein, the agent for both Maddox and Cash, said, "we're hopeful of reaching an agreement between Dave and the Phils shortly."

Chadron Falls To S.D. Tech

Rapid City, S.D. (AP) — Chadron's Bob Houston ran 7.3 and 4 yards for three touchdowns, but Chadron bowed 21-19 to S.D. Tech Saturday night in nonconference college football.

Jim Guthrie sparked Tech with a 52-yard run in the second quarter, and Tech iced the victory as Jeff Gullickson caught 13-and 11-yard passes from Randy Beck. Guthrie rushed for 150 yards in 24 carries.

Lyle Drops Isaac

UTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Ron Lyle knocked down Kevin Isaac twice in the seventh round Saturday and stopped him in a nationally televised heavyweight fight Saturday.

Isaac, 21, of New York, had been holding his own throughout the fight, exchanging jarring blows with Lyle until the Denver boxer caught Isaac against the ropes late in the sixth round. Lyle subjected the trapped Isaac to a punishing torrent of blows at the end of the sixth round.

Early in the seventh round, Lyle caught Isaac in the corner and knocked him down. Seconds later, Lyle put Isaac on the canvas again and the referee stopped the fight after one minute, 14 seconds of the seventh round.

It was Lyle's first fight since January, when he was knocked out by No. 1-ranked George Foreman. Lyle, ranked fourth by the World Boxing Association, weighed 211 pounds for Saturday's fight, five pounds less than he weighed in the Foreman fight. Isaac weighed 205.

The victory raised Lyle's record to 31-4-1. Isaac now has an 8-4-1 record in his three-year career.

In the second featured heavyweight bout, Jimmy Young battered Mike Boswell at will until the referee stopped the match at 2:34 of the fourth round. Young, of Philadelphia, ranked third by the World Boxing Association, raised his record to 18-4-3 with the win over the unranked Rochester fighter, who had not fought a match in a year.

Boswell hardly managed to hit Young with his wild, off-balance swing before the referee stopped the fight.

McClendon, LSU Show Fans New Confidence

By Randy York
Baton Rouge, La. — There were only two ways for Charles McClendon to answer his critics after the LSU football coach suffered his first losing season in 14 years — last year — beat Nebraska or tie the nation's top-ranked Cornhuskers.

Tiger football fans wanted an answer. McClendon believes they got one from "the most attentive and most dedicated football team I've ever coached."

McClendon deviated from his usual post-game script by showering and dressing before addressing the media. "I had to," he insisted. "It was a pretty torrid effort out there. We had to come so far off the map to do what we did. Whoever would have believed this other than the coaches and the players?"

Tigers Not Awed
Nebraska's ranking never awed the Tigers. They were a team with a mission. They wanted to restore confidence to a coach who has led them to 10 bowl games in 14 years and restore confidence to themselves.

"There was never any guessing in the minds of our players," McClendon said. "They've felt all week long they were going to do it. I told my wife yesterday I wasn't nervous. Their confidence rubbed off on me. Usually, it's supposed to be the other way around."

McClendon didn't bat an eyelash, answering the obvious question — why did LSU choose an 18-yard Mike Conway field goal with 7:09 left in the game instead of going for a touchdown from two yards out?

"People have a right to second guess that," McClendon said, "but our logic was simple. You get the field goal and the pressure is on them, the No. 1 team. You don't get it and you deny yourself what you've worked so hard to get."

Another Game . . .

McClendon felt "all that hard running we've done this fall has paid off. We did not run out of gas. I cannot speak for Nebraska. Isn't that something? Nebraska beat us by five (in the 1971 Orange Bowl), then by three (last year) and now zip. If only we played them again, huh?"

The former national Coach of the Year refused, however, to gloat.

"Let's give credit where credit is due," he said. "Nebraska is a great defensive football team. I don't know how they could possibly know what we were doing as much motion as we gave them. Sometimes, we even got mixed up."

McClendon couldn't resist citing the statistics. "Their defense is great, but so is ours," he said. "Our pass defense gave up only 125 yards . . . to Nebraska . . . that's perfect . . . that's just perfect."

LSU's Crunch Bunch

Nebraska has its Black Shirts. LSU has its Crunch Bunch. "That's the name we gave ourselves three weeks ago," offered linebacker Rusty Domingue, who blocked a 39-yard field goal attempt by

"We're a closer team this year," Domingue said. "Our whole defense is together. We've worked hard for this moment. We've worked hard to prove Nebraska is human, just like everyone else."

Jon Streete, LSU's middle linebacker-nose guard, said it took the Tigers a half to solve Nebraska's offense.

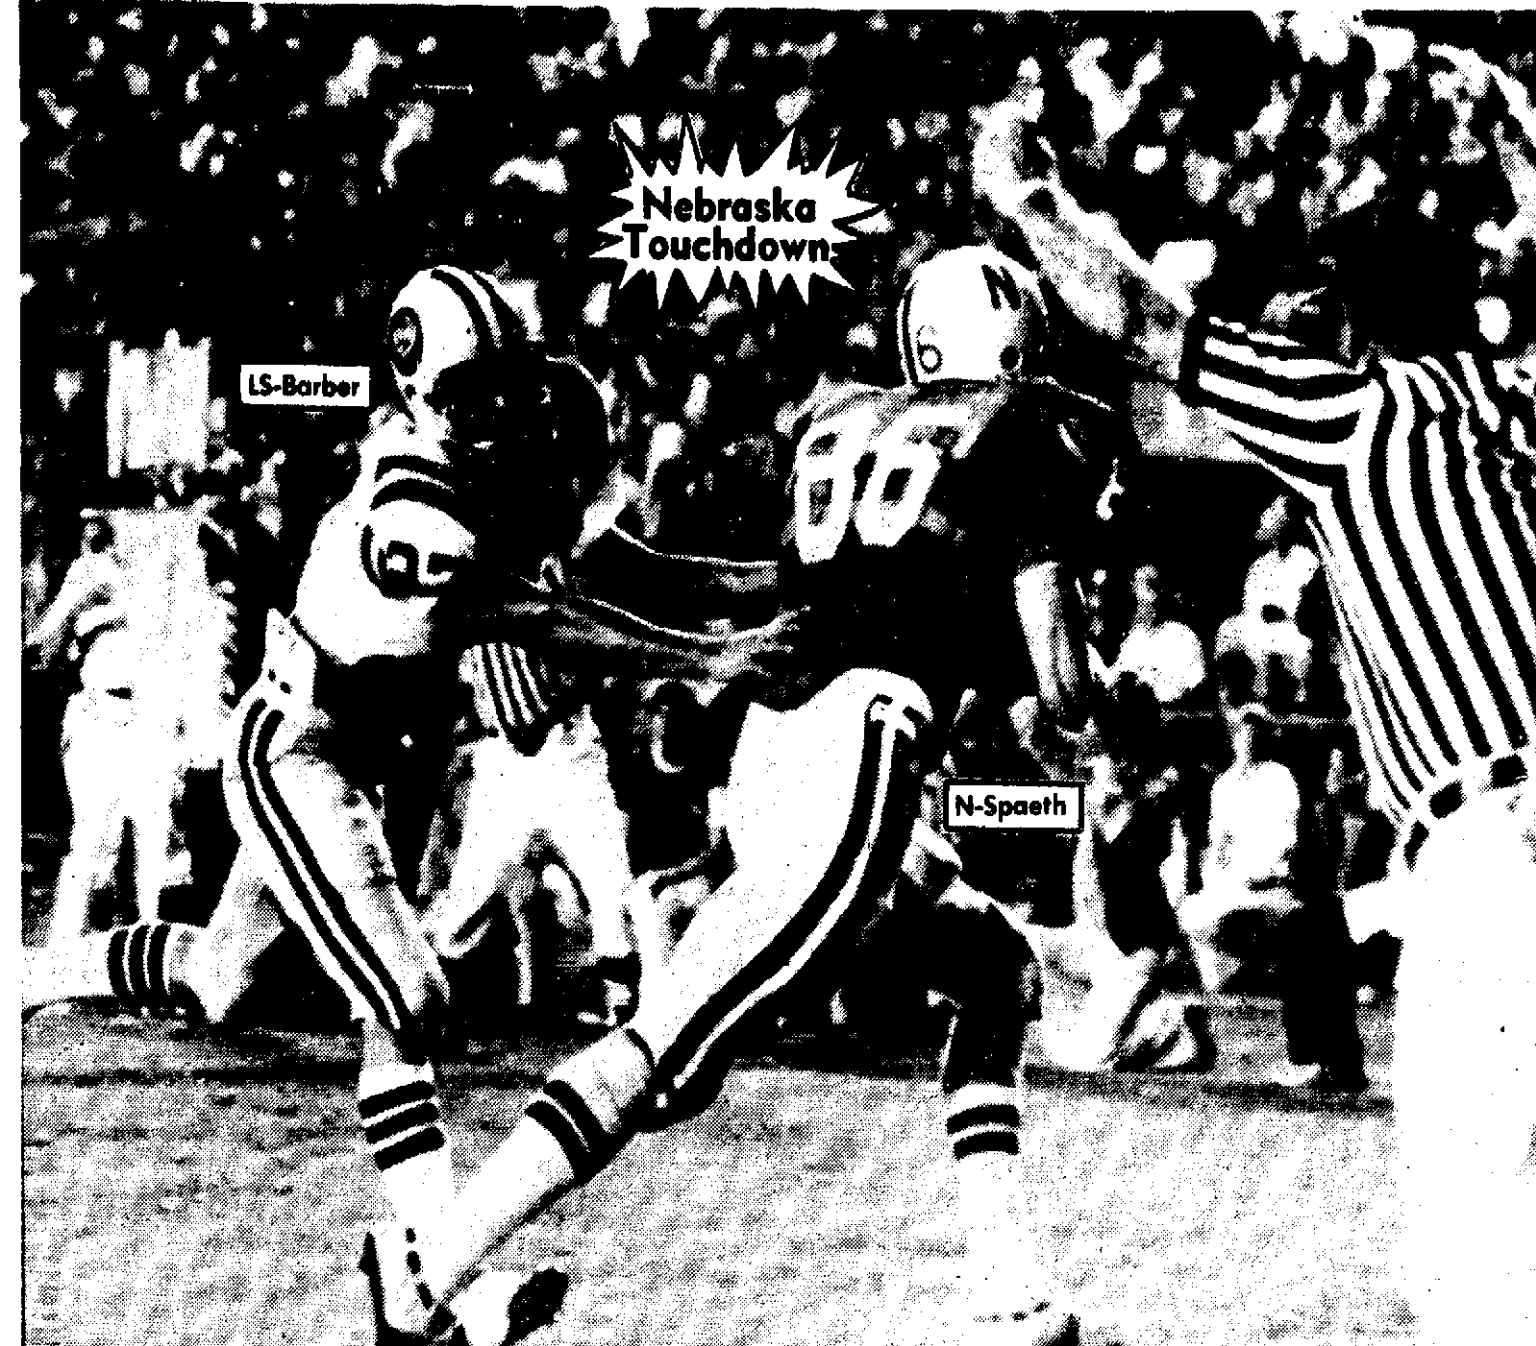

"Nebraska's traps and draws killed us in the first half," he said. "Then we went to a five-man front with me as the noseguard. We just got to 'em quicker and covered up for each other. Personally, I thought Nebraska's offensive line was better last year when they were more inexperienced."

LSU quarterback Pat Lyons also said adjustment was the key to the Tiger offense.

"We were using great plays in the first half, but just couldn't string them together or convert on third downs," he said.

Tailback Terry Robiskie, who rushed for 75 yards on 16 carries, said "I don't know what happened to Mike Fultz there when he went out in the fourth quarter. We have the greatest respect for him. His leaving definitely inspired us."

McClendon said, "I'll remember that last drive of ours (for the field goal) for a long time. I call it sheer guts with conditioning the biggest part of it. We took the fight to them. We came off the ball quicker. When Fultz — a definite all-American — has to come out of there, we must be doing something right."

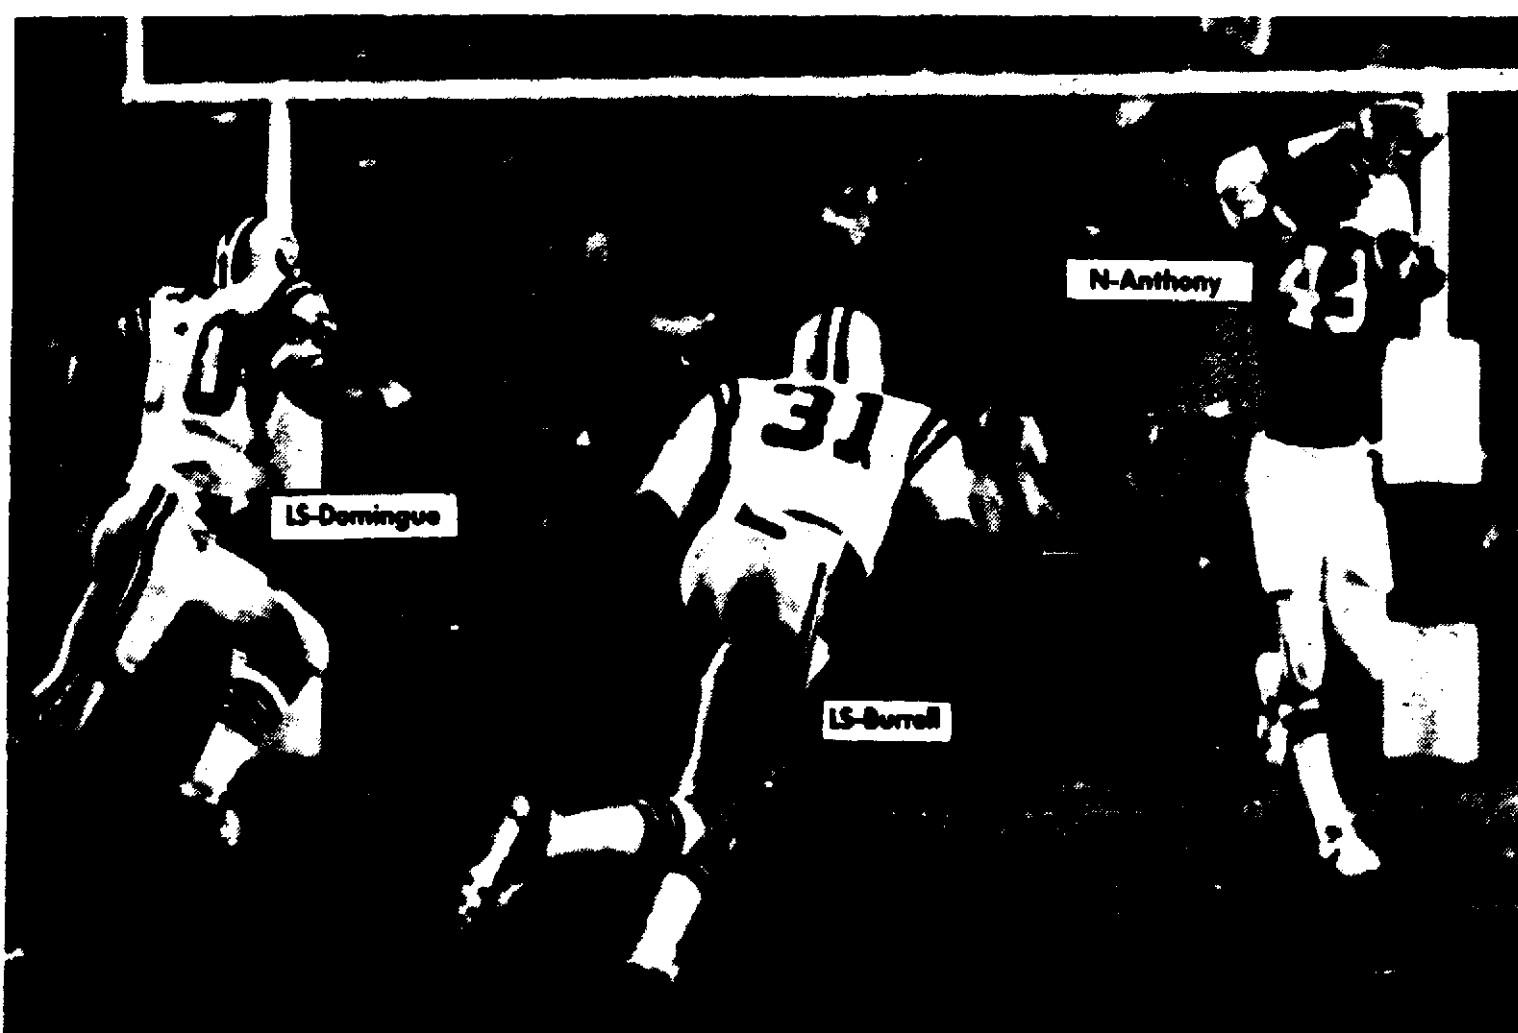

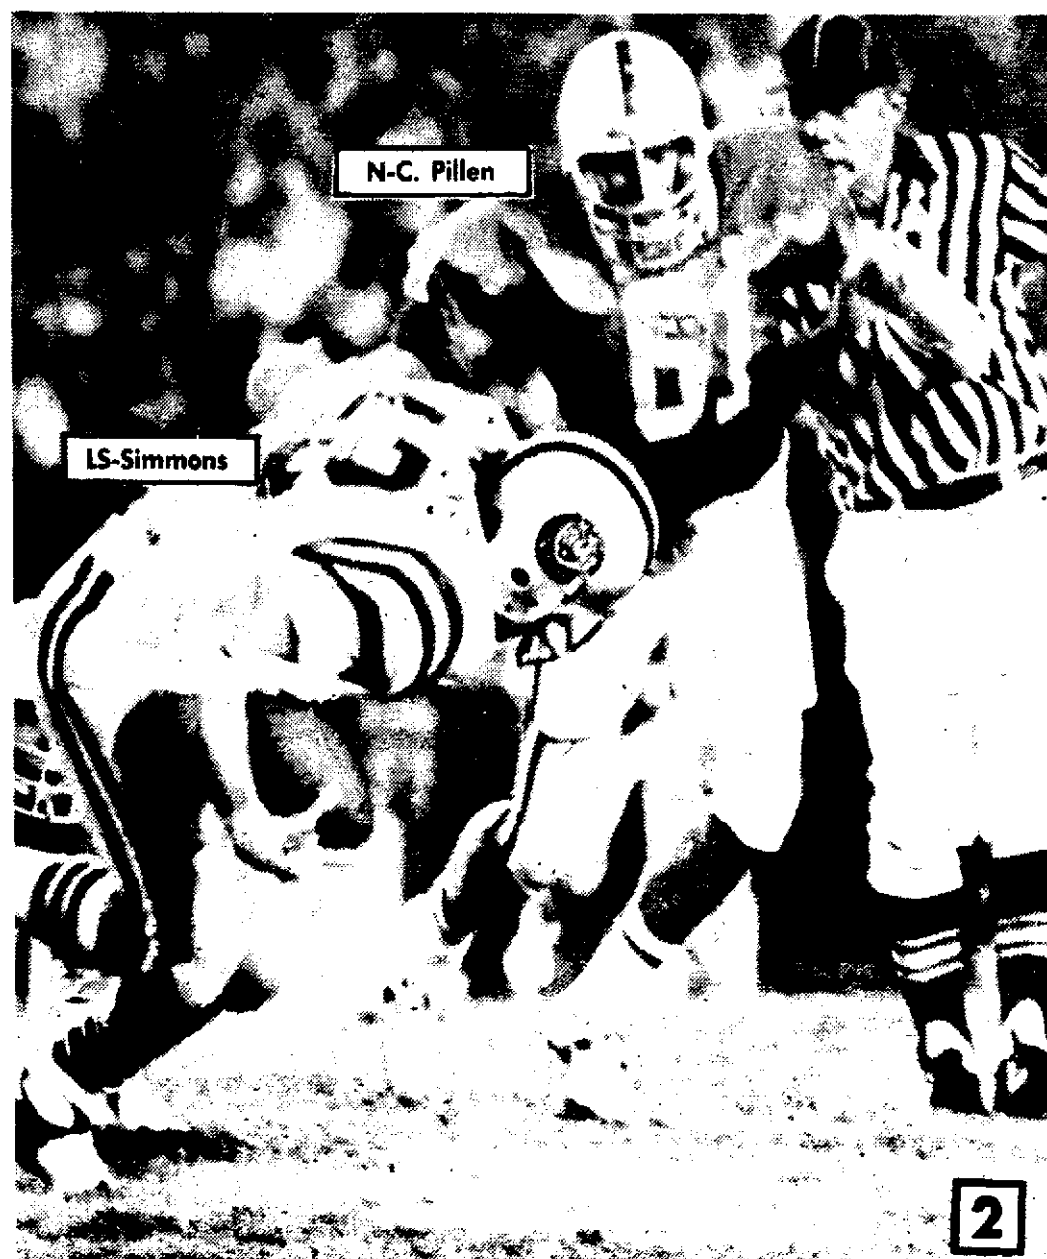

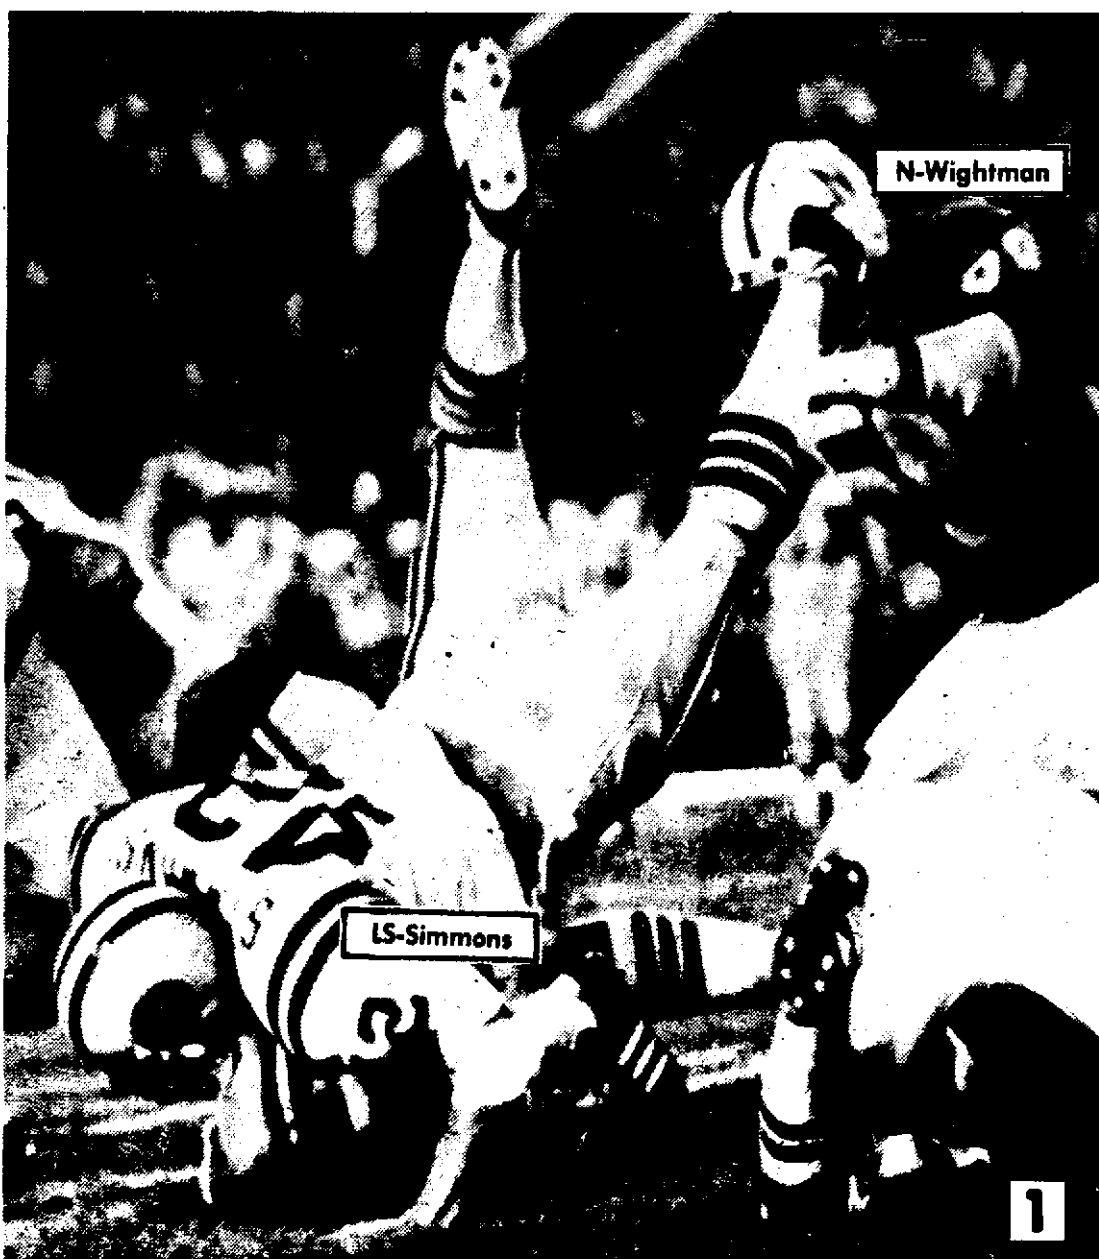

There wasn't much joy for Big Red Saturday night in Baton Rouge. But early in the first quarter NU signal caller Vince Ferragamo tossed a short pass to tight end Ken Spaeth (86) for the only Husker score of the night. LSU's Ronnie Barber (27) got there too late to stop the six points. NU's Al Eveland failed to connect for the extra point.

Caging A Tiger

LSU fullback Kelly Simmons (42) probably feels like a caged Tiger as the Husker defense gets to him twice. In the first photo, an unidentified Nebraskan trips him up while Jim Wightman (59) comes in for the kill. In the second photo, NU linebacker Clete Pillen (61) gets ready to bring him down. Both Pillen and Wightman had 10 unassisted tackles to lead the Cornhuskers on defense.

Late in the second quarter, Monte Anthony (48) catches a short pass before LSU defenders Rusty Domingue (88) and Clinton Burrell (21) can bring him down.

It Really Happened

Baton Rouge, La. — The St. John v Brusly high school football game here this weekend hardly commanded the interest of the Nebraska-LSU collision.

But the game's bizarre finish caught even the most casual fan's attention.

St. John had a 14-8 lead and the ball with five seconds remaining. The St. John coach told his quarterback "to just get the ball and run around until the horn sounds" to end the game.

The quarterback took the snap and dropped back to his own 15-yard line. As the horn sounded, he flipped the ball in the direction of a charging Brusly defender.

The ball hit the defender in the chest and bounded into the end zone where a teammate recovered for a touchdown. That made it 14-14. Brusly tried to run the conversion. The halfback was tackled a yard short of the goal and the game ended in a tie.

St. John had dominated and led, 14-0, until a pass interference call helped Brusley score its first touchdown with 3:20 remaining in the game.

Brusly exhausted its supply of timeouts and St. John took a delay of game penalty just before the quarterback's infamous decision.

At least the St. John coach absorbed his share of the blame. "It's as much my fault," he said. "I guess I should have told him during timeout to fall down when the horn sounded."

Prep Coaches Rate for UPI

Like everyone else, coaches are entitled to mistakes. Twenty of Nebraska's prep football coaches may realize that more than ever this fall.

They make up the panel of coaches rating Class A and B teams for United Press International in a poll pioneered by Lincoln's UPI state editor, Earl Flowers.

UPI junked its traditional poll done by sportswriters and sportscasters in favor of the coaches because "no one really seemed to feel a voting obligation before," says Flowers. "Personally, I feel better about this situation."

Coaches, Newspaper Agree

Last week, the coaches' poll showed Creighton Prep No. 1 in Class A and Lexington leading Class B — the same preseason No. 1 ratings choices in the Sunday Journal and Star.

Nebraska's prep poll is designed on the same concept as UPI's national major college football poll. It's an interesting one and deserves major credit. It's also Nebraska's first wire service poll to rate Class B teams in any sport.

The only thing Nebraska needs now is a prep score reporting service like the one being initiated in Illinois this fall. A seven-member staff takes phone calls from Illinois coaches in a project cosponsored by UPI and the Chicago Tribune. It has the full cooperation of the Illinois High School Assn.

Last week's season-opening 6-6 tie between Filley and Elk Creek is not as infamous as the Louisiana prep tie mentioned earlier. But the two Nebraska eight-man schools suffered similar embarrassment. They showed up for a scheduled Friday night opener. The officials did not. The game had to be moved to Saturday night.

Don't snicker at eight-man football, though. Pat Lierly, who played eight-man ball for Lodgepole last year, transferred to Class B Ogallala for his senior season.

Lierly scored all three Ogallala touchdowns in the Indians' 19-6 win over Sidney last week. That should prove he was not a product of pushover competition.

By Dave Nightingale
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

This will be the season in the National Football League that among other things, will see.

—The Chicago Bears and the New York Giants — those two powerful antagonists of the 1940s, '50s and early '60s — return to respectability, simultaneously.

—Commr Pete Rozelle start to wonder about the infallibility of the college draft after he sees the final results in the American Conference. (Six teams should win 10 or more games. But six other teams should win three or less games.)

—The Oakland Raiders finally make it to the Super Bowl.

—Joe Namath calls it a career, after the New York Jets come within an eyelash of a winless season.

Remember (as they used to say in the penny prints) that you read it here first.

Here is a capsule look at the six divisional races, which get under way tomorrow for greater glory of Rozelle and the three TV networks.

NFC CENTRAL — The big question here is not whether the Minnesota Vikings of Bud Grant, Fran Tarkenton and Chuck Foreman can gamble their way to a division title with something like an 11-3 mark. (They can.)

It is not whether the Detroit Lions can overcome internal dissension and beat out the Bears for second place with an 8-6 mark. (They can.)

It is not whether the now-respectable Bears can finish with a .500 mark. (They can't — a killer schedule — mark them 6-8.)

Instead, it is this: How long will it take for the fans of the Green Bay Packers to turn on, and devour, old idol Bart Starr, now coach of the seemingly hapless Packers fail to improve on last year's 4-10 record?

NFC EAST — Edward Bennett Williams has promised those who pay 18 bucks a game to watch the Washington Redskins that George Allen will deliver a Super Bowl. And old Ice Cream George might do it — thanks to a soft early schedule that will let Allen work out some of the kinks that were still obvious in his team at the end of pre-season play.

Dallas still is the divisional favorite, however, and could very well return to the title game — unless somebody bigger than Clint Longley punches out Roger Staubach.

St. Louis could win 10 games and still miss the playoffs. The Cards don't figure higher than third this year — since defensive kneman Walt Patulski and Bob Rowe will watch from the sidelines.

The Giants, romping in their new Hackensack home, will be valid spoilers in 1976 and look like a 500 ball club. The Eagles are still waiting for some of the Phillies' and Flyers' magic to rub off.

NFC WEST — As in the past, it will take Los Angeles about as long to clinch the title as it takes the Israelis to mop up the Egyptians — something like six "playing days."

The Rams should be five games better than runnerup San Francisco. Atlanta and New Orleans will continue as professional pursuers. Seattle will finish the season.

AFC EAST — Baltimore owner Bob Irsay sells machines that blow cold air at people. Unfortunately, Irsay blows hot air. And his little temper tantrum the other day (plus some preseason injuries) probably wrecked a good season for the Colts — Ted Marchibroda's return to the coaching helm notwithstanding.

About the only familiar faces at Miami these days are Don Shula and Bob Griese. And, thanks to Irsay, that should be enough. And also thanks to the fact O. J. Simpson is no longer a Buffalo.

Miami looks like a 10-4 club, Buffalo 9-5 — followed by Baltimore and New England. The Jets will continue to prove what they have been demonstrating the last six weeks: They are the worst team in football.

AFC CENTRAL — Last year, it was Pittsburgh 12-2, Cincinnati 11-3 and Houston 10-4. The same numbers will be on the board this time around, except that Houston will have the 11-3, Cincy the 10-4.

The addition of Archie Griffin to the Bengals may add a couple of victories. But the subtraction of Paul Brown will take away three.

The other team in this division is named Cleveland.

AFC WEST — Somewhere along the way, Oakland will lose a game. Maybe at Houston on Sept. 26, maybe at Denver on Oct. 17. But the Raiders get all of their tough opponents at home. The rest of the road schedule is Kansas City, San Diego, New England, Philadelphia and Chicago.

Every year, I keep waiting for Denver to reach the playoffs and this might be the time. Coach John Ralston is something less of a choirboy after four pro seasons. Otis Armstrong is ready to roll and Steve Ramsey seems stable at quarterback.

The Broncos could finish 11-3, but that wouldn't guarantee a playoff berth unless one of the wins is over Houston on Oct. 10.

Elsewhere in this corner of the NFL, John McKay could prove his genius at Tampa Bay by finishing third, with a 3-11 record!

Tampa Bay, Kansas City and San Diego might not win more than eight games among them.

Saldana Nips Foyt

Indianapolis (UPI) — Ex-Lincolnte Joe Saldana won the USAC-sanctioned Hoosier Hundred at the Indiana State Fairgrounds Saturday in a race which was temporarily halted when the three lead cars were involved in a pileup on the 51st lap.

The crackup sent Jan Opperman to the hospital in serious condition.

Johnny Parsons Jr. was fast qualifier and had led all the way from the start when he, Opperman and Bubba Jones — the three leaders — were involved in the wreck with Spike Gehlhausen and Chuck Gurney.

The leaders were lapping the two slower cars when Parsons spun and was hit in the rear by Opperman. Opperman then spun and flipped into the wall and Jones also spun. Opperman was taken to Methodist Hospital unconscious, and doctors said he was in serious condition.

Saldana was running about eighth at the time, but moved ahead as some drivers completed 52 laps before the race was halted.

It was restarted on lap 53 under the yellow flag for a lap.

before going green, when Saldana took the lead. Parsons restarted in 11th position because he had not finished the 51st lap.

A. J. Foyt finished second, Sheldon Kinser third, Billy Casella fourth, Jim Hurtubise fifth and Parsons sixth.

Parsons thus maintains a 30-point lead in the USAC National Dirt Track Championship standings with 340, compared to Casella's 310. One dirt track event remains on the circuit — at Syracuse, N.Y., Oct. 2.

Saldana won about $12,000 from a purse of more than $40,000.

Northern State Downs Wayne

Aberdeen, S.D. (AP) — Northern State of South Dakota rolled up a 27-point first half lead and handed Wayne of Nebraska a 27-14 defeat in the football opener for the Nebraska school Saturday night.

Northern State used long scoring plays to build the half-time margin.

Wayne got one touchdown in the third quarter on a 29-yard pass from Kevin Mahlerg to Maury Mintken.

The Nebraska team tallied in the fourth on an eight-yard pass from Mark Mintken, Maury's brother, to Mike McMahon.

NSAA District Assignments Set

District assignments released by the Nebraska School Activities Assn (NSAA) for football and volleyball assure a maximum of just one Capital City team to the state championships in each sport.

Although that was the case in football last year, the Lincoln A-1 volleyball district headed by Phil Sprague of Lincoln East includes three teams that participated in last year's state meet.

Defending state champion Lincoln High and state meet teams Lincoln Northeast and Kearney joined Lincoln Southeast and East the state champion two years ago.

With the Plus X girls drop to the ranks of Class B teams, the Thunderbolts move into the same district as Waverly, winner of the title the first three years and runner-up last year.

Plus already holds a regular season win over Waverly. Lincoln's Class A football district includes Beatrice, Fremont, Norfolk and South Sioux City along with the four Lincoln teams.

Plus Class B district involves 16 area teams. Here are the entire statewide assignments as chosen on the basis of geography and enrollment.

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Quarterback Tony Dungy ran for two touchdowns and passed for two others Saturday to propel the Minnesota Gophers to a 32-13 Big Ten season opening victory over the Indiana Hoosiers.

Dungy, the conference's top passer and total offense leader last season, completed nine of 17 pass attempts for 118 yards and added 43 yards on 10 rushes, while the Minnesota defense throttled the Indiana running game.

Courtney Snyder, the Hoosiers' all-time rushing leader, suffered a broken ankle early in the first quarter after gaming only eight yards in five carries.

Dungy tossed his first TD pass of the season to Ron Kulas with 4:27 gone in the third quarter. The 15-yard scoring pass capped a 75-yard drive in 11 plays. The senior quarterback also scored on runs of seven and six yards in the second quarter.

Minnesota got its final score on a four-yard touchdown pass to fullback Kent Kitzmann.

Indiana scored its first touchdown late in the third quarter on a one-yard run by fullback Ric Enns. The big play of the drive was a 43-yard run by sophomore Tony Suggs, Snyder's replacement. Suggs scored on a two-yard run 10 minutes into the final quarter to make it 26-13.

Minnesota built a 19-0 half-time lead on Dungy's two scoring runs and a blocked punt that was turned into a touchdown.

Following a scoreless first quarter, the Gophers' Keith Brown blocked a punt by Indiana's Dan Zarlingo. Minnesota defensive end Mark Merrill scooped up the ball at the Hoosier eight-yard line and ran it into the end zone with 4:46 gone in the second quarter.

The next time the Gophers had the ball, they went 56 yards in eight rushing plays, capped by a seven-yard scoring run by Dungy with 4:52 to go in the quarter. Paul Rogind's extra point attempt was wide to left.

Minnesota made it 19-0 with 20 seconds left in the half when Dungy faked a pass and ran the ball in from the Indiana six. The touchdown was set up by a 15-yard pass from Dungy to sophomore Jeff Anhorn to the Hoosier nine.

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint

The Pheasant Story

Way back in the 1950s, maybe further, pheasant numbers were so high in Nebraska a fella would have had to be blind, sick, drunk or some combination of the three to avoid seeing ringnecks throughout the countryside.

Those days are long gone for most states but all are suffering. South Dakota, once the pheasant capital of the world, is struggling to stay in the top 10. In 1957, the state's pre-hunt estimate of bird numbers was somewhere around 11.1 million pheasants. Last year it was 2.1 million.

Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas and other top pheasant states are waving a white flag as well. The reasons for the decline are numerous. Declining habitat is foremost. As habitat goes, so goes the wildlife.

Without the habitat, pheasants and other wildlife species, suffer greater harm during severe winter storms, severe summer droughts, predator losses, insecticides and other factors.

The drought also called for the mowing of much roadside habitat, last year in Nebraska, this year in South Dakota. Hay is needed to feed livestock which feed humans. Birds lose out.

Roadside Cover

Roadside cover produces nearly 30% of the entire pheasant population from South Dakota nests. That figure isn't far off in Iowa or Nebraska.

The concern over where to go with the habitat issue prompted Nebraska to hold a habitat conference in recent years, then establish the Habitat Bill to create millions of dollars for setting aside habitat and buying wildlife lands.

South Dakota formed a Pheasant Congress, established a $2 habitat stamp and is raising some $250,000 a year from pheasant hunters. Stocking programs are now underway in numerous states, including Nebraska, South Dakota, Minnesota and Missouri.

Nebraska's volunteer program places some 84,000 pheasant chicks with cooperating private interests to raise the birds for release at age seven or eight weeks. Minnesota's program is similar in stressing habitat management to those who take chicks.

Iowa did an extensive survey of its pheasant range and found winter cover to be the prime concern. Key ingredients included adequate cover to give storm protection, roosting cover in high grass or wooded areas, essential food (available from farm field waste) and an area where a combination of these ingredients are available.

It Makes A Difference

South Dakota studied the needs for nesting cover, finding grasses in excess of 10 inches necessary for maximum protection. Case in point, the Soil Bank years. A six-year period began in the state with a population of 5.6 million. After six years of Soil Bank, the birds rose to 11.2 million, or doubled in size.

South Dakota also found the nesting cover to be important early in the year, before new plant growth has a chance to make a substantial contribution. Therefore, burned areas or areas mowed in the fall can't provide enough cover to aid pheasant nesting.

The South Dakotans also found out most states experience an underharvesting of rooster pheasants. Since a pheasant is polygamous, one rooster can mate with 10 or more hens. Too many roosters left over to winter compete with the hens for available cover and food supplies.

Kansas also is involved actively in solving its pheasant decline with WHIP (Wildlife Habitat Improvement Program) designed to get landowners involved in saving wildlife cover.

Waterbank programs in the Midwest states help pheasant numbers and now Nebraska will begin collecting habitat stamp money Jan. 1 to initiate its multimillion dollar effort as of fiscal year 1977-78.

Farmers are encouraged to help by delaying fall plowing till spring (also a good conservation measure in preventing top soil wind erosion), spare fencerows and grass waterways from burning, mowing or plowing. When possible, farmers who leave a row or two of uncut milo or corn are doing a great service to wintering wildlife.

Every midwestern state is doing all it can to bring pheasants back to substantial numbers. Habitat is the secret formula.

Humming to the tune of "White Christmas" and dreaming of a chance to ride off into a snowy sunset, Nebraska's growing snowmobile interests are organizing.

A chance is all they ask. A chance to ride on a public trail system in their home state.

Thursday night the snowmobile association, formed recently, met with several state senators in an effort to get the ball rolling.

"When snowmobilers came in about 15 years ago, they were a new thing and people didn't know how to handle them," said state association president George Fowler of Omaha. Fowler said snowmobilers rode their vehicles everywhere until the restrictions came. Now there aren't many public places left for snowmobiling.

Snowmobilers in Nebraska are limited to a few municipal courses around the state, to some existing roadways in state parks and to private lands they gain permission on which to run.

In order to get any riding in on developed trail systems of any length, Nebraskans have to travel to Iowa, Colorado, Wyoming, South Dakota, Wisconsin or Minnesota. And then many of those states require snowmobile drivers be safety certified and snowmobiles to be registered, according to Fowler.

Nebraska doesn't have a state trail. It's snowmobiling laws are confusing and registration of $8 is required to ride on any public lands, according to Fowler.

"You should get something for your money to show for it," said Sen. John Savage of Omaha, one of five state senators to attend the meeting of snowmobilers in Lincoln.

"I think I would recommend making it (snowmobile regulation) as simple as possible," said Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings.

Lincoln Sen. Wally Barnett suggested all $8 in registration fees be directed toward the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission to cover administrative costs and provide a system of public trails.

"We'd like to find some direction to go which would be acceptable to everyone," said Barnett. "That includes the game commission. We want to give these people a place to ride. At this time, they (the game commissioners) won't even try. I think they've got to try it."

The Nebraska snowmobilers are asking and have asked some consideration be given their interests. Two appeals to the Game and Parks Commission over the past two years have prompted commissioners to say their hands are tied. There is no money available and legislative changes would be needed to provide for regulations requested by the snowmobilers.

"The whole law appears to be confusing," Fowler said of state law regarding snowmobiling. Snowmobilers, he said, don't know whether they have to have safety training, whether drivers licenses are mandatory to operate a snowmobile or whether they can drive day or night. Even how to register their snowmobile is confusing, he said.

One interested snowmobiler related a story of trying to register a snowmobile. She had to make phone calls to Sarpy County, Douglas County, then to Lincoln before anyone knew anything about registering a snowmobile.

It's no wonder only about 400 of the estimated 7,000 snowmobiles in Nebraska are registered, Fowler said. Registration of all the snowmobiles in the state would generate funds to build a public program.

"If this money, somewhere, around $40,000-50,000, were earmarked for trails, we could easily fund our own," Fowler said. "The Game and Parks Commission wouldn't have to worry about where the money would come from for our program. We could register snowmobiles like people register boats. We'd like to consider state certification for safety instruction as many states require it before anyone is allowed on their trails."

Fowler said the trail system also would create a safer place for Nebraska's riders. Marked trail systems have been almost accident free in other states.

And there's more. "Nebraska is also the only state in the whole United States that doesn't allow riding on lakes," said Fowler. "Apparently no one feels we know the difference between a safely frozen lake and open water."

Much opposition to snowmobiling has been made because of their alleged harassment of wildlife and destruction of crops or habitat. Untrue on both counts, according to Fowler, who related to studies made in Yellowstone National Park that snowmobiles don't bother wild creatures unless the snowmobiler stops and walks toward the animal. Chasing wildlife on snowmobiles is illegal anyway, he said.

And as for ruining grasses or crops, Wisconsin did an extensive survey on running snowmobiles over winter wheat with absolutely no damage done when three inches or more of snow was on the ground. "In fact, one field did even better after the snowmobilers," said Fowler. "I've been running my snowmobiles across my lawn for years and it looks better than either of my neighbors and I haven't ridden on their lawns."

The Game and Parks Commission appears to be the agency the snowmobilers want to work through but assistant director Bill Bailey said, "Our areas are quite limited. I think we've pointed that out to them (the snowmobilers). I can't answer for the commission but the interest has been there seems to be a concern for all recreational vehicles. Snowmobilers right now are just more active pursuing this."

Bailey indicated legislation is needed to get most of what the snowmobilers want and that can't be done by the commission. That's where the legislators come in and those in attendance Thursday night seemed in agreement with the snowmobilers. "Something should be done."

"Nebraska doesn't have one trail in the entire state," said Fowler. "I think that's unforgivable."

But the snowmobilers are working on a remedy.

Manufacturer Warns Against Steel Reloads

Steel shot loads will be required for waterfowl hunting in some areas of the Atlantic Flyway during the 1976-77 hunting season, and in designated areas of other flyways in following years.

Considering the stiff price of such steel-pellet ammunition, many gunners are probably planning to handload their own.

Winchester's advice: DON'T DO IT! Wait until suitable components, and tested data, are available from the ammunition makers.

At this time, key components of acceptable steel shot loads are unavailable to reloaders — such as "soft" steel shot, and the special plastic wads and shot sleeves designed for use with such shot.

The steel shot pellets now on the market (air rifle BB shot, for example) may have a diamond pyramid hardness of up to 270, as compared with a DPH of about 90 for the soft steel shot being used in commercial shot loads. In some cases, available steel pellets are harder than the gun barrels in which they would be fired, and can badly score barrel walls and distort barrel chokes.

Modern commercial steel shot loads also have special wads and thick plastic shot sleeves that help shield the barrel wall from the shot pellets. The shot sleeves used in lead shot loads are not sufficient to protect gun barrels from charges of steel pellets.

Commercial steel shot loads are entirely different ammunition from lead shot loads and may differ in all components: primers, powders, wad systems, shot sleeves, crimps, and even the plastic shotshells themselves. Substituting lead shot data and lead load components in a reloaded steel shot load may result not only in an inefficient load, but one that may damage the gun or even injure the shooter.

The Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturers' Institute (SAAMI) has summed it up with the following recommendations:

1. No components other than those specifically recommended by the manufacturer as suitable for steel shot shotshells should be used in handloading such shells.

2. Components designed for loading in steel shot shotshells should not be used in lead shot loads unless specifically recommended for such dual use by the manufacturer.

With waterfowl hunting season only weeks away, hunters already are asking about steel shot for hunting ducks and geese. Steel shot isn't required yet in Nebraska but it's coming. (More on steel shot in story at right.)

Skiers' Dilemma To Buy or Not

All right, group, it's time to put your skis, boots and bindings through a function and fun test. If they pass, you're set for another year on the slopes. But if an item fails, you'll be smart to replace it before the season starts.

To help you fun and function check your gear, here are a few tips from an expert, Mark McCallum. Mark heads up the customer services department for Saska Sports Industries, exclusive distributors for Kneiss skis, Geze bindings and Garmont boots.

Skis. If you're a casual weekend skier and you're still skiing on 205 or 210 cm skis, you may be cheating yourself out of a lot of fun. "These longer lengths are primarily for instructors and racers," says Mark. "Most recreational skiers are shortening up. Look into the new compact lengths or short ski models. Both compacts and shorts are ideally suited to today's mogul-loaded slopes. And, with the same running surface as traditional length skis, they handle powder and ice easily and well."

You also may want to change skis if you've changed ski areas. "Those skis that worked so well for you in the hip-deep powder of Alta may be a disaster on the blue ice of New England mountain trails," notes Mark.

Have you upgraded your skiing ability? If so, your original equipment may be holding you back from further improvement. Consider moving up from short skis to compacts or to a higher performance ski.

"If you decide to keep your present skis," says Mark, "take them into your professional ski shop for a complete pre-season tune-up. The shop will check edges, base, warpage, camber and other critical details."

Boots. We'll leave it to you to check for buckles that are falling off, heels that are rounding, etc. But even if they look fine, do they function. Are you still getting good performance? Are your feet staying warm?

"If your boots are three or more years old, chances are you're having trouble maintaining fit. You're probably substituting five to ten times a day. Or your feet hurt by the end of the second or third run," says Mark.

Many of these older boots feature a radically high-back design now out of style

"Today's newer, moderate-height boots fit better and get higher marks for all-around performance."

In checking your boots, remember that plastic begins to rip, tear or pull away from the hardware, it's probably time for a new pair of boots.

Bindings. Unless you're an expert on bindings, don't even try to determine whether or not your old bindings will get you — and your legs — through another break-free year. Take your skis, boots and bindings to your local ski shop for a thorough checkout

A binding check is a must if you've changed boots or skis but are still using the same bindings.

Mark points out that you don't have to wait until you buy new skis to buy new bindings. In fact, alternating ski and binding purchases keeps costs down in any single year. Buy skis one year and new bindings the next.

With good care, your equipment will last for years.

A final tip. If you're a skiing family, remember that every family member deserves serviceable, functional equipment that matches his or her ability.

Besides, with good equipment, your family will improve faster.

With a current unsettling 6% inflation rate in today's slower paced economic growth, the report says, a torrid rate of economic expansion could easily push the inflation rate to 10% or possibly higher.

Investors Are Baffled

NEW YORK (UPI) — Despite some encouraging economic signs, uncertainties that greeted the stock market last post Labor Day week left investors baffled and prices little changed on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 0.75 point to 988.36 after climbing to 996.59 on Tuesday, the first day of trading after the Labor Day holiday. Profit taking, as has happened often this year, became a factor when the Dow average approached the 1,000 level. Its 1,011.21 high for the year was set July 12.

During the past month, the closely watched market indicator fell nearly 39 points, rebounded more than 36 and leveled off last week regardless of the news background.

The rest of the market did a little better than the Dow. The NYSE common stock added 0.21 to 55.00. (Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, which includes some over-the-counter stocks, gained 0.35 to 104.65.)

Advances topped declines, 1,014 to 758, among the 2,062 issues crossing the tape.

Volume for the four-day holiday week totaled 69,551,810 shares, compared with 77,463,150 the previous week and 65,394,980 traded during the same week a year ago.

Prior to the holiday, investors were encouraged by reports that orders for non-defense capital goods had risen sharply and that manufacturers earmarked $12.8 billion in the second quarter for capital outlays, up 13 per cent from the first quarter.

The Commerce Department's July-August survey showed that business capital spending plans for 1976 were a little bit higher than those in its earlier study. Ford Motor Co., following the path of General Motors, said it plans a record $1.8 billion in capital expenditures in 1977, up from $1.4 billion this year.

And, after a two-month slump, retail sales rose 2.2 per cent in August from July. This was welcome news, because it indicated consumers, who have carried the recovery so far, were spending again.

Although consumer credit rose only $1.30 billion in July—the smallest rise in five months—the retail sales figures indicated that the next report will be more encouraging.

Wall Street was disturbed this week by reports the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would raise crude oil prices by $1 to $1.50 a barrel at its December meeting.

But Edward Mayers, chief economist of McGraw-Hill, said "higher oil prices are the best way to achieve rationing. I don't think it would cause the economic recovery to abort."

Also, published reports said corporate purchasers are being offered price concessions. Although the news was discouraging for some industries, analysts said it meant inflation was being contained and that the economic recovery would be prolonged.

The nation's basic money supply fell $600 million in the last reporting week. Loan demand at New York's leading banks rose $22 million. Trendsetting Citibank disappointed some by holding its prime lending rate for corporate borrowers at 7 per cent, the prevailing level in the nation.

Wall Street had other things to consider last week.

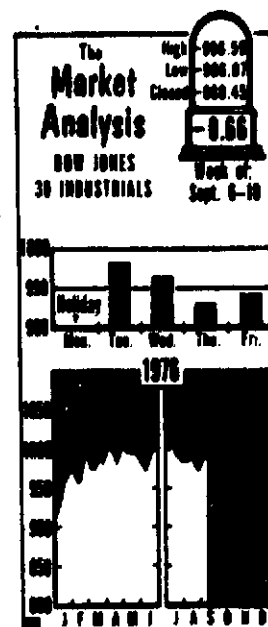

The death of Chinese Communist party leader Mao Tse-tung, the U.S. presidential election, the speculation over illnesses of Soviet leaders and the crisis facing Britain's Labor party in the face of a threatened seamen's strike heightened investors' awareness of just how cloudy the world's leadership picture has become.

Westinghouse Electric led the Big Board active list, up 1% to 18% on 840,700 shares. Federal National Mortgage followed, off 1% to 16% on 642,200 shares.

Rucker Co. was the third most active issue, up 5% to 27% on 605,300 shares. Rucker, a diversified technology and automation systems firm, has agreed to merge with NL Industries in a $165 million stock deal.

Woods Petroleum gained 5% to 38%. The firm recently received a favorable rating from Standard & Poor's. Also, the Roy G. Wood family has been negotiating to sell its 39 per cent interest in the firm.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed at 988.36 Friday, down .75 from the preceding week.

Feeder Cattle

Omaha (UPI) — The National Livestock Feeders Assn. said feeder cattle and calf prices were generally lower for the third consecutive week nationally last week as feedlot operators continued on the cautious side.

The association said variations in the trend showed some steady bids.

Eight prime markets — Choice and prime 500-75 lb steers 40-45¢ at Sioux City, 35¢-40¢ at Omaha, 35¢-40¢ at Chicago, 35¢-40¢ at St. Louis, 35¢-40¢ at Kansas City, 35¢-40¢ at Denver, 35¢-40¢ at Fort Worth, 35¢-40¢ at Dallas.

Wheat Prices Mixed

Chicago (UPI) — Wheat was mixed, corn and oats irregularly higher and soybeans substantially higher last week on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was off 1¢ to 1 1/4¢; corn up 2¢ to 7¢; oats up 1/4¢ to 1 1/4¢; and soybeans up 1 1/4¢ to 1 1/2¢.

Soybean futures showed modest gains after a week of nervous trading. Speculative interests dominated soybean pit activity. Limit gains Tuesday reportedly enabled soybean futures to hold advances despite selling Wednesday and Friday.

The principal trading influences in the soybean market last week included government and private production figures, the continued lack of farmer selling, and the latest crop condition surveys.

Soybean oil and meal futures followed the cautious trend in the soybean market to close with modest gains for the week.

Corn futures posted small gains for the week. Private and government assessments of current crop conditions were the main feature in the corn trade. Caution ahead of the USDA's September production figures reportedly accounted for light trading.

Wheat futures finished a cautious week of trading almost unchanged.

Digital Watches Not Without Imperfectio

(c) New York Times
New York — "I bought this digital watch for $35, wore it about two months and then one day it just stopped working," a New York commuter complained.

"We have gotten returns on 30% of all digital watches we've sold since last Christmas," reports Philip Stenmetz, watch buyer for the J C Penney Co chain. "And once a customer gets a bad watch, he naturally tells his friends and thus really hurts sales."

Last April, he said, "on a watch shipment from Texas Instruments we had to send back 40% of the units before we even got them onto the shelves to sell to customers."

The other parts within the module reportedly are good.

Major producers of watches include electronics companies such as Instruments Inc., Semiconductor Corp., Camera and Instruments and Litronix Inc. And companies are involved in the industry but dramatic slashing and quality problems seem to be shaking out.

Some think the doomed Don Richards is president of Analog Microsystems Inc., withdrawn from the market.

"The LED watch is the gumstick, an electronic hoop, with distinct features," says one.

These complaints aren't isolated. Other retailers report

The major problem is the battery, which often isn't powerful enough to take the everyday use demanded of a watch. The LEDs are particularly vulnerable to battery trouble. In addition, quality control among

East Germany's Kornelia Wins By/for System

Hormones, Menus, Training Camp, Computer & Commissars Included

By Hugh A. Mulligan

Associated Press Special Correspondent

Seventeen-year-old Kornelia Ender churns water en route to gold medal at Montreal Olympics.

East Berlin (AP) — Back behind the floodlit fence in her Communist fatherland, super mermaid Kornelia Ender is a star without a billboard or even a fan club.

Her value to the state, like her role in society, is not as a teen-age heroine of the masses but as a factory-proven product of the socialist system designed almost exclusively for the export market.

The average comrade ambling along the Alexander Platz, East Berlin's main thoroughfare, has no idea how this fabulous 17-year-old fraulein lives, where she trains, what national resources were harnessed to pluck her out of a neighborhood swimming pool in Halle a decade ago and set her on a computerized course to Olympic gold.

Unknown to Man on Street

The comrade in the street doesn't seem to care. He may know from the press and TV that his country won 40 gold, 25 silver and 25 bronze medals at the Montreal Olympics, second only to the Soviet Union in gold medals and six more than the United States. He may even know that Ender won four gold medals — two within less than a half-hour — and a silver. But he feels no personal identification with her or the other athletes. Nor does the state encourage any.

Even from the party faithful, the German Democratic Republic guards its athletes and its athletic secrets as closely as its MIG bases and missile sites.

Living in Walled World

Kornelia Ender and her teammates live in another world, a world as walled off from the everyday masses as the glittering capitalist shops along the Kurfuerstendamm on the opposite side of Checkpoint Charlie.

It is a world of goals and graphs and special diets, of trainers with stopwatches and heavy "performance bibles," of white-coated doctors taking blood tests and injecting hormones, of training camps in the Bulgarian mountains and a computer in Leipzig and a committee of high commissars ruling the jock roost from a ministry in Berlin.

Privilege and status dwell here: a chance for a bigger apartment, a higher place on the waiting list to buy a car, a better job for father, an assured place at the university, opportunities to travel, even go on vacation in another Communist bloc country, and sometimes, for a fine performance, an envelope full of marks that no one will admit ever existed.

Occasionally prying western eyes are given a guarded glimpse of the East German sports scene. The sports university at Leipzig, some of the 691 gym centers or 890 track and field complexes, the new pool at Rostow or the sports club at Kark Marx Stadt, but always on a carefully guided tour that divulges no secrets of the latter-day alchemist transmuting raw muscle into Olympic gold.

But secrets will out, as long as there is a Berlin Wall to vault or an electrified fence to hurdle. It is now known how East Germany, with a population of 17.5 million, managed to select 292 athletes for the trip to Montreal and have 159 of them return wearing medals.

Three-Year Prediction in Blood

The secret of the system is the system itself.

"It was clear in 1973 when I took blood samples from her ear lobes that Kornelia Ender could swim the 100-meter freestyle in 56 seconds flat," said Aleis Marder, a sports doctor who was a key part of the system until he defected to the West two years ago. "It was statistically proven that she was going to do this. By monitoring her performance charts and her metabolism on the basis of blood tests, it was determined what she was capable of achieving and how much training was needed for her to reach a world record."

For 10 years Marder was department chief of research into high-performance athletes at the Chemie Sports Club in Halle, where Fraulein Ender came to be trained as a world-class swimmer. The system had decreed that this unknown 13-year-old would soon swim at the speed that brought Johnny Weissmuller a world record and a gold medal at the 1924 Paris Olympics. Catching up with Tarzan, five decades later, was the goal set by the system for this gifted girl swimmer.

Lab for New Breed of Alchemists

The Chemie Club is one of 18 sports clubs that serve as laboratories for the new breed of alchemists bubbling up Olympic gold for East Germany. Located in each of the 15 counties or sports districts, plus three run by the army, the clubs concentrate on high-performance athletes attending their specialized sports schools at both elementary and high school level.

Each club and school complex specializes in certain sports: rowing and weight lifting at one, skiing and figure skating at another, etc. Children are selected at age 9 or 10 on the basis of

The sports schools follow a normal curriculum but training takes precedence and dictates the daily schedule. Swimmers turn up at the pool at 8:30 each morning, train for 2½ hours, attend class for two hours, break for lunch, return to class for three hours then go back to the pool for another two-hour session.

Computer Dictates Training

The training programs are not devised by the individual coaches who may know their swimmers best, but by the "scientific center for swim" at Leipzig University's Research Center for Physical Culture in Sport. Experiences of the various trainers with high-performance athletes and data from blood samples taken by the club doctors are collected, studied and fed into the computer at Leipzig on a weekly and monthly basis.

Every cough, cramp and kink is duly reported to Leipzig. Graphs and charts tell the athlete what he has to achieve. At two-year intervals the training programs are completely overhauled on the basis of the data fed into the computer and a new "performance bible" is issued. It dictates every detail of talent, size, and expected body growth, after they have been watched for two years at a local sports center or have distinguished themselves at "sportakides," youth competitions held on a regional and national basis. Last year 3.5 million children took part in the East German sports program.

Families Moved, Jobs Provided

Except for those who live in the town, children board at the sports school. Sometimes in the case of a very talented prospect, the whole family is moved to an apartment near the club and the father is given a suitable and usually better job than the one he had.

Kornelia Ender was sent to the Chemie Club, which specializes in rowers, swimmers and middle-distance runners, at age 8, after she had been swimming in the Halle public pool for three years. When Dr. Marder was there, Chemie had a staff of 70, including 11 doctors, and, for its 150 swimmers, eight trainers. His medical specialty was researching the effects of hard training on body functions.

"If only three or four are world-class swimmers, why bother to train the other 147?" Marder asks. Then he answers his own question: "Because the system has determined statistically that you need to train at least 100 top swimmers to get one or two of world class."

the care, feeding and massaging of future medal winners, even down to the number of laps they should do each morning in the pool.

At Montreal, one of the East German girls revealed that the training bible now requires beginning swimmers, the 10-year-olds, to swim a minimum of 800 kilometers (500 miles) a year. (This is roughly the distance from Lincoln to Denver).

"Each child is given a minimum and maximum goal," Dr. Marder explained. "If at the end of the year, he or she is not inside the figures, the option is given of staying on for another year or going home. A swimmer who grows too fast or gets too heavy may be switched to another sport, like rowing. When a child has reached full growth and still does not meet performance levels, the decision is automatic, there is no purpose in continuing."

During training, Marder and the other club doctors monitor the athlete's metabolism by taking blood samples from the ear lobes and sending the data on to Leipzig for the computer to determine how hard they should train or how fast they should be growing.

The computer has decreed that at age 14 to 15 single-scull

Film Maker an Eternity, Now Turns to 'Holocaust'

By Bob Thomas

Los Angeles (AP) — Fifty years is a long time in any business in the man-eating movie business, it's an eternity. But here's one film maker who has made the mark: Andrew Stone.

At 74 he still plays a mean game of tennis, and he's busy preparing a film adventure, 'Holocaust' — a real-life tale of the rescue of Norway's gold in the face of the Nazi invasion.

"I don't feel any different from how I felt when I was 20," comments the peppery director, "and I'm just as eager to get to work."

He marks his anniversary from March 3, 1926, when he started his first film starring Tyrone Power Sr. He made a series of films at Paramount in the 1930s, including 'The Girl Said No' and 'The Great Victor Herbert' (his favorite film). But the studio system did not fit his maverick style, and from 1943 he has worked only for Andrew Stone Productions.

"I'm amused by the young directors who claim they have invented a new system of making films in real-life locations," said Stone. "I was doing it 12-15 years before anybody else gave it a try."

"I felt the cost of making pictures in studios was a rip-off."

Faced with a $25,000 bill for building three walls of a department store set in "Bachelor's Daughter" (1946), he took his entire camera crew to a local May Company store and knocked off the scene faster and with more authenticity than he could have achieved in a movie set.

"I made 'Julie' (1956) with Doris Day for $750,000, and that included $250,000 for Doris, $100,000 for me, $25,000 for Marty Melcher and $30,000 for the story," he recalled. "I'm still getting profit checks for that one." Day also got an Oscar nomination.

For "The Last Voyage" (1960) a story of the sinking of an ocean liner he bought the famed Ile De France and sank it. He missed one trick: turning it upside down, as in "The Poseidon Adventure."

In 1969 Stone spent $4 million on "The Song of Norway," a huge sum for him, but minor compared to what other musicals were costing at the time. "Hello, Dolly," $25 million. "Paint Your Wagon," $22 million. "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever," $15 million.

His latest film was "The Great Waltz," made in Vienna with Horst Buchholz and Mary Costa. Like "Song of Norway," it turned a profit, he believes, "but not for me, it is absolutely impossible to fight the accounting systems of the film companies."

Lincoln Symphony

Musical or Football, Team Needs Conditioning, Spirit

By Helen Haggie

The Nebraska Cornhuskers opened their football season Saturday night in Baton Rouge in a game with Louisiana State University.

And the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra played a pre-season concert at the Sports Complex on opening night of the State Fair.

Though not all football fans are symphony fans (and vice versa) there is more crossover than one would imagine.

In the first place it is close-knit teamwork, discipline and coordinated strategy that makes winners of both groups.

One of the big differences is that sports are young men's games. The competitive play is geared to the muscular and mental capacities of early maturity. Of course, there are exceptions such as "the old man of football," George Blanda. But he received his walking papers just a few weeks before his 49th birthday. On the other hand though musicians need muscular coordination and endurance, their skills last a good deal longer. Many fine musicians are much older than Blanda.

Members of orchestras must have conditioning, just as athletes must be to become winning performers.

And team play — each member of the orchestra must be part of the team if beautiful music is to be the result.

"We are very much a team," says Dr. Robert A. Emile, conductor of the Lincoln Symphony. And he should know. Though he didn't play varsity football at Yale, he played house football and knows wherein he speaks when he compares symphonies with football teams.

"A coach of a football team doesn't run the touchdowns. A conductor doesn't play music," Emile says. But the programming, the literature for the orchestra, is planned by the conductor. The game plan for a team is put together by the coaching staff.

Athletic coaches are firm believers in self-discipline for members of the team. Listen to the conductor. "Every musician must have self-discipline. Only this way is it possible to have team discipline in the orchestra."

"We are like athletes in that we must have tremendous physical ability. Various instruments cause unnatural positions and we must be physically able to handle them."

Then, of course there are uniforms. The athletic teams sport colorful attire on the field. Though not colorful, symphony musicians also wear uniforms. Formal wear usually is the rule and black usually the color.

One area in which there is a difference is in winning or losing the game. The athletic team is judged by the score. The orchestra is judged by whether the performance is good, great or not so good.

The Lincoln Symphony moves into its regular season on Sept. 28. The appearances include Ruggiero Ricci, violinist with orchestra on that date; Jay McShann, well known jazzman, with orchestra on Nov. 2; Abbey Simon, pianist with orchestra on Dec. 7; orchestra audition winners with orchestra on Jan. 18; Symphony Chorale with orchestra on Feb. 15; John Rardon, baritone, with orchestra on March 15, and Francis Tursi, violist with orchestra on April 19.

All regular season performances will be at O'Donnell Auditorium on the Nebraska Wesleyan University Campus.

There will be bus service to the auditorium. One will pick up members of the audience at the Radisson Cornhusker Hotel, the Lincoln University Club and Eastmont; a second bus will pick up persons at Westminster Presbyterian Church and the Lincoln Country Club.

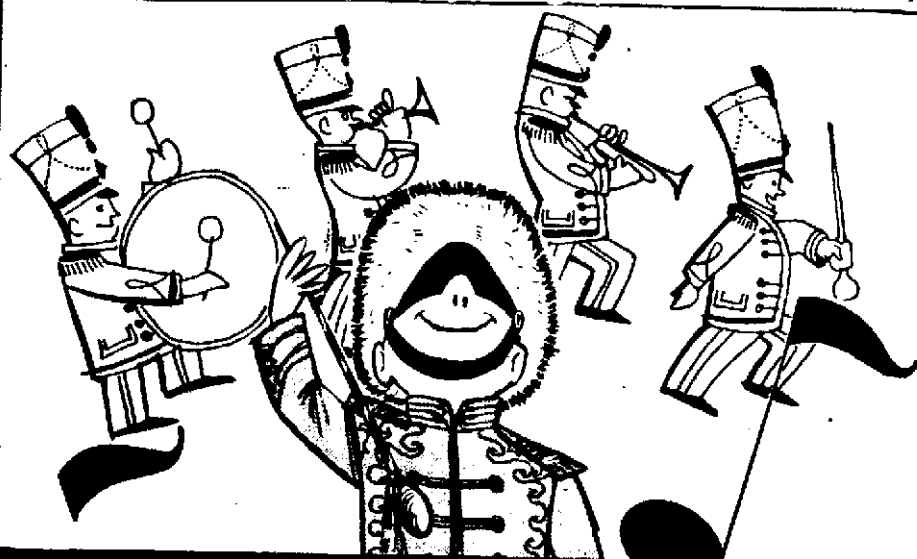

Information about season tickets may be obtained from the Lincoln Symphony Assn. office in the old Federal Bldg. at 10th and P.

In addition to the regular season, two special concerts have been scheduled. On Dec. 2, the orchestra will have Big Bird from the PBS broadcast Sesame Street program as a guest. The matinee performance is a Christmas gift to the children of Lincoln.

And in the spring, CBS News anchorman Walter Cronkite will appear with the orchestra to narrate the Lincoln Portrait. Both performances will be held at the Sports Complex on the State Fairgrounds.

The orchestra also will play its usual elementary school programs for Lincoln school children and for schools in nearby towns.

Part of Emile's philosophy concerning a symphony orchestra is: "The more we play together, the better the performances."

Its Message Is Lost, 'Inserts' a Dull Film

By Holly Spence

"Meat, meat, meat" says the Boy Wonder and he is not referring to your usual cornfed Nebraska prime rib in Inserts, opening Thursday at the Hollywood & Vine Theater.

His reference is to the bare skin that is being exposed (and filmed) in porno films under the guiding eye of a once-brilliant, slipping but still young director. The fellow is referred to as Boy Wonder. The role is played by Richard Dreyfuss, who is a production partner in the Inserts enterprise as well as having that leading role.

Although talent and intent glimmer periodically, there is really little to consider seriously in Inserts. The little seriousness which comes out of the film when Dreyfuss explains — in person — what he is attempting to say through Inserts. Alas, what he is trying to say never comes across fully on the film.

If Dreyfuss were to travel the documentary circuit with the film, he might have a chance to recoup some of the expenses. As a commercial release, Inserts was a bad investment by United Artists.

Although one feels some form of sympathy for the Boy Wonder — who is merely a shell of a man and of a talent — any sensitivity becomes masked in pity. The slovenly director is a pathetic figure in his decline.

Dreyfuss, along with his cast of Jessica Harper, Bob Hoskins, Veronica Cartwright and Stephen Davies, attempt to contribute some heavyweight portrayals but they have a bad screenplay to work with.

The idea of making porno films in a young Hollywood is certainly a subject that can be dealt with on film, but Dreyfuss has not found the right vehicle in Inserts.

This production turns out to be more closely resembled to a low-budget play than a low-budget film. The continual use of the Boy Wonder's dilapidated mansion where all the shooting is done and the five-character dialogue quickly become tiresome.

Dreyfuss appealed to the Motion Picture Association of America to change the X rating to an R, but failed. The X is the result of the frequent use of four-letter words and the simulated, definitely soft core sex scenes.

By personal definition, Inserts does not appear to fit into what pornography might encompass. But it is a very dull, crass and disoriented cinema concoction. X.

French director Francois Truffaut's famed film Day for Night will be shown for members of the Nebraska Union Foreign Film Society at 7 and 9:15 tonight, and at the same hours Monday and Tuesday, in the Sheldon Gallery Theater.

Concert Friday Night

Bicentennial Band, Chorus Sent By U.S. Armed Forces

The United States Armed Forces Bicentennial Band and Chorus will present a concert at the University of Nebraska's Kimball Hall, 12th and R, at 8 p.m. Friday.

The program is sponsored by Gamma Lambda, the University of Nebraska Band service society, and KOLN-KGIN-TV. There is no admission charge, but admission is by free tickets that may be obtained in advance by contacting Westbrook Music Bldg., Room 123, or from the television station.

One of the soloists in the chorus is soprano Sandra Nicolai, formerly of Lincoln.

The group was authorized in 1974 and formed in 1975. Its purpose is to represent the Defense Dept. in celebrating the bicentennial of the American Revolution.

The task force which prepared the plan included Army Lt. Col. Hal J. Gibson, conductor of the Army Field Band; Capt. James C. Whitten, Air Force band leader, and Lt. William G. Brittain Jr. of the U.S. Navy Band.

Col. Gibson was the first director and upon his retirement, was succeeded by Lt. Col. Richard E. Thurston, who had been commander and conductor of the U.S. Air Force Academy Band.

The 55-piece band and 24-voice chorus has had enthusiastic reviews in many places. The Slat Lake City Deseret News called it the world's best band — "the most exciting band we've enjoyed in years... the chorus equal to the high quality one frequently hears in a land of choral music..."

Randall Thompson's "The Testament of Freedom" is the featured work to be performed by the Bicentennial Chorus. The band's announced program includes:

Celebration Overture... Creston
Carnival of Venice... Clarke
Euphonium solo Mvt Brian L. Mowman, USN

Hennessy Mime & Music Programs on NU Campus

Combining mime and music in a unique style is the essence of the Michael Hennessy Mime and Music Theatre which will be on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus Tuesday and Wednesday.

The two-day residency will begin Tuesday evening at 7 with a coffee-house concert in the Nebraska Union Centennial Room by musicians Dan Blegen and Eric Sayer.

The two Minnesota-based musicians have developed their own brand of music which they have labeled "classical cartoon music." Influenced by diverse writers from Aaron Copland to Woody Allen, Blegen and Sayer have mastered nearly a dozen instruments and play in many styles from folk to jazz to classical.

Tuesday evening's show is open to the public, as is the full-length concert Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Nebraska Union ballroom of the Michael Hennessy Mime and Music Theatre in which Hennessy will combine a program of solo mime with music from Blegen and Sayer. This concert will include mime with music as well as solo mime and solo music.

Hennessy's style is in kinship with the classic mimes of Europe but is also infused with the robustness and light-hearted humor of circus clowns and silent movie comics.

Free Flight For Cruisers

New York (UPI) — Passengers booking on some of the Carras Line's winter cruises to South and Central America will be flown free to and from the embarkation port of New Orleans, the line announced. On some other cruises of the MTS Daphne, the line will pick up 30 percent of the economy airfare.

'Play of Daniel'

Auditions

Auditions for vocalists to perform in "The Play of Daniel" will be held next Sunday in Room 231 of the Westbrook Music Bldg. at 11th and R on the University of Nebraska campus. Times are 6 p.m. for basses and baritones, 7 p.m. for tenors and 8 p.m. for sopranos, male alto or countertenor.

The play is a 13th century musical drama. It will be presented in two performances in mid-December as part of the Abendmusik, sponsored by First-Plymouth Congregational Church and the Nebraska Arts Council. Instrumental music will be by members of the University Collegium Musicum.

When "The Play of Daniel" was performed by New York Pro Musica in 1958 it was the first modern performance seen since the Middle Ages. The play was originally produced at Beauvais Cathedral in France at the Christmas season in the 12th and 13th centuries.

Arnold Schatz Violin Recital Opens a Series

The first in a series of free public recitals by faculty members of the University of Nebraska School of Music will feature Prof. Arnold Schatz, violinist. His recital will be at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Kimball Hall, 11th and R. Performing with Schatz will be pianist Audun Ravnan and cellist Priscilla Parson, both School of Music faculty members.

Schatz has selected sonatas by Bach and Beethoven to open his program. Bach's Sonata No. 2 in E-flat Major, BWV. 1031, was written to be performed by flute or violin. Beethoven's Sonata No. 7 in c minor, Opus 30, No. 2, was written for Emperor Alexander I and treats violin and piano as equal partners.

Also on the program will be the melodic "Poeme" by Chausson and songs written by Debussy, Mendelssohn and Moszkowski and transcribed for violin by famous concert violinists Hartmann, Achron and Sarasate.

By Harold C. Schonberg
(c) 1976 New York Times

New York — The 1976-77 season at the Metropolitan Opera will show a degree of adventure rare in this staid old house. While the Metropolitan's repertory consistently has avoided controversial opera, here come Berg's "Lulu," left unfinished at the composer's death in 1935 and Poulenc's "Dialogues des Carmelites" of 1957.

And two more of the six new productions are, if not examples of contemporary opera, at least unfamiliar enough to be well outside normal Metropolitan programming. Those are Massenet's "Esclarmonde" and Meyerbeer's "Le Prophete." Otherwise the Metropolitan season, which runs from Oct. 11-April 16, will have the usual mixture of Verdi, Wagner, Puccini, Mozart and the other favorites.

The unhappy fact is that very little viable opera has been written since the great days of Richard Strauss and Giacomo Puccini.

There is always a cultural lag. Nobody argues against that. But does that argument about contemporary music really hold true today? When audiences have been exposed to it for over 50 years and still stubbornly refuse to accept it? When recordings of the most difficult music proliferate? When anybody with the least inclination can immerse himself in the medium?

Proponents of contemporary opera (and contemporary music in general) seem to argue that it is the duty of the listener to sit stoically through new music, no matter how painful or unmusical it may be. The argument also presupposes that modern music must be listened to merely because it is new, not because it is good.

But experienced composers — Verdi was a good example — know differently. Verdi said time and again that only the public was the final judge; that a good work would make its way and a bad work would fail. History bears him out.

Patrick Smith, a knowledgeable critic and scholar, has written an article for Opera News that looks at the decade between 1950 and 1960 with a view to picking viable operas. Here is that he has come up with: Menotti's "The Consul," Poulenc's "Carmelites" and "La Voix Humaine," Britten's "Turn of the Screw," Trippett's "Midsummer Marriage," Dallapiccola's "Il Prigioniero," Blomdahl's "Aniara," Moore's "Ballad of Baby Doe," Wiegall's "Six Characters in Search of an Author" and Stravinsky's "The Rake's Progress."

Some of these operas are forgotten already — the Blomdahl, Wiegall and Dallapiccola. The Menotti and Moore are lightweight by any standards. Stravinsky's "Rake" never really took hold with any company, and only the overpowering name of its composer has kept it in the periphery of the repertory. Only Poulenc's "Carmelites" seems to have a chance to survive.

There seems to be no reason why these operas should be forced down the public's throat because they happen to be "modern" (even in a highly general sense in the cases of Britten and Menotti).

St. Louis Orchestra Is Struck

This is negotiating time for many of the country's symphony orchestras.

In addition to the St. Louis Symphony, whose musicians went on strike Wednesday, Minneapolis, Chicago and Cleveland orchestras are negotiating or are about to negotiate wage contracts. The Houston orchestra has been struck.

Of the St. Louis Symphony, which comes to Lincoln frequently, orchestra manager James Cain said he was optimistic about ending the strike soon.

Cain said that on the day the strike was called people were walking through the picket lines to purchase season tickets. "The audience here at any rate is optimistic that the strike will be settled soon," Cain said on the telephone.

Cain also praised Leonard Slatkin, who has conducted the St. Louis Symphony in Lincoln. "He is having an astonishing career. He is principal guest conductor for our orchestra as well as for the Minneapolis orchestra. He conducts the Cleveland and Philadelphia orchestras in November and goes to the Soviet Union in December."

Club Project

The general Federation of Women's Clubs is about to establish a trust fund for Affiliate Artists, Inc., the nonprofit corporation which has done so much in the field of performing artist residencies.

The Nebraska Federation is joining in the sale of records and tapes. Mrs. Byron Lauritsen of Kennard is the Nebraska Federation arts chairman. Fifty cents collected for each item sold will remain in the local club treasury, $1 will go to the state organization and the balance goes to the GFWC trust.

Writer Visits

Marilyn Coffey, formerly of The Lincoln Journal's staff, was in Nebraska last month to visit her parents, Tom and Zelma Coffey of Alma.

Ms. Coffey is an adjunct assistant professor at the Pratt Institute in Brooklyn and also teaches at Womanschool in Manhattan. She is the author of the novel "Marcella," published by Charterhouse of New York and in Britain by Quartet of London.

In addition she has written poetry and essays which have been published in several national magazines, including Atlantic Monthly and Cosmopolitan. She is a founder of the Woman's Salon, a forum for criticism and theory as well as for fiction, poetry and plays.

Soft Sculpture Display Opens

"Fabrication," an exhibit of soft sculpture by Lou Ann Musinski, opens Tuesday in the art shop at Sheldon Gallery, 12th and R. The artist, presently teaching in Oak Park-River Forest High School near Chicago, is a native of Pine River, Minn. She has studied at Bemidji (Minn.) State College (BS degree), the International Falls Art Colony, Minneapolis School of Art and at the Art Institute of Chicago (MFA). Her exhibit hangs through Oct. 10.

Wiederspan At Hastings

Hastings — A public reception with Stan Wiederspan of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, as honored guest will be held at the Hastings College Gallery from 2 to 5 p.m. today. Wiederspan's paintings are on exhibition through Sept. 30.

A Hastings native and 1960 graduate of Hastings College, Wiederspan has an MFA from the University of Iowa at Iowa City. He taught at Britt (Iowa) Community School before joining the faculty at Iowa Wesleyan in Mt. Pleasant where he became chairman of the art department.

A past member of the Iowa Arts Council, Wiederspan now is the director of the Cedar Rapids Art Center.

Cartier Has 1-Man Show

New York (UPI) — Louis Cartier is being honored with a one-man show of his jewels at Cartier Oct. 13-29. The exhibition is called The Louis Cartier retrospective. The display is to include the original wrist watch designed by Cartier in 1907 for his pal, Santos Dumont, a flashy playboy sportsman and aviator who had complained to Cartier that he couldn't tell how fast he was going when he raced. He had requested a clock that he could attach to his wrist. Cartier came up with the idea of a small clock to be attached to the wrist. Thus "le wrist watch" was born. By 1908 Switzerland was turning out large numbers.

Patent Date

The sewing machine idea was patented by Elias Howe in 1846 although the idea of a lock-stitch machine was conceived independently by Walter Hunt in 1833.

Businesses May Show Rented Art

A new project of the Nebraska Art Assn. will allow corporations and businesses in the state to decorate their offices with fine art.

A rental program, which includes paintings from the permanent collections of the Sheldon Art Gallery, will begin Thursday.

The program will be introduced Wednesday evening at the National Bank of Commerce. Some 400 firms have been invited to send representatives a reception to see the effect of using art as a decorative function in a building.

When the bank opened its new building, it asked Sheldon Gallery director Norman Geske to arrange an exhibition of art. Work was borrowed from the Sheldon collections as well as from galleries in Omaha and Lincoln and from artists themselves.

Those attending the reception Wednesday will see the result of the use of art that is suitable for public spaces.

Mrs. Dwight Cherry will be the coordinator-consultant for the project.

One important criteria in determining a firm's eligibility to take advantage of the program, Geske said, is proper security.

The program allows a firm to rent art for a minimum of six months and a maximum of a year. Fees, some of which are a percentage of the appraised value of the art, will pay for delivery, the advice of Mrs. Cherry, insurance and help in installation.

is that more works can be on display all the time. "It is better that the public have an opportunity to see these works than to have them in storage and only brought out for public view occasionally," Geske pointed out.

Another advantage was pointed out by Paul Amen, chairman of NBC. "When we built this building, we did not want to purchase art until we knew what we needed," he said. "This is a great way to decorate our walls and to give us time to make decisions."

Proceeds from the project will go to the NAA acquisition fund. Further information may be obtained from Mrs. Cherry at 2040 So. 35th.

8H European Support Players 'Worst in World'—Farmer

By C. Gerald Fraser

(c) 1976 New York Times

New York — What is life like for an American jazz musician who became fed up with the United States and moved to Vienna, from where he has traveled through Europe and to the Middle and Far East to play his fluegelhorn professionally?

Art Farmer, who also plays the trumpet and who has just completed what was for him an overseas visit to the U.S. and Canada, says, "Over there in one way, it's completely different from here."

"Last night, I was playing with some of the best musicians in the world." He was referring to an outdoor jazz-mobile performance he gave with Milt Jackson, vibraphonist; Jimmy Heath, saxophonist; Al Foster, percussionist; Sam Jones, bassist, and Cedar Walton, pianist. "Over there," he said "I have to play with some of the worst musicians in the world, sometimes."

"And you're going to have to do it all by yourself, so that makes you stronger. You accept it as a challenge; you develop your own self."

Farmer came out of the 1950s as one of America's great trumpet players and was recognized in the 1960s as an outstanding fluegelhorn soloist. He customarily worked with top ranking jazz musicians: Lionel Hampton, Benny Carter, Gigi Gryce, Horace Silver, Gerry Mulligan and Benny Golson.

Sometimes in Europe, Farmer said, his path crosses other expatriate musicians; Slide Hampton, Johnny Griffin, Dexter Gordon, Art Taylor and Kenny Clark. "We just get it on," he said.

He says there are very good European jazz musicians. But the European club owner prefers to hire a single star and bring in a backup group that will be paid a low wage.

Farmer said European audiences are more knowledgeable about jazz than American audiences. Also, he said, there is more jazz on radio and television in Europe than there is here.

To earn a living, Farmer said, he has to travel. One week he plays in Edinburgh, the next week Cologne, West Germany, then Bombay, India, on to New Zealand, back home to Austria and by then, at the end of October, he will fly back to the United States for a quick visit.

Farmer left the U.S. in 1968 because "the scene was so bad over here" and to "concentrate on the music without... hassles."

For the last five years, he has been returning to the U.S. for summers and a couple of weeks in winters.

"Things have changed, they change gradually but they get better. I feel very good about what's happening. The reception has been so nice this trip that I'm thinking about reversing it and staying over here and going over there, like on tours."

Reissue Sets: Parker Classics Now on LPs

By George Kanzler Jr.

(c) 1976, Newhouse News Service

The history of modern jazz as it developed in the 1940s as bebop recorded by a handful of small independent record labels. Important among them was Savoy Records of Newark, N.J., the firm that recorded Charlie Parker's first sides as a leader in 1945.

Recently the Savoy catalogue, long out of print, was sold to Arista Records. Arista now is reissuing Savoy sessions in double albums often containing illuminating liner notes.

Among these albums, a classic and must for any jazz collector is "Bird-The Savoy Recordings—Master Takes" Charlie Parker.

These are the Parker recordings that were issued by Savoy between 1945 and 1948, recordings that changed the jazz landscape and influenced thousands of musicians and artists all over the world.

It is hard to realize the impact these records had, for since then Parker's music has become so much a part of the jazz vocabulary that it is often taken for granted.

Yet, listening to them today, you are struck with the tremendous vitality and almost profligate creativity of Parker's alto sax solos. His inventiveness never flags, and surprises abound.

Most of the 30 cuts here are less than three minutes long and include solo passages by three or four musicians, yet each Parker solo is a complete universe of musical ideas that seems to run on for hours.

Parker isn't the only major musician represented here. All of the quintet sessions also feature Miles Davis on trumpet (maturing rapidly over the three years) and Max Roach on drums. Pianists include Bud Powell, John Lewis and Duke Jordan.

This album is the "master takes," or sides released by Savoy as singles at the time. Also in the vaults are hundreds of "alternate takes," all revealing different facets of Parker, for the man never repeated a solo note for note.

Another jazz giant was Lester Young. All his recordings for Savoy, including second, third and fourth alternate takes, are on "Pres, The Complete Savoy Recordings" Lester Young.

The bulk of the recordings are from 1944, when Pres was at his peak as a tenor saxophonist. A listen to the two takes of "Ghost of a Chance" should convince anyone of his inventiveness: He never repeats a note.

There are six other double albums in the initial Savoy reissue series, including sets by Erroll Garner, Cannonball Adderley, Yusef Lateef, Milt Jackson with tenor saxophonist Lucky Thompson proving a perfect complement to the vibist, and John Coltrane with trumpeter Wilbur Harden.

Also in the series is "The Changing Face of Harlem," a collection of small band music never before available on LP. The bands are a minor who's who of jazz in 1944, with trumpeters Hot Lips Page, Emmett Berry, Frankie Newton; tenor saxophonists Ben Webster, Don Byas, Budd Johnson and Ike Quebec; guitarist Tiny Grimes (with Charlie Parker as a sideman); and a quartet of vocals by Newark's Miss Rhapsody.

Stevie Wonder's new double-album remains in limbo as he struggles and fusses to satisfy himself with it. For four months the gigantic (60x240 feet) billboard in New York's Times Square was emblazoned with an advertisement for the album. Wonder's people had made a four-month deal for the space. On Sept. 1 a movie advertisement replaced it.

Traudt's Pheasant Shot Is Grand Prize Winner

Steve Traudt speaks of the proud, colorful bird as he would a person

Traudt seemed fascinated by the bird's beauty as he recounted how he snapped his grand prize winning picture on the spur of the moment to capture the golden pheasant's regal pose

It is that fascination of his subject, the eye for the unique and his darkroom skills that have made Lincolnite Traudt a winner

As grand prize winner in The Sunday Journal and Star/Kodak International Snapshot Awards (KINSA) contest, Traudt will receive $40 in prize money and a certificate from KINSA

Mrs. Dauer, 4420 Van Dorn, won with her picture of a couple walking along a lonely California beach, their long shadows trailing in the sand

Briese, 1629 So 13th, has accomplished a "first" in The Sunday Journal and Star contest. He is a double color finalist, winning with two weekly entries — one of his daughter Michelle, 4, playing in a sand box, and one of daughter Hether, then three months old, sitting in her swing

The entries by Traudt, Mrs. Dauer and Briese will be forwarded to KINSA to compete with color entries from newspapers in Mexico, Canada and the United States. They will compete for prizes which include $100 merit awards, $500 honor awards and the top prize of $5,000 or an expense-paid trip around the world for two

Winning entries by Mrs. Dauer and Briese will be published in FOCUS later

Steve Traudt captured the regal pose of a bird to win the grand prize in the color competition.

Amateur With Experience

Steve Traudt

Steve Traudt is no newcomer to photography. Although he is an amateur, his work is far from amateurish

Active in photography as a serious hobby for about 10 years, the 27-year-old Lincolnite has been a member of the Lincoln Camera Club for about three and one-half years

Traudt says that for him quality is a direct result of quantity. He shoots about 70 to 80 rolls of color film each year and shot 28 rolls of color slides, for example, while on a 12-day vacation this summer

Traudt develops his own color and black and white film in his darkroom at home. Although his job as a pharmacist takes up much of his time, he spends five or six hours a week on his hobby

Traudt, who was a weekly winner in the 1974 Sunday Journal and Star/Kodak International Snapshot Awards contest, has also won ribbons in State Fair photography competition. Also, one of his slides was among the 60 transparencies, chosen from about 7,000 entries, in a Photographic Society of America bicentennial display

Traudt likes to share his hobby and teaches photography to a group of 4-H's and a Campfire Girls troop, ages 7-8

Traudt and wife Adelita live at 2726 Washington

Color Reproduction

Some color photographs present difficulties for reproduction on newspaper presses. Steve Traudt's photo of the golden pheasant was judged grand prize winner in The Sunday Journal and Star/KINSA snapshot contest, but its very dark basic color and light golden areas proved to be more a combination that the newspaper cannot reproduce satisfactorily. Therefore Traudt's winning picture does not appear in color.

Scrambling through the ring is not just child's play for 2-year-old East German toddler at a creche. It's part of program to arouse early interest in sports, spot the gifted and direct them toward specialized sports schools as they mature.

German girls win gold medals in 11 of 13 swimming events and 9 of 14 track and field events at Montreal. "Anyone who watched on TV was shocked by the sight of those enormous muscle-bound women with huge shoulders and arms that a furniture mover would be proud of. Weight lifting alone would never account for such massive back development."

East German officials at Montreal angrily and adamantly denied that biochemistry had a hand in the medal sweep. A Canadian broadcaster who asked a trainer about the deep voices emanating from some of the strapping water sprites was huffily told: "They have come here to swim, not to sing, why do you concern yourself with their voices?"

Many devotees of the Olympic code look upon the advent of steroids, stabilizers and other medical sides as the most devious development in the alchemist's art.

Manipulation, Not Health

"The greatest danger to the games today is the manipulation of athletes with biochemistry," said Willi Daume, head of the West German Olympic Committee and father of the Munich Olympics. "Modern laboratories have been turned into alchemists' kitchens with the unscrupulous aim of dehumanizing athletes to improve performance. Doctors no longer believe that the health of athletes is their highest objective but rather the manipulation of athletes."

Dr. Marder, who now works as a research assistant in sports medicine at the German Sports University in Cologne, is certain that steroids were widely used at Montreal. "It's nonsense to think controls can be set up to detect them. From my viewpoint, few shot putters can reach 19 meters (62.3 feet) without steroids, and I am 100 per cent convinced it is not possible to exceed 21 meters (68.9 feet) without steroids." In this summer's Olympics, the winning toss was 21.05 meters.

In his time at the sports club in Halle, steroids were given to both boys and girls to help them "reach high performance levels." Dr. Marder said he knew for "certain it was going on, but not from my own experience. It is obvious from watching the Montreal Olympics that the practice still continues."

Side effects among girls — a subject many doctors think requires much further study — include basic body changes such as deepening of the voice, a broad back and wide shoulders, flattening of the chest, skin changes, and sometimes among non-caucasian women hair growths on the chest. The masculinizing process may also result in such delayed psychological effects as pronounced lesbian tendencies.

"Long-range effects are to be expected when the side-effects are disregarded," said Dr. Marder, "but generally within two years after the steroid injections have ceased the muscles diminish and the body returns to more feminine proportions."

Many women athletes in the West refuse male hormone injections from team doctors because of the danger of their bodies becoming too masculine. "They don't want to look like tanks in their tank suits," quipped one of the U.S. trainers.

Dr. Marder is convinced that the West has greatly exaggerated and misread the part played by steroids and drugs in the East German success story at Montreal. "That was only a small part of the picture. It was the system itself that triumphed. In East Germany sports are a matter of foreign policy. They are aimed at polishing the image of the social system abroad, not providing heroes for the masses."

Policy: To Clobber U.S. Athletes

Whatever the troubles at home, East Germany's athletic alchemists have been given the job of turning out Olympic gold as proof to the world and especially the West that the socialist system works.

"In 1973," says Dr. Marder, who was there then, "the East Germans decided as matter of national policy to clobber the American women athletes at Montreal and all the training sights were set on that goal. In 1980 in Moscow they want to demolish the American team completely, both men and women, in all sports. Except maybe basketball."

From his years in the laboratory in Halle, he thinks it may happen.

"The day of the weekend athlete is over," Dr. Marder shook his head sadly. "Despite the success of their men swimmers, America can no longer remain so set in its ways of training high-performance athletes. A Jim Thorpe or a John Naber may still come along, purely by chance, but why leave the future to chance? Top athletes require better training opportunities, better social and medical care. East Germany doesn't have the vast pool of talent available in the United States but it has the technology to produce high-performance athletes."

In other words, the smoke from the factory is there for all to see. Westerners, beware; comrades take care, alchemists at work.

East German Sports Technology

rowers must be at least 1.85 meters (six feet) tall, weigh 77 kilos (170 pounds), have at least three full years of growth ahead of them, and have no spine or back defects. Lesser physical specimens need not apply at the medal factory.

The Leipzig center devises menus and diets for the centralized club kitchens to cook for the different sports disciplines. Weight lifters and rowers chomp into 5,000 calories a day. Gymnasts, figure skaters and other weight-watchers have their calories counted for them by the computer.

At the Chemie Sports Club the future medalists often dine on steaks, oranges, eggs and other items not always seen in the markets of Halle. "Three years ago," recalls Dr. Marder, "it was difficult to meet the menu standards. The food was not always available. Bananas were always hard to come by, and sometimes eggs. But the clubs always had a priority on available food and were given what the public never saw."

All Administered From Berlin

The entire system of turning out world-class athletes is administered from Berlin by the High Performance Sports Commission. The ministry's chief commissar is Manfred Ewald, who also serves as chairman of East Germany's Olympic Committee. Berling monitors the Leipzig center and its computer and calls the tune on matters of procedure and protocol.

Athletes below the age of 16 are forbidden to smoke. After that, it is merely frowned upon. Until 1972, the sexes were rigidly separated at the training camps and schools. Now boys and girls train together, often meeting the same goals, as California swimming coaches knew they could years ago. Sex relations used to be strictly forbidden for athletes under 19, but now "partner relations" are allowed and sometimes even "steered" by the commissars.

Kornelia Ender, at 17, is engaged to 25-year-old Roland Matthes, a world-class swimmer who didn't fare too well against the Americans this time. At Montreal's Olympic pool, Kornelia demurely handed her engagement ring to a judge before entering the water with her famous explosive dive.

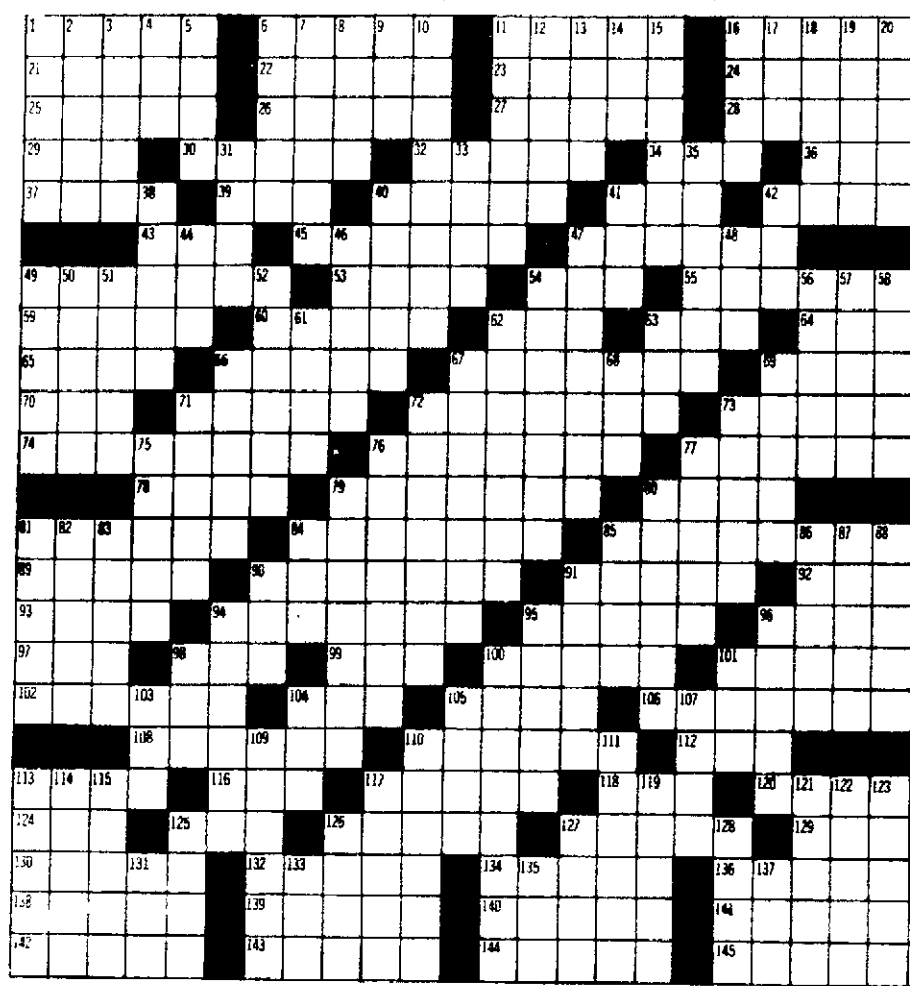

Top swimmers like Ender may train to pop music — she prefers soft rock — but a warning is given if such Western diversions become habitual.

At age 14 — never earlier, but more often at 15 — the athlete destined for gold first encounters the most controversial part of the system. Where needed, according to Marder, the men in the white coats begin administering steroids, sex hormones, daily over a period of four to five weeks to build up the arm and back muscles.

First used in America, steroids have been in common use for several years among a number of Olympic teams. "East and West are pretty well balanced on manipulating their athletes with steroids," says Dr. Adolf Metzner, a West German sports doctor who specializes in the problems and detection of doped athletes. "Discus throwers and shot putters with those herculean builds have anabolika (German for steroids) to thank." Metzner has no doubt that male hormones helped the East

Designs of 1976 Christmas Stamps

Designs of the two 1976 Christmas stamps are based upon an 1855 Nathaniel Currier print and a madonna and child painting executed 200 years ago, the U.S. Postal Service announces.

The Currier lithograph, titled "Winter Pastime," was placed on sale two years before Currier teamed with James Ives in the famous Currier & Ives partnership.

John Singleton Copley's "Nativity" was a natural choice for a 1976 Christmas stamp, since the painting was done in 1776 in London by the Boston-born painter.

"Winter Pastime" is the second Currier lithograph to be reproduced on a U.S. Christmas stamp. Currier's "The Road-Winter" was used in 1974.

It was after they formed their partnership that Currier & Ives achieved greatest success. Together they published more than 7,000 titles. The smaller Currier & Ives prints were hand-colored in assembly-line fashion and sold for 15 to 75 cents. Larger prints were completed by young artists and sold for as much as $3. Collectors today pay premium prices for them.

"Winter Pastime" shows skaters and sledgers in a holiday setting on and around a frozen pond with snow-covered hills in the background.

The subtly painted "Nativity" is Copley's only madonna and child. Art historians believe that Copley's wife and newly born daughter posed for the painting, now in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Copley painted the Virgin in a long white dress which reflects the taste of the 18th century. She is surrounded by a vigorously painted group of shepherds and animals. A landscape and rising moon is set in the background.

Both the horizontal stamps are the standard commemorative size of 1.44 x 0.84 inches or 36.5 x 21.3 millimeters.

Senator Voted His Picture On 1937 Coin

By Leon Lindheim
Special Writer

U.S. Senator once had the privilege of voting to have his own picture on a U.S. coin.

The Arkansas Centennial Commission petitioned Congress in 1936 to strike coins commemorating the state's 100th anniversary, asking that their senior senator, Joseph T. Robinson, be pictured on the obverse.

Congressional approval was received on June 26, 1936, and 25,265 Robinson-Arkansas half-dollars were struck in January of 1937. Sen. Robinson died within six months, unable to enjoy the pleasure and privilege of being pictured on a "coin of the realm."

Double-O, Double-L Double-T Aleck

By William A. Ralidy
New York — Edna Ferber called him "that New Jersey Nero who thinks his pinafore is a toga"; Harpo Marx described him as something that got loose from the Macy's Thanksgiving Day parade; playwright George S. Kaufman, after playing host to him for a weekend, said: "I would have gone to Alaska to get him out of the house"; and when Helen Hayes had her first theater date with him, her mother greeted the roly-poly figure at the door, went to her daughter and gasped: "Let me go back out and tell him you're not feeling well."

Alexander Woolcott, The Man Who Came to Dinner himself, who had the biggest appetite (and the most to say) at the legendary Algonquin Round Table, was America's loudest town crier in the theater and literary world in the decades between the two world wars. He was, as a longtime enemy once said, "a competent old horror with a style that combined clear treacle with pure black bile."

He was also so much more than that. Despite his overenthusiasm and the heavy venom, he had an envied eye for discovering and encouraging new talent in the creative arts. He persuaded both George S. Kaufman and Charles MacArthur to become playwrights, insisted that the young Paul Robeson, just out of Rutgers College, become a professional singer, and hailed Eugene O'Neill as "the most interesting playwright of the new generation in America" when his works were first being done in a little pay-as-you-enter theater in Greenwich Village.

Two hundred and fifty pounds of arsenic and honey (mixed in whatever proportions his mood dictated), Alexander Woolcott, who helped discover the Lunts, Katharine Cornell, Ruth Gordon and the Marx Brothers and turn W.C. Fields from a juggler to a comic and Will Rogers from a comedian to a writer, has remained both a legend and an enigma since he died almost 33 years ago.

Biographer Howard Teichman has finally put the man into focus in his witty and fact-filled book Smart Aleck, just published by William Morrow. What Edwin Newman calls "a bizarre American institution," Woolcott, sage and cultural moth, finally emerges as a human being as well.

One of the most curious things about Alexander Woolcott, "a man who could make so much noise in so many great cities," is the fact that he was born in a commune, the Phalanx, in Red Bank, N.J. The Phalanx, an experiment in group living, was similar in concept to the better known Brook Farm, where all men, women and children worked in mutual harmony and shared whatever profits. Outsiders suspected that free love was practiced there, but this was sheer gossip on their part. The infant, who was nicknamed Mr. Guppy on arrival (an illusion to Dickens' novel Bleak House), was raised on the produce from the commune's garden and cannery but would eventually break bread with kings and presidents.

The mention of kings immediately brings to mind a Woolcott anecdote and Smart Aleck is laced with dozens of them. Alexander the Great (and author Teichman points out that the brandy Alexander existed before the critic) was dining in London with the then Prince of Wales.

Teichman writes: "After the ladies had been excused and the gentlemen were about to start on their port and cigars, the Prince begged those present to retire as he wished a private conversation with Mr. Woolcott. The gentlemen bowed out as requested, leaving his Royal Highness and a Woolcott whose imagination caught fire with

Humdinger UNP Sale Coming Up

The University of Nebraska Press will hold a sidewalk book sale from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday on Broyhill Fountain Mall north of the Nebraska Union on the Downtown Campus.

In the event of rain Wednesday — and UNP officials will rejoice with farmers and the rest of us if it does rain — the sale will be held Thursday and Friday.

Most of the books are damaged and many are surplus volumes, UNP officials say, but all are real bargains. No pages are missing in any of the books, but some are torn, shopworn or otherwise soiled.

Part of the sale again this year by popular student demand will be the rummage barrel. And there will be periodic surprise specials at the trill of a whistle, the toot of a horn or the beat of a drum.

The sales area should be easy to spot. Four 40-inch helium-filled balloons will float above it and pennants will be scattered around and throughout it.

probabilities: matters of state, perhaps, a speech to the Empire, or even an introduction by Woolcott to a volume of letters by Edward.

"When the doors were closed, the Prince looked squarely at him and began with 'Woolcott ... 'Sir,' came the anticipatory reply. At that precise moment he might gladly have been willing to lay down his life for the Crown. 'You've something to do with that magazine from the States, the New Yorker, don't you?' Woolcott's outthrust chest began to deflate and his spine sagged against the back of his chair. 'Yes, Sir, I do.' 'Then why the devil don't I get it more regularly? Do look into it, will you?'"

The boy from the commune was a regular guest at the White House, which he described as "the best boardinghouse in Washington." He was even acidic about FDR, who he complained "pours whiskey for his friends the way he might pour it for voters the night before election day ... heavily. His drinks are always too strong."

When he checked into the Hotel White House, he often liked to bring pals around to join in the largesse, which didn't seem to bother the Roosevelts. When Aleck insisted on late suppers brought to his room (usually the Lincoln Room), the chef gave notice saying: "I've served a lot of people, but at two in the morning ... ?"

It was, of course, Woolcott's overreach in the hospitality department that led to the famous comedy The Man Who Came to Dinner.

The theater critic literally took over Moss Hart's Bucks County home one weekend when he visited the playwright, who practically had a party in celebration of his leaving. "But suppose he'd broken his leg on the way out and I had to keep him here?" He said to his pal, George S. Kaufman. Kaufman looked across at him and whipped a sheet of paper into his typewriter, reading: "Act One, Scene One," "The Man" and a legend was born!

Biographer Teichman, who wrote an equally absorbing account of George S. Kaufman, explodes rumors as well as he recounts old Round Table stories. Woolcott, for one thing, was probably not the homosexual some people thought he was. A glandular imbalance from adolescence left him an almost complete outsider as far as any sexual activity is concerned.

His fellow reporter on the New Yorker, Frank Sullivan, said these words in his eulogy: "In 1928, when he and I were on the staff of the world, a dear friend of mine died — Nora Bayes. Aleck asked me to write down some reminiscences of Nora that he could use in his drama column. I wrote a piece about that gay and exuberant girl, so like Woolcott himself in rugged vitality and high spirits, but when I came to the end and tried to put down a goodbye to Nora it somehow wouldn't work. Aleck read what I had written, then said: "Well, you don't seem to have ended it. How about this for a last sentence?"

"And at the end of the copy he wrote: 'I do not know where Nora Bayes is now, but I do know that whoever is with her is having a good time.' Well, Aleck, old friend, that goes for you today."

Wherever The Man Who Came to Dinner takes his double order of devil's food or angel cake, I had a feast with Smart Aleck, and Woolcott, to the end, was very good company.

Confessions of a Ranger

Six Years With the Texas Rangers. By James B. Gillett; University of Nebraska Press.

James B. Gillett's career with one of history's most famous law enforcement groups lives again in this Bison Book reprint of a work originally published by Yale University Press more than a half-century ago.

In a fine first-person frontier narrative, Gillett tells the story of the Texas Rangers from 1875 to 1881, when he was one of them.

The beauty and wildness of a country marred by outlawry and Indian depredations, long weeks on the trail with bacon and beans, Winchesters and Colts, and the determination and friendship of those who were Rangers are the things this book is about.

Gillett's experiences with such storied men as Victorio the Apache, Sam Bass the train robber, Lt. N. O. Reynolds of the Rangers and Dallas Stoudenmire, El Paso's famous city marshal, are recalled in vivid detail.

An irregular force with unorthodox techniques, the Rangers have been credited with cleaning up a large portion of West Texas that was a hotbed of murderers, thieves and savages when Gillett joined the force. In this account, edited by M. M. Quaife, the late lawman provides his version of how they did it.

He pulls few punches, however, despite his obvious and understandable dedication to the organization that he said gave him the happiest memories of his life.

He doesn't hide the fact that desperadoes sometimes infiltrated the ranks, becoming Texas Rangers themselves. He writes of poor judgment by at least one Ranger commander and the act of another that some claimed was outright cowardice.

Gillett recounts how he personally kidnapped an accused murderer in Mexico and returned him to the United States while being pursued by the fellow's neighbors. He ultimately delivered his prisoner to a New Mexican jail, but an unruly mob removed the man from custody and hanged him, touching off an international incident of sorts.

Gillett frankly admitted that he decided to kidnap the man because of the reward on his head and because "I wanted the notoriety." He believed the latter would lead to something better than the Ranger sergeancy he held at that time.

It didn't help him there, but he claims it was partly responsible for the Santa Fe Railroad's offering him a job as captain of the firm's security guard at a salary three times greater than he was then receiving.

Not long with the railroad, Gillett subsequently became assistant city marshal, then city marshal of El Paso. He later resigned to go into ranching.

His most exciting years were those with the Texas Rangers. Through this book, he shares them with the world.

Bacon Says Book Tells What Papers Wouldn't

By Dick Saunders

(c) 1976 Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — "Hollywood Is a Four-Letter Town." That's what James Bacon calls his new book (Regnery). Ask him which four letters they are, and he replies, "For family newspapers, I say they're S-T-A-R. But actually, they're those other four letters."

Skim through his affectionately raunchy reminiscences of the intimate lives of the stars, and you know which four he means.

"It's kind of an outrageous book. All the stuff I couldn't write about in the newspapers," says Bacon, who was the Associated Press' Hollywood correspondent from 1948 to 1966 and now writes a syndicated gossip column for the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner.

The book is full of booze, brawls and sex, sex, sex. Bacon tells you what the Chicago Syndicate boys said to Sammy Davis Jr. to convince him that marrying Kim Novak wasn't the best idea in the world. ("You got one eye missing. You want to try for two?")

He tells Mae West's fountain-of-youth beauty secret, which was "too indelicate" to print when she revealed it to him in 1968 — enemas.

And he tells about what he claims was his own love affair with Marilyn Monroe back in 1949.

"She was wonderful," Bacon says. "She had a way of making a man feel as if he was the only man in her life. She was gorgeous in her 30s. But this was when she was only 22 or 23 — before 'Asphalt Jungle' and 'All About Eve.' She was fresh out of heaven."

In Bacon's reminiscences, Marilyn is funny and sunny. But the image most of us have of her is a sad one.

"She was both," Bacon says. "Like Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Most of the time, she was Norma Jean Baker, a bewildered little waif. It would take her five hours to put on her makeup, and then she'd emerge as Marilyn Monroe, movie star."

"Of course she got sadder toward the end — the drinking and the pills. I've always been convinced her death was accidental, because they found her with her hair uncombed ... her nails unkempt. When she was Norma Jean Baker, she was an untidy person. When she was Marilyn Monroe, movie star, she was fastidious."

Are the rumors true about Marilyn Monroe and John and Bobby Kennedy?

"It's common knowledge about her and JFK," Bacon says. "She talked to me openly about it. After all, when you're having an affair with the President of the United States, you want to tell someone about it ...

"About Marilyn and Bobby Kennedy, I have no proof. The only time I saw them together, she had horn-rimmed glasses and a notebook. Every time he'd say something political, she'd write it down, like a college sophomore taking notes."

Nowadays, gossip columnists can tell some of the juicy stories they had to keep to themselves in the old days. But Bacon says it doesn't make his job any easier.

"If anything, it's tougher. Nothing is shocking anymore. What's going on in Hollywood is nothing to what's in Washington ...

"Movie stars today are basically businessmen. They carry briefcases and talk about production deals. As soon as you get into that, you're dull."

Indiana Hills, Lake Have Pretty Colors But 'Big Red' There Is for Basketball

The author, a former Sunday Journal and Star staff member, now lives in Indianapolis.

By Jan Kreuscher
Special contributor

The "Go Big Red" signs are likely to make University of Nebraska football fans think that Hoosier hospitality is going a bit too far.

Huskers who believe that the red welcome mat is out for them, however, are in for a surprise. The signs are for the Indiana University Hurryin' Hoosiers, who also go by the name The Big Red.

The B in their Big however, stands for basketball, in which sport IU holds the national championship. Football, in these parts, is a chance for the fans to warm up their lungs for the basketball season.

Nebraskans who plan to follow the real Big Red to Indiana for the Sept. 18 football game are advised to forget about flying commercially into Bloomington. First, commercial flights into Bloomington are infrequent; and more importantly, there is much to see by car in south-central Indiana.

Instead, fly to Indianapolis Weir Cook Airport and rent a car. The IU football stadium is an hour away.

Hardy souls who prefer to drive the almost 700 miles from Lincoln to Bloomington should take I-80 to I-74 (near Davenport, Iowa) and continue on I-74 until it hits I-465 (the beltway surrounding Indianapolis). The head south and east to Hwy. 37 and on to Bloomington.

While Bloomington has acceptable motels, but those who plan to take advantage of the natural beauty of this part of Indiana will stay in nearby Nashville or at the Inn of the Four Winds on Lake Monroe.

Nashville, a scant 15 miles east of Bloomington over scenic, winding Hwy. 46, is nestled into rolling hills and surrounded by dense forests. It's still a bit early for the Hills o' Brown County to be awash with vivid colors, but the rustic lushness still has a charm.

It's here you can see Mail Pouch Tobacco signs on rickety barns along the road, buy red "galluses" (suspenders) at a general store and eat fried biscuits and apple butter until you think you'll burst.

Antique shops and art galleries abound in this community as do a wealth of craft shops containing everything from the terrible to the valuable. Artists began gathering here near the turn of the century drawn by the ever-changing forest landscape possibilities and the reputation of T. C. Steele, an American impressionist. Their work, known as the Brown County School, is plentiful and tends toward quiet forest scenes.

Nearby Abe Martin State Park (named after the fictional character created by humorist Kin Hubbard) and Yellowwood State Forest both have gentle drives, a variety of hiking trails and camping facilities.

The more adventurous may try driving down the back gravel and dirt roads (with names like Greasy Creek Rd. and Elm Chute Rd.) to villages like Gnaw Bone and Bean Blossom or spots like Bear Wallow and Stoney Lonesome.

Another 15 miles east of Nashville on Hwy. 46 is Columbus, Ind., home of Cummins Engine and philanthropist-industrialist J. Irwin Miller, the Republican who ranked high on former President Richard Nixon's "enemies list."

Largely through Miller's efforts, Columbus — with a population between that of Grand Island and Hastings — has become an architectural show place. Even branch banks and firehouses have been designed by world-famous architects, and the churches and public buildings draw people from all over the world for the guided and map tours.

The Commons, a downtown shopping mall with an intriguing kinetic sculpture, is hard to miss across from the restored county courthouse. Across the street, however, tucked into an ordinary looking block of stores is a gem often overlooked. Zakaraki's is a turn-of-the-century ice cream parlor and candy store complete with etched-glass mirrors, oak walls and a callopie.

Husker fans who prefer to see trees in a lake setting are advised to seek out Lake Monroe, a few miles south of Bloomington. The 11,000-acre reservoir sits in the center of rolling heavily-forested hills and can be seen easily by car.

Inn of the Four Winds, with party and dining facilities, guest rooms, indoor-outdoor swimming pool and a marina, provides both a scenic view of the lake and good accommodations.

Bloomington itself depends heavily on the university for its existence.

The campus is a sprawling one with large fraternity and sorority houses and campus buildings scattered throughout large grassy areas and clumps of trees. The main part of the campus, a mile or two from the football stadium and adjoining basketball arena, is an enjoyable place to wander.

The huge somewhat-Gothic Student Union Building has several restaurants and shops, a hotel and many recreational and cultural facilities. Nearby — and so nestled between large buildings to be inobtrusive — is the home of the Kinsey Institute where a former IU professor did his research on human sexuality and changed at least the conversational fabric of U.S. life.

The visitor who prefers urban distractions should stop in Indianapolis either before or after the game. Three particular items of note in the sprawling city (about twice the size of Omaha) are the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, home of the Indianapolis 500, the Indianapolis Museum of Art and the downtown area.

The Speedway, which attracts some 400,000 people to the 500-mile race each May, is on the west side, not far from where I-74 meets I-465. A museum of racing memorabilia and old race and touring cars is open every day with admission $1 for adults and children free. Would-be Indy drivers and those curious about what the track looks like can also take a 50-cent spin around the track on a minibus driven by guides who point out where some of the more spectacular accidents occurred and explain other points of interest inside the two-and-one-half mile oval.

The Indianapolis Museum of Art at 38th St. and State Rd. 421 (Northwestern Ave.) is a limestone and glass building on a former Lilly estate. Overlooking the White River, the museum houses fine collections of oriental art, one of the largest collections of J.W.H. Turner watercolors and Robert Indiana's LOVE sculpture, which inspired the U.S. postage stamp so popular a few years ago.

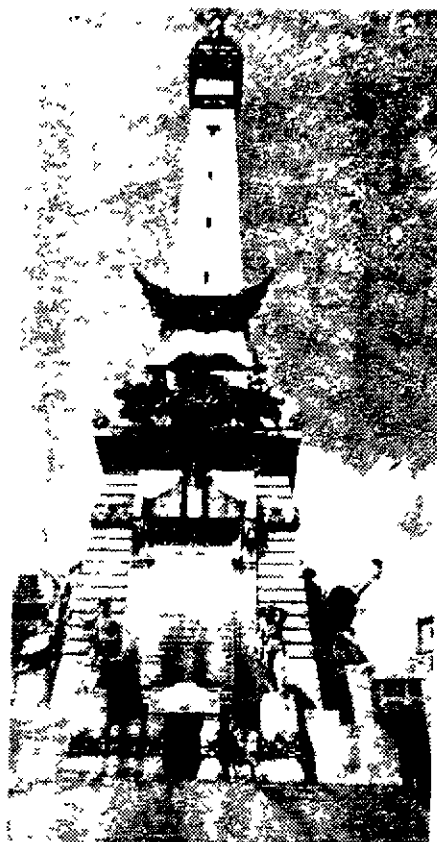

The museum grounds were landscaped by the same Olmsted Brothers who designed New York City's Central Park and contain a decorative arts pavilion, concert terraces, greenhouses, civic theater, fountains and sculpture.

Sculpture and fountains also abound in downtown Indianapolis, an area successfully fighting the decline of the urban center. Start at Monument Circle in the center and observe the statues and waterfall-fountains. This was the first monument erected in the U.S. honoring the common soldier and sailor.

North of Monument Circle is a series of parks and monuments and the national headquarters of the American Legion. The large Gothic building on the east side of Meridian St. is not a church, but the Scottish Rite Cathedral. Across the street is the War Memorial which was the center of legal controversy in the late '60s when the American Legion refused to allow the Indiana Civil Liberties Union to meet there.

The best bird's eye view of the city is from the observation deck of the Indian National Bank, a tall marble and glass building which dominates the city skyline and can be seen miles away. Two restaurants on the top of the building — the elegant but expensive LaTour and the more moderate Tellers Cage — also provide good views of the city.

Another gourmet Indianapolis restaurant, King Cole, is a half-block south of Monument Circle.

At Monument Circle in Indianapolis one finds this memorial to the common soldier and sailor.

To the east is the State Capitol with shiny gold dome. To the west is the mushroom-shaped 17,000-seat Market Square Arena, home of professional hockey and basketball, rock concerts and the state basketball finals (a ticket scalper's delight). Next to the arena is the County-City Building and the City Market, which is undergoing expansion.

Nebraskans should feel comfortable in Hoosierland. It's midwestern openness with a dollop of southern drawl. Hoosiers were pleased with the reception they had in Nebraska last year and seem ready to reciprocate. By the way, if you need a conversation starter, ask where the name Hoosier came from. Chances are, you won't get the same answer twice.

Model for stamp at right was this sculpture at Indianapolis Museum of Art.

Visitors today can ride or hike to the same spots where once Bluecoats and Indians were locked in final combat during the last of the bloody Indian wars. Located near Crawford, in extreme northwestern Nebraska, this picturesque Pine Ridge country is a land of rugged buttes and scenic hills. 1887: The state commissioners officially designated Lincoln as the site for the Nebraska Capitol and immediately began surveying and staking off the town for lots.

Saying they were not afraid of the grasshoppers, Russian Mennonites continued to settle in Nebraska areas.

Thieves and pickpockets plagued the State Fair. A total of 45 ended up in the city jail.

1926: George W. Holdrege, a pioneer in Midwest railroad development primarily with the Burlington, was buried in Wynka Cemetery, following his death at the age of 75.

Emil A. Glantz put an end to the noise of low-flying airplanes coming from a private airfield near his home south of Lincoln by constructing a wire fence 45 feet high on the boundary line between his property and the airfield.

1936: U.S. Sen. Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan warned a crowd of 3,000 at Omaha of the potential danger of a "drouth in the public treasury."

Mrs. Guy Lake was re-elected president of the Lancaster County WCTU.

Two 14-year-old Fremont youths escaped from the Dodge County jail, injuring Sheriff John J. Gallagher. However, they were stopped by the sheriff's wife and daughter, who pushed them into a 20 gallon potato vat.

1956: A plan to combine the city and county jails was tabled by the Lincoln City Council.

Bids totaling $193,000 were accepted for construction of a new governor's mansion at 14th and H.

The University of Nebraska said it would ask an $88.6 million appropriation from the 1967 Legislature for the next biennium. This would be a 91% increase.

A total of 51,000 elementary, secondary and college students had started back to school in Lincoln.

What's Record Miles?

By Tad Burness
Special Writer

Mercedes-Benz believes that the illustrated 1953 diesel model of its "170" series may be setting an all-time endurance record. It had covered nearly 800,000 miles at the time of writing. Will it last a million miles or more? Its owner, in Pennsylvania, thinks it can.

The original engine was used for over 625,000 miles. Then, when it failed to maintain its former oil pressure level, a used 1951 engine was substituted.

Mercedes-Benz of North America believes that this '53 car has certainly set a record for total mileage among all diesel cars. And what about gasoline-powered cars? Has anyone driven another make of automobile farther than this? M-B would like to hear from anyone who has done better.

A neighbor of ours, formerly a cab driver, had a '67 Chevrolet sedan which he drove as his taxi and his personal car for over 350,000 miles — and it was still going strong when he moved away.

I would be interested to hear from anyone who has owned any other car that lasted for over 200,000 miles, and will personally answer each letter I receive. Write to Auto Album, in care of The Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star, Box 81689, Lincoln NE 68501.

Be Ready to Travel Before You Travel

By Chandler Forman

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

If you're getting ready for a vacation trip to foreign lands, you can eliminate much of the last-minute hassle by paying attention to this checklist:

Passport. You'll need one and you should apply for it at least two weeks before departure. You'll need proof of citizenship (your old passport or, if you're a first-timer, a birth certificate or other valid document), two photos 2 1/2-by-2 1/2 to 3-by-3 inches (simplest way is to patronize one of the passport photo shops) and the $13 fee. Passports are valid for five years and are not renewable. This year's passports are handsome bicentennial covers.

Visas. Many countries do not require them but where they are needed, apply to the local consular office of each country.

Inoculations. You don't need that smallpox vaccination certificate to get back into the United States any more, but you should obtain cholera and other inoculations if you plan to visit countries with infected areas. For information, phone the U.S. Public Health Service.

Money. Of course you'll need lots to take along and the safest way is to carry most of it in traveler's checks obtainable at any bank. We've found it handy to secure some foreign money in small denominations for tips and taxis on arrival for each country we plan to visit. The international tellers at the larger banks can take care of this. Better yet, buy tip packs, little envelopes with $10 in small change for each country, plus a currency converter.

International Drivers License. If you're going to drive a rental car overseas this is a good thing to have even if many countries will recognize your home state license. It costs only $3 and is issued by the local motor club to nonmembers as well as members. You'll need your valid state driver's license and two passport photos.

Eurailpass. It's one of Europe's biggest bargains: unlimited first-class travel aboard crack trains at $145 for 15 days, $180 for 21 days, $220 for a month, $300 for two months, $360 for three months; student's two-month second-class ticket $195. See any travel agent.

Medical. In case you should become ill abroad, it's wise to know how to contact an English-speaking doctor. You can join IAMAT (International Association for Medical Assistance to Travelers) by writing IAMAT, Suite 5620, Empire State Building, 350 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10001, and obtain a list of doctors the world over. No charge but a $5 donation with your application will help keep the good work going. Intermedic, a similar organization, charges $5 for each individual membership, $9 for a family, and supplies similar information. Write Intermedic, 777 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Packing. Pack light and you'll travel more comfortably. Most guidebooks carry suggested lists of clothing and personal needs for the places you'll be going.

One Finger on Trigger, One on Rewind Key

A quarter-century ago (the exact date was Sept. 4, 1951) Harry S. Truman made the first nationally televised presidential speech.

His address to the Japanese Peace Treaty Conference, carried across the continent by a brand new series of relay towers, was fairly dull, even by the standards of people who were not yet used to seeing politicians on television.

"It was delivered without flair," said one reporter. A television critic wrote, "The President spoke somberly and quietly and occasionally emphasized his points by raising and lowering his open hands in the position commonly adopted for winding knitting yarn."

Truman did not tailor his talk to the tube. In fact, he would bristle at suggestions that he change his speaking style to make a better impression on radio or TV.

Not quite 25 years later, one of Truman's admirers, President Ford, was delivering a rousing speech, full of histrionics, to... a video tape camera. After he completed the address (a draft of the acceptance speech he expected to make to the Republican National Convention), an aide played back the video tape so the President could decide what changes in gestures and vocal inflections would give the speech maximum video impact. Then Ford gave the speech again to the camera.

It is a measure of how far we've come in 25 years of televised politics. No one is surprised to learn that the President of the United States spent hours standing, figuratively, with one finger on the nuclear trigger and another on the rewind button of a Sony.

Politicians now willingly submit to the blandishments of advertising men, television consultants, makeup men and other assorted image makers in a desperate effort to make themselves look good on the little screen that is now in 98 per cent of all homes in the United States.

And so, Ford harangues a video tape camera to improve his delivery, and Richard Nixon used to run in place before television appearances to make his sallow complexion look ruddy on color TV.

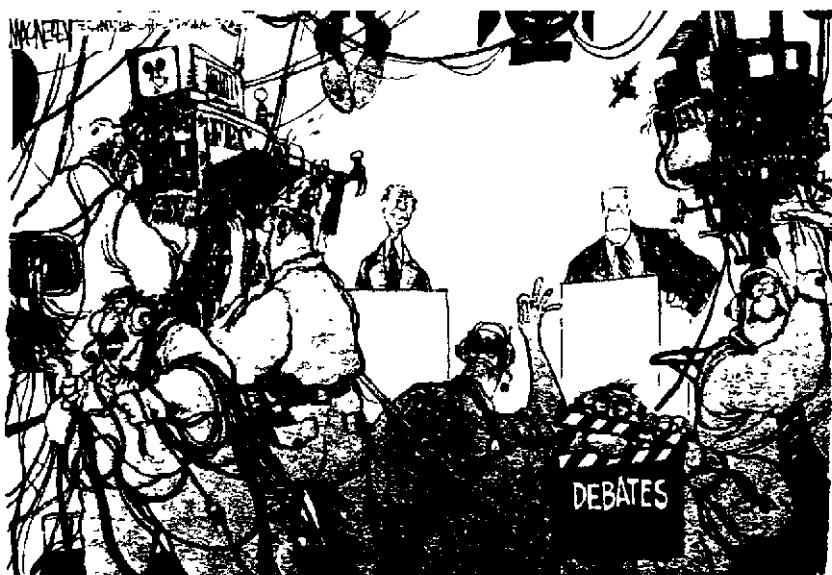

Lyndon Johnson, the first President to be obsessed by television, would occasionally shout back at the three sets he kept in the Oval Office.

"To think that an old soldier should come to this," presidential candidate Dwight David Eisenhower remarked as he read pat answers from idiot cards during the filming of campaign commercials in a Manhattan studio in 1952.

The Eisenhower television spots were classics of early political advertising on television — short, punchy and almost totally meaningless. Erik Barnouw describes one in his history of television, "Tube of Plenty."

"Announcer: 'Eisenhower addresses the nation:'

"Citizen: 'What about the cost of living, General?'"

Image Maker May Fail

Does "packaging" of candidates do them any good? More important, does it do the voters any harm? There has been plenty of speculation but little solid evidence on both scores.

People have been alarmed at the "packaging" of candidates for longer than you might think. In 1956 an author named John Schneider wrote a novel called "The Golden Kazoo" about a nonentity named Henry Clay Adams who was shaped and molded by advertising men into a winning candidate.

Joe McGinniss continued this theme in "The Selling of the President: 1960," only this time it was non-fiction and the candidate was named Richard M. Nixon. In a 1974 film called "The Candidate," Robert Redford played a packaged candidate who, after winning his election, pleaded, "What do we do now?"

The case against the high-powered media techniques was stated by Robert MacNeil, now a newscaster with the Public Broadcasting System, in his 1968 book, "The People Machine."

"At least, in earlier times, the passive, disinterested voter was master of his own mind. Voting by instinct, by emotion, by prejudice, by bribery as he may have done: ignorant of the issues, unfamiliar with the candidates, putty in the hands of political bosses, perhaps; each voter still had the power, if he wished, to resist and to make a decision in a private corner of his own thinking. Will that still be possible if the minds of ordinary persons can be bored into and filled with subliminal influences? The dangers are well worth contemplating."

But there's another side. First, you must remember that Nixon, despite all the media manipulation McGinniss wrote about, almost blew the huge lead he held over Hubert Humphrey at the beginning of the 1968 campaign, when Humphrey staggered from the bloody Chicago convention to lead a decimated party. Nixon's popular support, as measured by polls, decreased steadily throughout the campaign.

Media critic Edwin Diamond noted that Harry Treleavan, Nixon's top image maker in 1968, had five political clients in 1970 and four of them lost. "The over-all record of the image makers in the 1970 elections was... dismal," Diamond writes in his book, "The Tin Kazoo."

Diamond believes modern voters are sophisticated enough to see through the admen's sloganeering. One of the few scientific studies of the effect of television on politics upholds this view. Professors Thomas E. Patterson and Robert D. McClure of Syracuse University interviewed several hundred voters during and after the 1972 presidential campaign. They concluded:

"In presidential politics, advertising image-making is a wasted effort... The vast majority of Americans are immune to advertising's propaganda. They are not manipulated. And the reason is simple: They know too much; their views on politics are too clearly defined."

"Eisenhower: 'My wife, Mamie, worries about the same thing I tell her it's our job to change that on November fourth!'"

A candidate might not be able to get away with that nowadays. Audiences have become more sophisticated, but then so have the commercials.

The Newsreel Look

The most recent trend has been toward newsreel-type commercials, also known as "cinema verite." Nowadays when you see a politician campaigning, chances are that one of the camera crews following him is from his own advertising agency. The film can be edited into a low-key, realistic looking campaign commercial.

Such advertising is considered especially effective because surveys have shown that voters do not differentiate between these commercials, which they would normally tend not to trust, and the television news shows, which they do trust. Thus these commercials increase the amount of perceived time a candidate receives on the network news programs. And campaign experts believe in Guthman's Law, formulated by a campaign aide to John F. Kennedy named Edwin Guthman, which states:

"Three minutes on the early evening news programs is worth any amount of exposure on any other medium at any time of day."

Eager Candidates

In the early days of television, some pundits

Outsiders May Upset The Bosses

An incumbent President's easy access to television didn't enable Presidents Johnson or Nixon to stay in office and, so far, it does not appear to have done President Ford much good.

Does television promote the election of glib glamor boys? Our last three Presidents could be called a lot of things, but glib glamor boys is not one of them.

Has television news, because of its concentration on Washington, helped increase the national political importance of senators and decreased that of governors? That seemed likely until two former governors, Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, used television to gain stardom.

One of the major effects of television on politics probably has been that it has enabled "outsiders" like Carter and Reagan to achieve prominence without first winning the endorsements of political bosses, newspapers and pressure group leaders. Television has enabled candidates to go first to the voters and then force the parties and pressure groups to come to them, rather than the other way around. And that may not be all bad.

Both of those politicians are, of course, smooth, slick, telegenic types who are not necessarily any better qualified to govern than the products of the political establishments.

If television has made politics more democratic, it has also placed the responsibility on the viewer of separate style from substance, to remember that the candidate is running for political office and not for a starring role in the next feature film. That's worth keeping in mind as we prepare for the Great Debates of 1976.

predicted the new medium would allow less strenuous campaigns because candidates would be able to stay home and communicate with the public via TV. In reality, the opposite has happened as candidates rush from state to state to create, preferably by mid-afternoon each day, media events that will look good on the evening newscasts.

The networks cannot resist a candidate shaking hands at a state fair or standing in front of a geyser. Such stunts, though they seldom contribute to our understanding of the issues, are as valuable to the candidate as paid commercials, and they're free.

DIAGNOSE DEAFNESS EARLY
NOT NOTICEABLE

A great many hearing losses in children are not readily noticeable in the behavior of the child in the classroom or at home. Even those losses which affect the child's understanding of speech often times goes unnoticed or the child may be thought to be merely "slow" or "unattentive" or "difficult."

Many conditions of childhood which interfere with hearing ability (e.g. serious otitis) may occur without outward symptoms or subjective complaints, and may be missed in routine physical examinations.

CAN A
ASK YOUR DOCTOR.

If you suspect even a minor hearing loss, it is time to see your physician. Do it now. It could get worse. Your doctor can tell you if medicine or surgery can restore your hearing. Or, he'll tell you if a hearing aid will help.

If he suggests a hearing aid, ask him about the reputation of Radioear. We have been working with doctors for more than 50 years — since 1924—to help people like you to hear better.

Many Faiths Represented

All but three persons have expressed a religious preference among the population of Madonna Professional Care Center.

And their preferences span 20 denominations, according to Father Stanley Redmerski, chaplain.

When a resident is admitted a religious preference card is filled out for mass, or protestant worship, and when the persons wants Holy Communion. That information becomes part of the resident's record, Fr. Redmerski said.

He said he tries to involve the resident's pastor as a way of keeping the doors open to the outside world.

He lends support to residents, relatives and staff. "When we have a resident here for six or eight years and that person dies, the staff can experience real grief. That's part of my ministry too," Fr. Redmerski said.

"I never ask what am I going to do now. Every day is different and this is the greatest work in the world. You learn a lot from the elderly because their faith is so great," Fr. Redmerski said.

New Building Meets Need Long Felt By Madonna

"After Sister (Phyllis Hunhof) figures out what we're going to do, I try to make it happen — if we can afford it," William Sonderegger said.

He is executive vice president of Madonna Home Professional Care Center. What he has just helped make happen is the occupancy of a new building on the Madonna campus.

The New St. James Hall was completed for occupancy on Sept. 1.

"We knew we needed this facility from the beginning, administrator Sister Phyllis said, "But we just couldn't afford it.

Fire Protection

The new St. James Hall is a 120 bed, tri-level structure built, equipped and furnished for $2.2 million. "We might slide past that figure," Sonderegger said, noting that he had added a 15% mark-up on furnishing costs only to discover that many had increased by 40% since the first construction was completed in 1971.

And the original design with smoke detectors was out of compliance with federal regulations. The added plumbing and fixtures for a sprinkler system added an unexpected $45,000 to the cost, Sonderegger said.

St. James Hall is one of several buildings on the 24-acre campus between 52nd and 56th on South Street.

Much Federal Help

The total cost was underwritten by a $1,350,000 federally guaranteed, 3% subsidized loan, a $600,000 Hill-Burton grant and $130,000 in local contributions.

The structure is intended for persons considered long-term residents who do not need the various therapies which Madonna offers.

Level one houses the kitchen and dining area, chapel, recreational facilities, beauty shop, and two unfinished areas for future growth.

Level two is designated for intermediate care, and level three as a skilled care area. These levels are arranged in three pods with twenty beds in each pod and a central nursing station serving these areas. There are 12 private rooms and 24 semi-private rooms on each floor.

'All Out — No Fire'

St. James Hall is basically self-sufficient, but meals will be planned and prepared in the main building. There is a serving kitchen for the preparation of light meals, salads, breakfasts and non-hot foods.

Laundry will be supplied from the main building.

There are spacious lounges and carpeted corridors. Each room has a private bath — a far cry from the old St. James, once a mental hospital, and no longer meeting State Dept. of Health regulations.

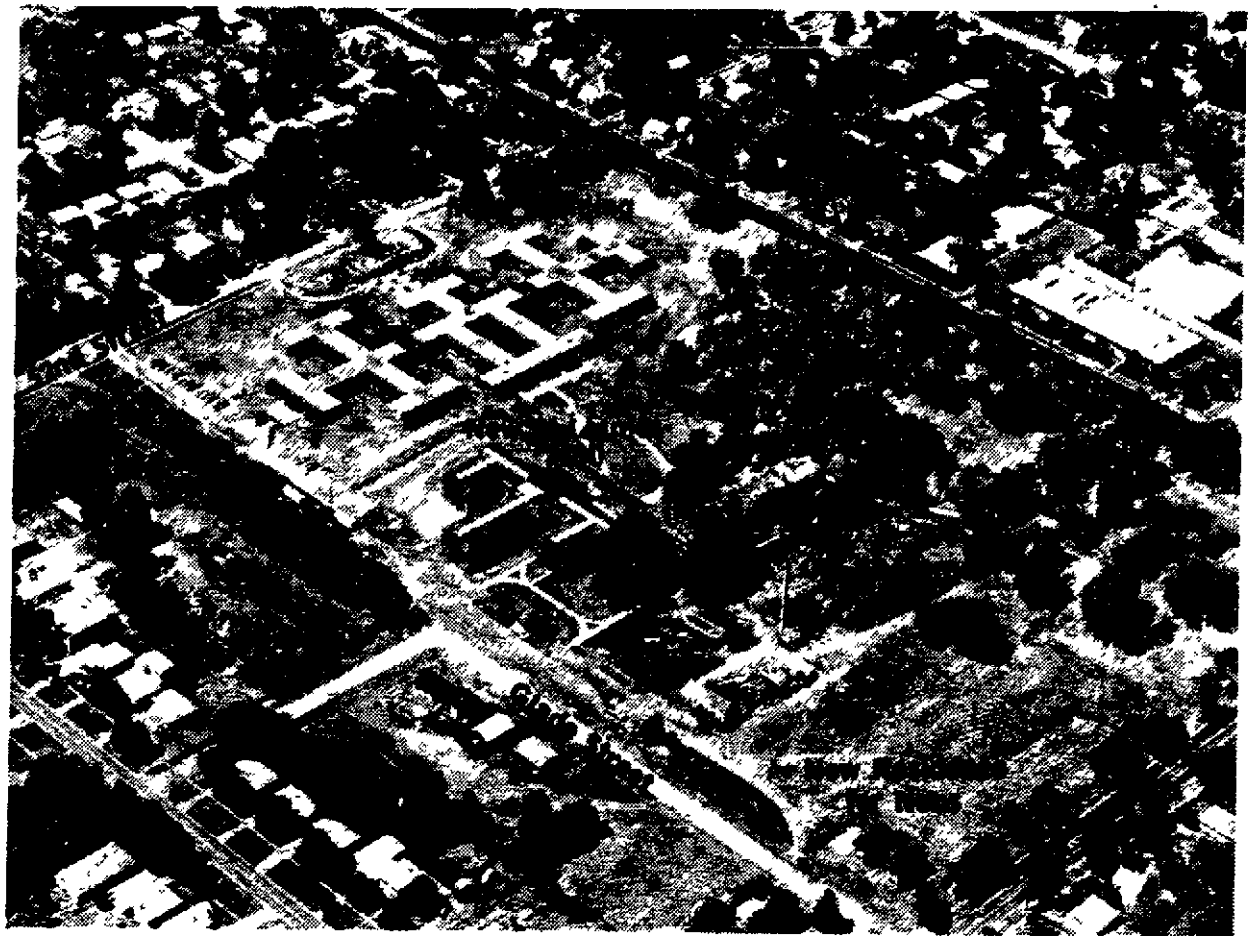

"We got everybody out without a fire. Praise be to God," Sister Phyllis said.

The old St. James, originally built in 1905 and added on to in 1912 will be razed. The furniture — antique by anyone's standards — has a date on the auction block skilled care beds, the new St. James Hall, intended for use by long-term care residents has one floor of skilled care beds and one floor of intermediate care beds.

With 252 beds in both buildings, Sister Phyllis said Madonna has reached its maximum in-house population, and "It's just the right number."

Geriatric Clinic Next?

But Sister Phyllis does not believe in stopping off places.

"This yet ought to happen and it will because we just can't help but do it," Sister Phyllis said.

"As we move into coordinating our outpatient services we will be forced to recognize that many need the multi-service approach we have here which will lead to a geriatric clinic.

The nature of that clinic will be rehabilitative and preventive, Sister Phyllis said.

"It's very exciting to anticipate because we can shift our multi-service emphasis to any age person, which we are already doing to some degree.

She anticipates a clinic that would look at the whole person and evaluate the person's physical, mental, social and spiritual needs. That will spell out increased needs in in-home services, in day care for the elderly, and for supportive mental health services.

"The losses the elderly experience — health, marriage partners, life-long friends, financial resources — are so great that the need for mental health care becomes readily apparent.

"We have reached our maximum in-house population. Now we go for even higher quality. Isn't that exciting?"

Resident Mary Hunhof said she can't help but be proud of her daughter, Sister Phyllis Hunhof, Madonna administrator.

Mary Hunhof, 54, was one of the persons who moved into the new St. James Hall at the Madonna Professional Care Center on Sept. 1.

Mrs. Hunhof is considered a long-term resident and is typical of the Madonna population except for one thing. The administrator, Sister Phyllis, is her daughter.

"I used to run her and now she runs me," Morn Hunhof said.

The mother of seven children, Mrs. Hunhof has lived at Madonna for three years. "It's pretty wonderful. We're all friends here," she said.

A Morning Greeting

She neither expects nor receives any special consideration. But usually Sister Phyllis stops in her room each morning to give her an early morning greeting. "Then she always has to run," Mrs. Hunhof said.

Is she proud of her daughter? "How could I help it?" she asked.

At the moment her slack-clad daughter was striding around making dozens of decisions of all sizes. "It's going well. We're having a ball," Sister Phyllis proclaimed.

(Actually it looked like a lot of work and at least some chaos!)

Down the hall from Mrs. Hunhof, Florence Wagner, 78, and Vada Hedges, 75, were becoming roommates for the first time. In spite of differences they were not worried about adjusting.

Mrs. Hedges admitted she "likes to run around quite a bit" — bingo, crafts, ceramics, chapel. While Mrs. Wagner prefers to stay in her room.

Nice Place to Live

"I think this is a nice place to live," Mrs. Wagner said. I always liked Madonna. But moving — it's been a strain and a worry in a way," she said.

"But I'm just crazy about that green wall," Mrs. Hedges said.

The three are typical residents of the new St. James Hall and make up part of the population of 130 beds for persons considered long-term and needing intermediate care. There are another 122 beds in both buildings for skilled care nursing.

Young Outpatients

But not all the population is geriatric. There is a 5-year old outpatient who comes for physical therapy. There is a 33-year old paraplegic who was injured in a swimming accident. There are other youthful car accident victims who need the multi-discipline rehabilitation approach Madonna uses.

All come under the Benedictine Philosophy:

All persons are created equal in the image of God and have God-given rights from the moment of conception throughout the life span until death; recognizing and ministering to the needs of the total person; with respect for the dignity of man.

'The Key Is To Find the Right Staff People . . .'

"Our Benedictine philosophy remains extremely important to us. But our community concern has never been greater."

Sister Phyllis Hunhof administers Madonna Professional Care Center with a wide smile and a sense of joy.

"This is just fun," she insists. "The key is to find the right staff people. Stick closely with them until they feel comfortable and then turn them loose. This is not a hard job."

But it is a complicated one.

A combination of factors has moved Madonna from a "home for the aged" in 1965 to a multi-disciplinary approach of serving a wide range of persons, with rehabilitation a realistic goal for many of them.

Hospital Load Eased

Those factors include the advent of Medicare in 1966 with its establishment of utilization and review of persons hospitalized in acute care facilities. As a result, patients are moved out of hospitals much more quickly.

Another factor in the early 1970's was the in-home concept of care for the elderly and handicapped.

Sister Phyllis said 1976 is a time of rejoicing because Madonna has been able to keep pace with fast changes society has thrust upon it.

In 1965, Sister Joan Marie and Sister Phyllis were the only two professionals on the staff. Medicare regulations required registered nurses around the clock as well as a business manager. Physical therapy was covered under Medicare, and physical therapist Burdetta Thrapp pushed for an occupational therapy department.

Sister Phyllis said she knew that skilled care was going to be a "biggie" because of federal regulations that qualify the extent of illnesses to be treated in an acute care hospital.

This meant that persons who used to recover in hospitals were being moved out much faster and had to have some place to go.

When the Madonna Professional Care Center building was opened in 1971 it had 44 skilled care beds and 88 intermediate care beds.

Skilled care is around-the-clock nursing service. Intermediate care is a lesser degree of care, usually for long term residents.

Services Added

In 1971 when the big thrust began in in-home services many people in the nursing home business felt threatened. Sister Phyllis was one of the persons in the Lincoln community who worked for the beginning of in-home services for the elderly and handicapped.

"If you serve persons right, you will always have more than enough people to fill your facility," she said.

With people who would ordinarily be recuperating in hospitals being discharged to professional care homes, and people who ordinarily would be in nursing homes staying in their own homes because of in-home services, the level of skilled care continued to increase.

Thus the average age of Madonna residents increased from 75 to 85 in 11 years.

Because of the increase in the need for Nadine Barnett, RN, (left) and Sharon Lovell, nurses assistant, in the nursing station in the new St. James Hall. "The key is responsible personnel," Sister Phyllis said.

The therapies offered at Madonna Professional Care Center are for outpatients as well as residents. A Handi-bus brings a patient for treatment.

motivate in occupational therapy.

It might mean an attempt at physical restoration to get the patient ambulatory in the physical therapy department.

It might mean speech therapy — especially true of stroke victims.

Part of the move into the St. James Hall was staff training. Charlie Thompson and Mildred Lentfer try out their housekeeping equipment.

Social services director Mike Schafer helps persons accept disability and changing lifestyle, and helps those responsible for placement feel good about their decision. Schafer is responsible for discharge planning which may include arranging for supportive services like transportation and Meals-On-Wheels for residents returning to their homes.

"This is a very rewarding place to work," bookkeeper Sandy Gruntorad said.

One of the things that adds to the one-big-family feeling among employees is that there are often two or three persons from a single family working at Madonna.

Much Brainstorming

It is Sister Phyllis who pulls the whole staff together, although she minimizes her efforts.

"We brainstorm a lot as department heads. We move together. We share decisions. That's why it's so easy to be administrator here," she said.

Sister Phyllis takes Wednesdays off and works weekends. "That's when I do my thinking," she said.

One of the things she thinks about a lot, she said, is some way to raise salaries. So many of our people are working for minimum wage. It's just unjust," she said.

Sister Phyllis is continuing her education by working on an external degree in rehabilitation administration through the University of San Francisco.

The studies require that she travel to San Francisco six times for eight day periods. In between those sessions are projects to work on with field supervisors visiting her site of administrative employment.

The degree is financed through the Rehabilitation Services Administration and is available only to persons who have an administrative capacity in a rehabilitation agency.

"It's so neat. It's just perfect for me," Sister Phyllis said.

Everywhere you go in this facility, good things are happening, Chaplain Fr. Stanley Redmerski said. Mary Essink directs the laundry operation.

Madonna Admissions Goal Is to Help People Who Can't Be Helped Elsewhere

About 50% of the people who call Madonna Professional Care Center for admittance don't need it.

Adelyn Beaty, director of admissions, said a lot of older persons living alone call when it's 20 degrees below zero, are snowed in and believe they cannot live alone any longer.

"What they really need to know is that the temperature will improve, things will get better, and they are alright," Mrs. Beaty said.

"Our admissions goal," she said, "is to help people who can't be helped elsewhere."

Costs by residents are met by private funds, insurance, workman's compensation, public welfare, Medicare, the Veteran's Administration and Comprehensive Health and Medical Plan U.S. (CHAMPUS).

There are 66 certified Medicare beds at Madonna. Persons who qualify are over age 65 or have had a Social Security disability for two years or more.

Medicare financially covers the total cost of the first 20 days in an extended care facility. The next 80 days are partially paid for under Medicare with the remainder coming from insurance or other means of financing.

Those 100-day Medicare limitations add impetus to the Madonna concept of intensive therapy and treatment to try to get the ill or injured functioning so they can go home or to another facility that meets their reduced needs better.

Mrs. Beaty said there is almost a 50% discrepancy between what public welfare pays for residents and the actual costs.

"We exceed our requirement in the acceptance of public welfare residents because we want them. We don't want this to just be a place for the rich," Mrs. Beaty said. "But because public welfare does not assume its real responsibility it drives our private rates up," Mrs. Beaty said.

Sister Phyllis Humhof, administrator, said Medicaid has indicated it will now reimburse costs to the facility.

"That means the federal government will be looking even more closely over our shoulder to evaluate who needs these funds. That means the level of care is going to go up again, and that means the costs go up again."

When Medicaid dictates who needs to be discharged, that also drives costs up, Sister Phyllis explained. People going home earlier need more in-home services, follow-up after discharge, and a more appropriate evaluation. That will raise the costs of in-home services.

"Where the federal government invests money, you can expect costs to rise," she said.

'You treat the whole person, not just diseases.'

When you work in a geriatric professional care center, you treat the whole person — not just diseases.

That's what Shirley Foster has found to be the big difference between her former nursing jobs in acute care facilities and her director of nursing job at Madonna Professional Care Center.

When you go into a hospital for gall bladder removal, that's what you get. When you come here, we look at you as a whole person through the eyes of the specialties of several disciplines, Mrs. Foster said.

Another big difference she has discovered is that when patients do not see a physician everyday, it is the nurse who often initiates suggestions to the physician for the patient's care and therapy. "That's very satisfying," Mrs. Foster said.

180 on Payroll

As director of nursing, Mrs. Foster supervises 20 registered nurses, 12 licensed practical nurses and about 140 full- and part-time aides.

Mrs. Foster is just one of 280 employees on the $1 Million annual payroll.

The multi-disciplinary concept that Mrs. Foster referred to is evidenced in persons like Marsha Holpern, speech therapist; Kay Schafer, occupational therapist; Mike Schafer, director of social services; Burdette Thrapp, physical therapist and Donna Amedeo, education coordinator.

Mrs. Amedeo said her education attempts are geared to patients, their families and the staff, and stems from what happens when a patient is admitted.

At that time, Mrs. Amedeo said department heads evaluate each incoming person and then meet to set realistic goals. After two weeks, when all tests are completed and the whole person has been observed, a review is held to make sure the goals are still on target.

'Becoming Functional'

"If you see a patient in a wheelchair in a corridor here needing a push, he is not being neglected. He is becoming as functional as possible. That's what we are here for," Mrs. Amedeo said.

Becoming as functional as possible includes eating five meals each day. That's "better for the elderly and gets them up and moving around more," Helen Johnson, consulting dietician said.

It might mean analyzing needs for development of physical exercises, to increase muscle strength, and crafts that Kay Schafer, (right), occupational therapist, works with Grace Mitchell in a set of individually-designed exercises with Mrs. Mitchell's goal in mind.

Physical therapy is about restoration and ambulation, Burdette Thrapp, physical therapist said. She is working with Dorothy Bryant.

PARENT-CHILD PROGRAMS

The Fastest Growing Program In The YMCA Today

WHAT IS THE Y-INDIAN GUIDE PROGRAM?

Y INDIAN GUIDES is a program in which fathers and sons (in the first, second or third grade) participate TOGETHER

The PURPOSE of the Father and Son Y-INDIAN GUIDES is to develop the beginnings of true and lasting friendships between boys and their dads at an age when a boy thinks his dad is the greatest man in all the world

The program of Y INDIAN GUIDES is based upon the lore of the American Indian

Small units of fathers and sons (usually 5 to 8 families) are known as TRIBES. And just as the life of the Indian revolved around the wigwam and tepee, so the tribe meetings are held twice a month in rotation in the homes of the braves

TRAILBLAZERS is a similar program for older boys (3rd to 6th grade) but with emphasis on activities suitable to their age group

WHAT IS THE Y-INDIAN PRINCESS PROGRAM?

Father and Daughter Y-INDIAN PRINCESS is a national YMCA program for the first, second, and third grade girl and her father

The Y-INDIAN PRINCESS program, essentially, is an outgrowth of the national YMCA Father and Son Y Indian Guides

The PURPOSE of Y INDIAN PRINCESS is to foster and strengthen companionship between a father and his daughter

- A group of fathers and their daughters is called a TRIBE. Each tribe has about 5 to 8 fathers and their daughters

The tribe meets twice each month in the homes of the members. Most of the meetings are from 7:00 to 8:00 P.M.

IF YOU THINK YOU'RE TOO BUSY . . .

If your immediate reaction is that you are simply just too busy, then you are the one who needs this program more than anybody else. For you may be losing something no amount of money can buy—a close relationship with your son/daughter.

When a child looks up at DAD with the kind of understanding that comes from really spending time together, doing things together, that man has achieved one of the most important and satisfying goals in his life. Yet how many fathers never really have lived such moments.

Demands and responsibilities are so great—and free time so scarce—that the average man and his little son or daughter grow apart without the man even realizing what is happening.

Don't let this happen to you. Join the Y Indian Guides program with your son or Y Indian Princess program with your daughter where Fathers and his son/daughter learn how to become pals forever.

PARENT-CHILD ORGANIZATION
NIGHT SEPTEMBER 14th, 7:30 P.M.
AT YOUR SCHOOL

Come find out more about this program and how you can strengthen your relationship with your son or daughter.

These Parent and Child programs are a vital part of the Lincoln YMCA's service to the community because it is a positive and effective means of adding strength and solidarity to the American Family.

FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL THE YMCA 488-0961 or 464-7481

FOR HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

The Downtown YMCA sponsors a model legislature called Youth In Government for all high school students throughout Nebraska. Youth in Government is for all students who are interested in government, would like to learn what it is like to be a senator, learn how to write up a legislative bill, and experience what process you go through to get the bill passed. Our program also gives you a good opportunity to see what other students are doing around Nebraska politically and socially.

There is a three day legislative session held in the East Chambers of the Capital Building in April. Here you get to meet and work with many of our senators, the governor, and other high officials.

The purpose of our Youth In Government Program is to prepare you for social and political leadership in our American democratic process by providing guidance, training and experience in the theory and practice of determining public policy.

If you would be interested in participating in our program or would like more information call Fran Chase 432-2407.

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. Hasn't the Steve McQueen-Ali MacGraw marriage dissolved? My understanding is that McQueen weighs 250 pounds, lives in the Beverly Wilshire Hotel while Ali and the baby live quietly on the beach in Malibu. What's the scan?—Evelyn Layne, Oak Park, Ill.

A. McQueen and MacGraw are apart at this writing. Overweight and suffering from beer-bloat, McQueen is living at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel while Ali and their child occupy their Malibu house. Ali, of course, is much brighter and better educated than McQueen. She gave up her acting career for him, which may be asking too much of any rising young actress. The marital prognosis in this case is not good. Romance has given way to realism.

STEVE MCQUEEN AND ALI MACGRAW BEFORE THE SPLIT

Q. Did Nelson Rockefeller ever consider becoming a Democrat? Surely as a Democrat he might have made U.S. President.—K. Harley, Staten Island, N.Y.
A. President Harry S. Truman once advised Nelson Rockefeller to join the Democratic party, but Rockefeller just couldn't bring himself to do it. He thought he could win the Presidency as a moderate Republican. Time proved him in error.

Q. Lyndon Johnson married off his two daughters. His oldest, Lynda Bird, was married to a Marine lieutenant named Charles Robb. What's become of Lynda and Robb?—H. Coleman, San Antonio, Tex.
A. The Robbs live in McLean, Va. Charles Robb resigned from the Marine Corps, became a lawyer, is now associated with the law firm of Williams, Connolly and Califano in Washington, D.C., may enter Virginia politics.

Q. Who is Arthur Temple? I understand he owns Time, Fortune, Sports Illustrated, Money, and People magazines. Is that correct?—Carl Williams, Houston.

A. Arthur Temple, 56, of Diboll, Tex. (population 3557), was chairman of the board of Temple-Eastex Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Time Inc. and the product of a merger between Temple Industries and Time Inc. in 1973. Temple-Eastex produces paperboard and building materials and manages more than one million acres of timberland. It's also engaged in mortgage banking, real estate and construction. After Temple merged with Time Inc., Temple stockholders acquired 30% of the Time stock, and Arthur Temple became a director of Time Inc.'s board. Possibly the single largest Time Inc. stockholder is Mrs. Georgie T. Munz, 86, who was a leading shareholder in Temple Industries prior to the Time Inc. merger. Arthur Temple is not only a member of Time Inc.'s board of directors and chairman of its planning and development committee, but not too long ago had his man Clifford Grum appointed publisher of Fortune.

Sigismund von Braun, the only one of the three brothers to remain a German citizen, recently retired as West Germany's ambassador to France. Prior to that, he was political counselor in the German Embassy in London and Bonn's Chief of Protocol.

Q. What is or was "The Cleveland Street Scandal"?—Amy Fukuda, Pasadena, Cal.

A. "The Cleveland Street Scandal" occurred in London in 1889. A 15-year-old messenger boy was asked to explain where and from whom he obtained what was for him a large sum of money. He revealed that in off-hours he worked in a homosexual brothel at 19 Cleveland Street near Regent Park. Lord Arthur Somerset, son of the Duke of Beaufort, and other members of the nobility supposedly frequented the brothel. Lord Somerset was given time to escape and remained abroad in exile for 36 years. Many of the British nobility have long been homosexually inclined.

CHER AND GREGG ALLMAN

Q. Gregg Allman, the rock star who has performed for Jimmy Carter fund-raisers—isn't he an acid-head who was recently and quietly sentenced to 75 years in jail?—L.F., Macon, Ga.

A. It was Gregg Allman's former road manager, John Herring, not Allman, who was sentenced to 75 years in prison. Herring, 36, was given the maximum sentence for supplying drugs to Allman, who was granted immunity in exchange for his testimony at the Herring trial. Allman, married to singer Cher, has reportedly kicked the habit, and Herring will have his sentence reviewed by U.S. District Court Judge Wilbur Owens Jr. If Herring provides the government with valuable information on the drug traffic in Georgia, his sentence no doubt will be reduced considerably.

GREAT IN GARBAGE

William Rathje, 30, an anthropology professor at the University of Arizona, is rapidly becoming recognized in academic circles as "the father of garbageology."

Rathje, who earned his Ph.D. at Harvard five years ago, believes that garbage has become a reflection of society, that one can tell about people by what they discard. "You are," he declares, "what you throw away."

Rathje and his students, involved in what they call "Le Project du Garbage," studied the garbage in Tucson, a city of 360,000, and discovered that the population threw away approximately 9500 tons of edible food each year, enough to feed 4000 families annually.

A few years ago, columnist Jack Anderson had one of his reporters go through the garbage of the late J. Edgar Hoover. He discovered that the FBI chief suffered from indigestion.

NEW TEST FOR HEART ATTACK

A new test for heart attacks has been developed at the University of Lund in Sweden. It is said to overcome some of the faults of electrocardiograms, which are not always efficient in detecting heart attacks.

The Lund test consists of dipping a specially treated strip of paper into a sample of the patient's urine. If the patient has suffered a heart attack, the paper immediately changes color because of myoglobin, a substance carried by the blood to the urine when the heart muscle has been damaged.

LANGUAGE USAGE IN THE U.S.

An advance report by the Census Bureau reveals that relatively few Americans are bilingual.

Nine out of every 10 persons in this country cannot speak a second language.

Of those who can, English or Spanish is their second language. Other languages reported as the second language of a million or more persons age 4 or older include French, German and Italian.

Spanish is the most widely used second language in the United States, followed by English.

About 4 million persons report Spanish as their usual and primary language.

Of the 8 million persons 4 years old or over for whom English is not their usual language, about 60% or 5 million report difficulty in speaking or understanding English. Difficulty with English was reported by 54% of the 4 million people whose usual language is Spanish.

The next largest group after Spanish reporting a usual language other than English are those who speak Italian. Two-thirds of the 450,000 persons who usually speak Italian report some difficulty with English.

As of this writing, 11 public utility commissions have approved 20-cent pay phone charges. Seven other utility commissions have applications for similar rates. The 11 states which already have 20-cent pay phones are Arizona, Colorado, Illinois, Michigan, Missouri, North Carolina, Ohio, Texas, Vermont, Virginia and Wyoming.

Now that Tolson is dead, there is no one to give tongue to truth about the unusual Hoover-Tolson friendship.

CANCER PROCLIVITY

Cancer frequently runs in families.

In Nebraska a mobile cancer detection unit screened 4515 patients. Cancer developed in 8.9 percent of those who had one other person in the family with cancer.

Of those with two cases of cancer in their families, 16.2 percent developed cancer.

Of those with three cases of the disease in their families, 27.4 percent developed cancer.

The study, which appeared in a recent issue of the Journal of American Medicine, points out that people with cancer in the family could be screened periodically in an attempt to pick up the disease.

More than 3 million persons in this country belong to families with three or more close relatives who have cancer, and more than 13 million live in families in which two or more near kin have cancer.

Dr. Herbert T. Lynch and his colleagues at Creighton University School of Medicine, Omaha, believe that by screening vast numbers of people, early detection of cancer would permit early start of treatment and in many cases the achievement of a cure.

FOR MILLIONAIRES ONLY

Knowledgeable executives in the publishing business say that general-interest magazines have lost out to television. They cite the demise of Life, Look, Collier's, Saturday Evening Post and insist that only special-interest magazines stand a chance of making it in today's market.

One publisher who believes firmly in that thesis is Claude Thibault of Paris. Thibault maintains that millionaires are a special class with special interests and special problems. He therefore plans to publish a monthly called Billion especially for millionaires.

The Sinister End of Two Americans in Uganda

by Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON, D.C. Idi Amin, the frenetic dictator of Uganda, is probably the world's most brutal ruler. He reigns by gun and bludgeon over his African country and executes people by whim. There is no precise count of the thousands he has slaughtered, but some of them are beginning to emerge as mute witnesses against him. One is Dora Bloch, a 75-year-old hostage aboard the hijacked Air France plane taken by Arab terrorists to Entebbe Airport last July. The Israeli commandos who raided Entebbe were unable to free her along with 100 other hostages because she had been removed to a hospital. Amin has disclaimed any knowledge of her fate. But intelligence sources know what happened to her. Amin, raging over the success of the Israeli rescue, sent two bodyguards to fetch her from the hospital. When she screamed in terror they stuffed rags in her mouth. She died of suffocation. A witness later reported seeing her burned body in a forest near Kampala, Amin's capital.

Help your children! Help their school get the playground equipment it needs. FREE! With Post Cereal box tops.

As an example, say a school of 500 students wants equipment for a softball team. If each student brings in just 2 box tops a week, they'd have more than enough for new bats, balls, gloves, helmets and bases... and still have enough left for a schoolyard swing set! FREE! The Post Cereals "Box Tops for Fun 'N Fitness" program. It's a great way to help all children, including yours. For details, see the back of specially marked Post Cereal boxes at your supermarket.

Post Cereals is providing this equipment FREE in exchange for Post Cereal box tops. And here's what you can do. First, be sure that your child's school knows about and participates in the program. Then, start collecting the Cereals and take them to your school or PTA. From now until March 31, 1977 get your friends and everyone in your community to do the same. Because the more people participate, the more your school can benefit.

These days schools are having trouble replacing old and purchasing new sports and playground equipment. And that's unfortunate, because physical fitness is important for every child. But with taxpayers' money being stretched to its limits, school budgets are suffering. Now you can help. Post Cereals has developed the "Box Tops for Fun 'N Fitness" program to help schools (kindergarten through eighth grade) like yours obtain badly needed equipment... from baseballs and tennis rackets to trampolines and parallel bars and much, much more...

With Stroh was Robert L. Siedle (I) who taught at Makerere University in Kampala. A year before his death, he chatted with Uganda dictator Idi Amin and an Egyptian diplomat at a reception held at the Soviet Embassy.

earlier victims have come in the shadows. They are both Nicholas Stroh, and Robert Stroh, 33, was a free-lance writer who worked for several U.S. newspapers including the Philadelphia Inquirer and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Stroh was a wealthy Detroit brewer who was fascinated by Africa and came to report, accompanied by his wife Gerda and their children. Siedle, 46, was a professor who had been lecturing on African history at Kampala's Makerere University. Previously he had been at the University of Florida at Gainesville. Siedle had three sons and a daughter from his wife. His closest friend was Carol Siedle Fishberg, a nurse in Framingham, Mass. Siedle was a close friend of Idi Amin. In 1971, Stroh and Siedle were taken into Mbarara, Uganda, to check reports of a massacre. They were held in the Simba barracks, hoping to get facts for their writing about mission work. They stayed two days in Mbarara. On the morning of July 9, Stroh left in a blue Volkswagen, with a "PRESS" sign affixed to the back. Around his neck he wore a cross and the inscription: "Idi—please call a priest." He was killed behind at the hotel. A black Zephyr car with two men dressed in the shirts of Ugandan police force drove up to the hotel to get into the back of the car and drive away with him.

Pressure on Amin

Neither Stroh nor Siedle was ever seen again. They vanished into the night. Their relatives raised questions, then pressure on the Ugandan government to find the two Americans. In the face of pressure before Idi Amin appointed a commission to investigate. It was headed by tough, Ugandan-born D. Jeffrey-

Jones, a judge of the High Court of Uganda. He worked on the case for seven months, cutting through all attempts to cover up the truth. He got little help from Amin's henchmen, and the dictator himself even called him to express displeasure at the commission's work. Nevertheless, Jones persisted.

He got his first break in the case on April 12, 1972, when he found Stroh's burned-out, crumpled car at the bottom of a ravine. Then, six days later, the commission obtained a grisly deposition from Silver Tibihika, a former lieutenant in the Simba Battalion, who had fled to a camp in nearby Tanzania.

Tibihika swore he saw Stroh drive up to the Simba barracks on the morning he disappeared. Fifteen minutes later he was taken, his hands held high above his head, to the office of the camp's second in command, Major Juma. Tibihika never saw the American alive again, but he later heard officers in the mess say he was "kalasi"—dead. Four days later, Tibihika deposed that he and the camp intelligence officer, Lt. Stephen Taban, were ordered to burn Stroh's Volkswagen by the camp commander, Lieutenant Colonel Ali—a distant relative of Amin's. After doing so, Tibihika was ordered to accompany Taban and destroy "everything."

Stroh's blue Volkswagen was found in a crumpled heap at the bottom of a ravine by special commission of inquiry.

According to Tibihika's testimony, the group, headed by Lieutenant Taban, drove to a deserted spot 10 1/2 miles from Mbarara where they dug up the charred remains of two human bodies from a sandpit. They filled two sacks, returned to the barracks, poured oil and gasoline and set them afire. The ashes were scattered into a nearby river.

Revealed in report

Jones recounted these events in a blistering, 127-page report which said that Major Juma had seen both the Americans and that he had quarreled with Stroh. According to the commission report, Juma knew the two Americans had been killed, but his role in the actual murders was not certain.

"He [Juma] had no respect for the tribunal," noted Jones. "In all my experience as a judge, I have never seen a more arrogant, more insulting witness in a witness box. He was also a consummate liar. He made an appalling impression on everyone."

Jones, who left Uganda before the report was released, pronounced that the two Americans "died an unnatural death. . . . They had not been involved in an accident. . . . They had not been incarcerated in any prison. . . . They had not crossed into another country. . . . They were in fact murdered by personnel of the Simba Battalion of the Ugandan Armed Forces. . . . From the evidence I have before me it was impossible to point an unerring finger at any particular person or persons who actively committed the offense."

Amin's White Paper

Idi Amin was so incensed by Jones' report that he issued a White Paper contending that Stroh and Siedle "met their deaths somewhere in Mbarara . . . at the hands of unidentified persons."

Amin also hinted that his government might consider giving compensation to the victims' survivors. After prolonged negotiations with the families and their lawyers, a settlement was worked out, with Amin's government paying $78,707.90 each to the survivors of Siedle and Stroh.

Jones' report also gave the world a preview of the future, when the zany but vicious Amin would praise Hitler and cavort with hijacking terrorists.

If Amin thought the payments would be taken as an indication of goodwill toward the United States, he might have saved himself some money. His gesture was far too trivial to outweigh his brutal record. In 1972 the U.S. cut off its foreign aid program to him, and in 1973 we closed our embassy in Kampala, although we did not break off diplomatic negotiations with the African state. In the meantime, Amin has continued his regime of death and terror, adding countless anonymous victims to the roll that contains the names of Nicholas Stroh, Robert Siedle and Dora Bloch.

WHAT ELSE IS COOKING

BUDGET BENEFIT

Get in the habit of shopping with a list. Watch the newspapers for advertised "specials," then plan a week's menus around bargains in foods the family enjoys. Next check pantry, refrigerator and freezer shelves for needed items. Finally, make a detailed list according to the store's layout. This takes time, but in the end it saves both time and money.

THE LAST SHOULD BE FIRST

Date packages at the time you buy them and always use the oldest first.

dry milk is a budget blessing

Non-fat dry milk costs about half as much as fluid whole milk. Keep a supply of reconstituted dry milk in the refrigerator and use it for cooking. Serve it very cold for drinking—or combine it half-and-half with whole milk if you prefer the taste.

add flavor and save money

Collect strained drippings, bacon, meat and poultry fats in small jars. Store in the refrigerator and use for sautéing potatoes, onions and other vegetables; for browning meats and frying chicken.

Experts advise that a well-built, modern mobile home on a good site offers excellent value. Ten million Americans live in mobile homes today, and sales are increasing.

This "double-wide," furnished, $16,000 model offers more luxury and space than many conventional homes. Now, U.S. has set durability standards for mobile homes.

Mobile Homes— The Most for Your Money

by Carl Norcross

This year marks a major turning point in mobile-home history. Since June, new mobile homes carry a seal showing they meet construction and livability standards of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The standards make mobile homes more fire- and wind-resistant and are designed to overcome complaints about construction and to give them longer life. HUD also has nearly a dozen research projects that should further improve mobile homes.

A new image of mobile homes is now being created by the increasing use of "double-wide" units. Today's mobile homes look better because they look more like houses. With more space and refinements, they are attracting a new class of buyers who have more money.

As the average price of a single-family house goes higher and higher—now up to $43,600—mobile homes are a better bet than ever for millions of families who want a single-family house but can't afford a conventional one. The mobile home industry has inherited the lower-priced market and this year will sell about 95 percent of new homes under $25,000. Sales this year are up 32 percent over 1975.

Take 35-year-old Dr. Gerald Deitzer for example. When he came to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington after teaching biology four years in a German university, he and his wife Barbara had a typical housing problem. There wasn't enough cash for a down payment on a new house, and they didn't want to buy all new furniture for a rental apartment.

Finance arrangements

"A mobile home solved everything," says Deitzer. "We paid 25 percent down on a new $10,500 home and financed the rest through a local bank for 10 years. It came completely furnished. We pay $146.63 each month on the loan, plus $80 ground rent. It would be hard to find a decent apartment for this price, and this is better than an apartment."

Their mobile home is 14 by 65 feet, has a fully equipped kitchen with washer and dryer. The living room is comfortable, the bathroom up-to-date. They live on a tree-lined street in Middlebrook Park in Germantown, Md., 20 miles north of the capital. And best of all, the home is theirs. They own it.

'You can't say no'

Across Washington to the south, in Chantilly, Va., is another pleasant mobile-home park, called Friendly Village. "If you come out of an apartment and see this park, you can't say no," Mrs. George Pepin says.

Her husband, a retired Navy chief warrant officer, agrees: "We have an expanded living room with more space than in many apartments we've had. We pay $102 rent, including an extra $5 for this location near the clubhouse and pool." They paid cash for their home so have no finance charges.

spacious and comfortable a mobile home can be. Nor have they seen the deluxe parks of California, Florida, Arizona or Texas.

For people with a good credit rating, financing a mobile home is easy but expensive—the true interest rate may run to 13 percent. Depreciation is steep—in the past as much as 50 percent in five years. However, better-built homes in better locations depreciate less; some even increase in value.

Due to the government's new standards, this year brings many model changes, so it is good advice to buy a 1976 model, as depreciation will be less. Buyers of used homes should get written evidence of its age, since, like used cars, price depends on it.

Also, never buy a home or sign a contract until you know for certain where you will put the home. Often the best parks are filled and have a waiting list. Even if a unit is to be put on your own lot in the country, don't assume anything until you have written approval from local officials, including the health officer.

Two big no-no's

For many buyers, finding a satisfactory park is the big stumbling block. Despite vacancies, you may not get in unless you buy from the park owner or from a dealer associated with him. Some parks have such anti-social rules you wouldn't live there. Many of the best parks are limited to adults. The two big no-no's are children and pets.

Once you are in a park you may be a captive and can't get out without taking a financial beating. If you want to sell your home, you may not even put a small "For Sale" sign in your window.

"I'd never move into a park if I couldn't sell the home and leave it there," says Army Maj. Victor Van Stallant, a long-time mobile-home owner.

Another hazard is getting satisfactory service when things go wrong. Many dealers represent several manufacturers and are so busy selling new units that they neglect earlier buyers.

Before you buy, educate yourself. Go to several parks and talk with owners about park rules, service calls and different makes of mobile homes. Some manufacturers, like Champion, use gypsum interior walls that are far more fire-resistant than thin plywood. Visit as many dealers as possible. Get facts about financing, insurance rates and warranties. The "truth in lending" law requires a disclosure of the true interest rate. Also talk with your bank about dealers and financing. Shop around. As with cars, you can bargain.

From the Federal Housing Administration or HUD, get a copy of a free pamphlet, "Buying and Financing a Mobile Home," or the Better Business Bureau's folder "Tips on Buying a Mobile Home." For the names of local parks or dealers see the phone book. For a national directory of parks see Woodall's "Mobile Home Parks" at your library or send $5.95 to Woodall Publishing Co., 500 Hyacinth Pl., Highland Park, Ill. 60035.

Dress for Rock

Naked legs and shoulders don't absorb noise. They increase the vibrations and raise the decibel level. Remember that the next time you go to a discotheque that features loud rock and pop.

A pair of Swedish scientists, All Axelsson and Fredrik Lindgren, writing in the Swedish Medical Journal, report that hot pants and miniskirts can cause hearing damage when worn in too-loud discotheques. They recommend wearing long skirts or long pants and full blouses.

THE NEW RINGO STARR

Baldy Ringo

Fans and friends keep asking ex-Beatle Ringo Starr why he shaved his head and eyebrows a few weeks ago.

Explains Ringo, who's become a tax exile in Monaco: "It got so hot here that I merely walked into a barbershop and said, 'Take it all off.' The barber thought I meant my beard and moustache, but I meant everything including my eyebrows. The only hair I had left on my face when he finished was my eyelashes."

Ringo, who has two homes—an apartment in Monte Carlo and a house in Beverly Hills—was divorced a year ago from Maureen, his childhood sweetheart with whom he had two sons and a daughter. He gave her custody of the three children and also the $700,000 estate he had purchased from fellow Beatle John Lennon.

Back then, Ringo was very much in love with California model Nancy Andrews, who was cited as "the other woman" in the Starr divorce. Subsequently Ringo and Nancy decided to call it quits, but now they're back together again. It would surprise no one if Ringo and Nancy settled in California where he records some of his platters.

Ringo says he has no intention of establishing residence in England again. He feels the tax rates there are confiscatory.

not wearing

Fractured skull.

Advertising contributed for the public good.

The Bible, which is available in some 1500 languages already, is being translated into still another—the language of film. No, a new Cecil B. De Mille-style spectacular isn't in the works. Instead, a group of filmmakers, actors and scholars have combined in a commercial enterprise called the Genesis Project with the aim of compiling a faithful, book-by-book movie version of the Scriptures, with virtually nothing left out.

The first fruits of the project will be visible next month, with the issuance of the initial set of 10 films, each running 15 to 20 minutes, covering the first 22 chapters of the Book of Genesis and the first two chapters of the Gospel According to St. Luke. At the earliest, the task will end 33 years from now with the cameras working their way through the final pages of both the Old and the New Testaments.

Says British-born filmmaker John Heyman, 43, chief executive officer of the Genesis Project: "I'll be dead and buried long before it's finished. I hope eventually young people come in to take it over, run it, and expand it."

The filmed Scriptures, which has been given the name of the New Media Bible, is seeking buyers primarily among churches and synagogues, religious schools, Bible study groups, and libraries, although individuals are welcome to buy at the regular subscription rate of $2000 a year.

Study Guides

That price buys the set of 10 16-mm. sound films plus accompanying audio-visual explanatory and study guides. In the first release, eight of the movies are devoted to Genesis, covering the Creation, Adam and Eve, Cain and Abel, Noah and the Flood and Abraham; and two to Luke, including the Annunciation and the Nativity. A new set of 10 films will be put out each year.

So far most of the filming has been done in Israel to obtain authentic Holy Land backgrounds. Chaim Topol, who played Tevye in the movie version of Fiddler on the Roof and who is one of the originators of the Genesis Project, plays the part of Abraham. The part of Jesus as a young boy is taken by an 11-year-old Israeli actor. Large supporting casts are being used. About 180 people participate in the scene of Mary and Joseph arriving at the inn in Bethlehem, only to be told that there is no room for them there.

Noah in animation

In all of the films a voice reads the Scriptural text while the film provides illustration. For the Creation scenes, cameras were lowered into Mt. Vesuvius to get pictures of bubbling lava and seething mists. The entire Noah sequence was filmed in animation.

"If we had done it realistically, it would have bankrupted us," Heyman says frankly. "To build an ark and simulate a flood would have cost $2 million.

Now: The Whole Bible On Film

by Herbert Kupferberg

The sacrifice of Isaac from "The Story of Abraham," as pictured in the New Media Bible. The initial set of 10 short films will be issued early next month.

That's what our first 10 films cost us altogether. We did the Noah sequence for $190,000."

However, the Adam and Eve scenes were filmed with live actors, as will be most of the other Biblical stories. Both Adam and Eve are shown naked prior to their expulsion from Eden, just as they are in the text, but the lighting and placement are such as to protect their modesty, making it far from X-rated.

Whenever there is a conversation between characters or a dialogue between man and God, it is carried on, word for word, by the performers. They even speak in the languages of their epoch—ancient Hebrew, Aramaic or Greek. But their voices are made to fade out after a second or two, being overlaid on the soundtrack with the English of the King James Version. Soundtracks of other English versions will also eventually be available, as well as French, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese and other translations.

Working with Heyman and Topol on the project as its vice president in charge of research is Michael Manuel, a former executive with the Metropolitan Opera.

"I hadn't looked at a Bible for years," says Manuel. "I happened to buy a paperback edition at Heathrow Airport in London while rushing for a plane. I'd been looking for something to work with in the educational video-cassette field, and it occurred to me what an extraordinary subject the Bible would be. Then I found John Heyman was working on the same idea in England, and we joined to form this company.

Skirt theology

"I would like to emphasize that we do not get into theology. In a project like this, theology per se is a pitfall. We provide the historical and cultural setting, but we do not presume to interpret the text. We leave that to the individual teachers and discussion leaders who will use these films in their work."

Adds Heyman: "The project is in no way sectarian. Louis B. Mayer, the old movie magnate, used to say: 'If you want to send messages, use Western Union.' We try to perform like a news-reel camera team on the spot at the time. Each of our 15- or 20-minute segments ends up with the caption 'Time for Discussion.' Then it's up to the

That picture of me with Santa made me lose 44 pounds.

By Dorothy Barlow — as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

Every year at Christmas time, I used to take my children to have their picture taken with Santa Claus. During one trip, he promised my youngsters so many toys, I climbed on Santa's knee and asked him for a check to pay for them all. As we both laughed, "click" went the camera, and I looked at a photograph of me that was to change the course of my life. You see, for the first time, I saw myself as others did—a fat 170 pounds.

Strangely enough, I had never before thought of myself as being that fat. Perhaps because my figure had been hidden so many times under maternity clothes. Then, too, with each new child, I spent more time taking care of them than I did taking care of myself.

Oh, don't get me wrong. I enjoyed doing the "motherly" things—like popping popcorn and picnicking with the kids, which, of course, helped put the pounds on me. But like most women, I was bored with the daily cooking-cleaning-washing routine. So as soon as my youngsters were old enough for school, my sister and I started a business—a day-care nursery.

Unfortunately, at the peak of success, we had to shut down. The state laws changed and I needed a degree instead of just a license to keep operating. This depressed me so, I began eating heavily and gained more pounds.

But the desire to overcome was so strong in me that I finally enrolled in a community college and started studying nights. At the same time, I began working on my figure. I tried nearly everything but reducing drugs. I was afraid of them. These attempts at losing weight, however, weren't very successful.

Then one day a friend, who had lost 20 pounds on the Ayds plan, suggested I try it, too. I had seen those Ayds ads for years and I remembered reading that Ayds® Reducing Plan Candy contains vitamins and minerals, but no drugs. So I decided to give them a whirl.

I went to my local drugstore (in New Haven, CT), bought a box of the chewy vanilla caramel kind and started on the Ayds plan. I took one or two Ayds with a hot drink before each meal and those Ayds really helped satisfy my appetite. When I sat down to eat, I ate less because I wanted less. It was great. But truthfully I had to be on the plan myself before I fully understood the way Ayds helps people lose weight—whether they want to lose a lot or a little.

My goal was to shed 44 pounds. And I did—with the help of the Ayds plan and one thing more, a tiny bikini. Once a month, I tried it on until the bikini fit beautifully. The day it did, I weighed 126 pounds, which gave me all the "credentials" I needed for wearing it.

In case you're interested, I also earned my credentials for re-opening our child-care center. But somehow, with my slim new figure, I was ready for a change.

Now I'm an assistant administrator-secretary at Yale-New Haven hospital. And when anybody there says they can't believe I was ever fat, I just take out the picture of Santa and me and tell them about the Ayds plan.

Dr. Martin F. Schwartz of New York University Medical Center has developed a simple technique to alter speech patterns which he says can end stuttering. The method has helped 700 patients, some as young as 4, and is now used in several schools.

New Help for Stutterers

by Lawrence Galton

Stuttering, an affliction that has plagued man since earliest times, affects more than 2 million people in the United States. For them, the simplest act of communication—introducing themselves to others, speaking up in a meeting, talking on the phone, even ordering a meal in a restaurant—can become a nightmare.

In the past, efforts to overcome stuttering have usually been fruitless. Analysts have spent years trying to resolve the emotional conflicts they said caused stuttering. Some psychiatrists have resorted to tranquilizers, hypnosis and even electroshock to relieve anxiety and stress.

Also, speech therapists, aiming at the speech struggle itself, have instructed patients to sing or whisper the first words of sentences, or they have told them to start an octave higher, then drop to more normal levels. This often produced a yodeling effect that patients found embarrassing.

Now, however, there are two techniques that can end stuttering, even for lifelong sufferers. The first uses a mini-metronome worn like a hearing aid.

Metronomes have long been used by musicians for marking time. The device has also been used to aid stutterers because doctors have known that a stutterer's fluency increases markedly when he paces his speech rhythmically. But there has always been the critical problem of carry-over: In a therapist's office, or at home, a stutterer could become fluent talking to the beat of a metronome, but out in the real world, without the instrument, he stuttered as before.

Then, a few years ago, Dr. John Paul Brady of the University of Pennsylvania developed a miniaturized electronic metronome that can be worn unobtrusively over the ear.

In an early report in 1971, Dr. Brady noted substantial improvement in speech in about 80 percent of a small group of patients. Since then, the mini-metronome therapy has come into increasing use.

Pace themselves

Typically, at the Behavior Therapy Clinic of the Long Island Jewish Hospital-Hillside Medical Center, New Hyde Park, N. Y., a stutterer, in weekly visits, first learns to talk to the beat of a full-size metronome, set at the start at a slow pace of 60 words a minute. Gradually, the pace is increased until, at 112 per minute, about normal slow speech, the patient begins to use the mini-metronome.

The device, which costs about $150, is first used at home, then among friends and finally everywhere the patient goes. The weekly clinic sessions extend over about 4½ months. The patient continues to use the mini-metronome as long as necessary, weaning himself by gradually decreasing the length of time it is used each day. Commonly, its use can be discontinued within 6 to 12 months.

Chain of habits

ring, Schwartz says, represents ink chain of learned habits. The is fear—of certain words, cerople, certain situations—that ises in childhood after some ch as an illness, accident, startol, moving to a new city. econd—and crucial—link is a of the vocal cords, a spasm of ix, which comes in response to link of fear. And the third link, ering, is actually an attempt to he cords.

to prevent cords from locking, utterers use "starter" mechaich as sounding an "uh" before word, or using "uh lemme see re almost every sentence. One most famous starters was deby Winston Churchill to conadolescent stuttering and later to a personal oratorical style. ld place a long "m" at the ig of some of his sentences, sayexample, "Mmmmmm England r surrender." The "m" kept his brating so he could talk withogspasm.

endency to lock the cords," Dr. : tells patients, "is inherited. At int in childhood there was an when the locking occurred r and unexpectedly. It interour speech. And when this haprou began to struggle. It's the that the world sees and calls g."

Simple solution

this, he developed a simple approach.

irst step involves exhaling a ow of air through the mouth—audible, passive, not forced—ng it flow directly into the first irase or sentence to be spoken. rom the mouth keeps the cords econd step deals with speed common problem among stutfo tend to rocket their first , and, anticipating the speed, ir cords and create a lock. The always slow the first syllable.

"If you let the air flow out passively, not pushing it, inhaling shallowly and exhaling easily and, without pause, speaking the first syllable slowly, you cannot stutter," Schwartz tells patients. "Once you've uttered that first syllable, you can go on at any speed you wish."

So simple is the two-step technique that most people learn to use it effectively within two hours.

'Stopping no problem'

"Stopping the stuttering is no problem at all," Schwartz says. "The name of the game is to keep it stopped."

For that, he starts patients off with an intensive week of therapy, six to eight hours a day, not only in private but also out in the everyday world, using the techniques to shop, talk to strangers and order in restaurants.

Then, for the next year, patients are urged to reinforce their fledgling habit by practicing an hour a day. The hour is divided into four segments, and the patient records the first minute of each segment on tape which is sent to Schwartz weekly for evaluation. The objective is to make the new habit so strong that it works permanently and under all conditions of stress.

Schwartz, who has just published a book Stuttering Solved, has reported an 89 percent success rate. He means 89 of every 100 patients are not stuttering a year later.

Success at age 60

A typical patient reaction was expressed by a 60-year-old California surgeon. "I've stuttered all my life," he said. "I've never been able to talk to one of my patients without stuttering. I've never even dared address a medical meeting. Now here I am, after 4½ days, talking in front of a group without any difficulty."

"I called my wife last night and told her what has happened. Once I get into a sentence now and know I started on an outgoing breath and that I slowed the first syllable, I have a surge of elation knowing that nothing can stop the rest of the sentence."

More than 700 patients, some as young as 4, have been treated successfully. Schwartz has trained more than 60 therapists in his method, and others are being trained. The method now is in use, for example, at the Colorado Hearing and Speech Center in Denver, the Huntington, N. Y., Hearing and Speech Center, and in some school systems such as the Port Jefferson, N. Y., public schools.

Can a stutterer make use of the method on his own? He may well do so—at least in the beginning—and see a dramatic improvement. But, to ensure the discipline of practice every day—the practice that keeps stuttering stopped—the best way is to work at it under the supervision of an expert therapist.

you're constipated.

If you don't have enough roughage in your diet, it's no wonder you're constipated and suffering from painful elimination.

It's roughage that retains vital moisture so you eliminate gently and comfortably.

But roughage is processed out of so much food, many of us don't get enough of it.

Here's where Serutan can help you.

Serutan is the natural ingredient laxative that contains a rich source of roughage, that can absorb over 20 times its weight in water. But, unlike certain foods containing harsh roughage, Serutan forms gentle non-irritating bulk. Your intestinal wastes are soft and moist for smooth, easy results.

Try Serutan. You'll be very comfortable with it.

PHILADELPHIA—"My grip strength improved," said Sara Kait. A spritely 75 year old nursing home resident, Miss Kait had taken part in tests conducted by Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub and Extra Strength Lotion. First an instrument was used to measure grip strength. Then Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub was applied for temporary relief of minor pain and to improve mobility. Later, when tested again, the grip strength of most of those tested had significantly improved. "It certainly works," said Miss Kait.

Soaring at over 14,000 feet past the Matterhorn in a glider, author Richard Wolters (l) and pilot Adrian Marx fought capricious drafts and the weather to slip silently among the Alps in Switzerland, where Wolters found beauty and terror together.

I Looked the Matterhorn in the Eye

by Richard Wolters

ZERMATT, SWITZERLAND.

We all have our dreams—I've had three. The first: to climb in the Swiss Alps. The second: to fly over them in a balloon. Those dreams are reality. My third dream: to glide, climbing on the unpredictable updrafts, among the Valais Alps at Zermatt. There, 29 snowcapped peaks, all over 13,000 feet, form a bowl around a picturesque village in the valley. My dream always ended the same way: Through what could be treacherous mountain air currents, I'd climb to 15,000 feet and fly around the king of all European mountains, the Matterhorn.

Such dreams can become nightmares, but I decided to try with the aid of Adrian Marx, a fellow soaring pilot and an engineer for Swissair.

He arranged for a glider with a modified Volkswagen engine that would pull us along at about twice the speed of a good bicycle rider. "In the mountains the motor will be useless. At about 10,000 feet we'll shut it off and soar to gain the last mile of altitude," he said. The weather report was crucial. He told me the day I arrived in Zurich: "The best I can figure from this report is that some time shortly after noon tomorrow a storm system will be moving into the Alps from Italy, but predictions are impossible.

"I'll get a new weather forecast first thing in the morning. If it still looks good, we'll fly. If the storm has moved in, we won't even be able to start."

When Adrian picked me up at my hotel the next morning, the weather was beautiful. At the airport, our tandem Falk motor glider was waiting. It took me half an hour to mount an automatic camera on the tip of the 53-foot wing. It was hard to believe, as

out on taste."

J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

"I smoke about 2 packs a day and I get a lot of pleasure out of every cigarette. But I've cut down on 'tar' and nicotine without giving up what I like about smoking.

"I do it on what I call 'The Doral Diet.' Doral gives me the taste I want from a cigarette. But compared to my old brand, each Doral I smoke is 5 milligrams lower in 'tar.' Figure it out. That's a difference of 100 milligrams less 'tar' a pack, on The Doral Diet!"

Menthol or Regular.

Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Adrian joshed me to work faster, that on such a beautiful day our problem would be weather.

Swiss countryside from a slow, low-flying plane is like a child's dream of strange lands... a perfect doll setting... brilliant... manicured like the setting under a Christmas tree. Bright chalets dotted the landscape. Villages were a cluster of neat houses.

Adrian moved in against walls of passes to take advantage of the updrafts of air currents. We were now flying at about 5000 feet above sea level; we still had 10,000 to go. The air was getting so thin that our engine was of little value for climbing. To get to the snowcapped 14,000-footers, we'd have to soar.

At the entrance of this land of the giants stood the Distelhorn, only 9000 feet. Adrian moved in close to its southwest wall, and we felt the updrafts lift us. We circled in the lift, climbing fast to 9000 feet. From that peak we headed to the first snow-topped mountain. I was now paying little attention to the flying. The beauty of snow and rock was stupendous. Then I spied four climbers roped together plodding their way up what looked like an impossible spine of ice.

God's work

No camera can capture the real Zermatt. If God wanted us to see His spectacular creation from a vantage point, He would have had man invent a sailplane that could glide quietly among the works of beauty and terror that He built side by side.

Our plan was to skirt the eastern edge of the bowl and by staying close to the mountains gradually pick up altitude. We'd stop long enough at each peak to get as high as the updrafts would take us. Three-quarters of the way around the bowl we'd be ready to fly for the Matterhorn, which stands alone.

At 13,000 feet we glided to the Taschhorn. Here, while seeking out the area of lift, we were tossed like a cork on the sea until Adrian found the updraft. We moved in towards the rock face and almost zoomed straight up. High enough now, we had all the altitude needed to glide to the Monte Rosa, where I had my first look at a real glacier. Awesome, this mountain, the tallest in Switzerland, sits between two glaciers, a fortress surrounded by moats. The sky was blue, and there were white, puffy cumulus clouds, perfect soaring weather.

We flew on to the Breithorn. This was especially exciting as I photographed the climbers sunning them-

Breithorn. Seeing it from the glider was an extravaganza. The sunlight was dazzling; the Matterhorn's sheer rock imposing and noble. We headed for it, my dream.

Suddenly, ominous clouds swept toward the entire bowl. We had to beat the shawl of mist oozing up from Italy to engulf the mountain. We were hit now clouds blocked the Italian face and the west wall. Sheathed in cloud, the noble mountain looked sinister and cruel. I took the controls of our plane and quickly shot pictures from the wing-tip camera. Time ran out. Within minutes the whole Zermatt bowl was shrouded in cloud.

When we cleared the last rock face

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

selves on its peak. I'd made this climb with a team and remembered how exhausted I'd been. We had started at 4 a.m. in the moonlight and crossed the glacier into Italy. How much easier it was to get there by sailplane; the panorama was vastly more exciting. I remembered being awed by the view of the Matterhorn from the top of the by a sudden downdraft and lost 1000 feet. My heart sank with the plane. Would the approaching storm now force us to abandon the Matterhorn? We headed back to the Breithorn to regain altitude and lost valuable time.

We raced the weather, which seemed to brew itself from sunbeams. We had hoped to circle the Matterhorn, but over Lucerne, to give a thrill to the sightseers on the patio of the mountain-top restaurant.

We landed and rolled the plane into the hangar—and got soaking wet.

For the next four days the Monte Rosa, the Breithorn, the Matterhorn and all their sisters hid their heads.

But I had realized my dream.

by only a few hundred feet, on our way out of the Zermatt bowl, the rain started. I looked back to get my last look at the Matterhorn. It was gone, wiped from view.

The two-hour return flight turned into three hours. It was uneventful, according to Adrian, but my story is different! Alpine pilots are fearless. The storm had already cut off our planned route home. We were forced to cross the Gemmi Pass, which is no pass at all—just mountains. The purring of that little engine was like music to my ears.

It rained

At low visibility, we were flying parallel to the storm, but even on its edge rain and hail pelted us like machine-gun fire.

It was a relief to get out of the mountains and into open country. We skirted the storm all the way to Lucerne, where we turned off the engine to soar quietly the last 15 miles. We dropped down to the Pilatus mountain, which sits like an upstretched hand

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation. Relieves Pain & Itch...

Gives prompt temporary relief in many cases from hemorrhoidal pain and burning itch in such tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H® — the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

by JIM CARNEY

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jim Carney has appeared at resort area clubs, and at New York's Improvisation, Gil Hodges' Lounge in Brooklyn, and the Club Bene in Morgan, N.J. He started out as a roofing contractor, but it was in his mind to go into show business from the day he showed a potential customer a roof he had just completed. The customer said: "You gotta be a comedian!"

Carney, who is married and the father of five children, says he had a large family because he likes to work in front of a full house.

Here are some things he has to say:

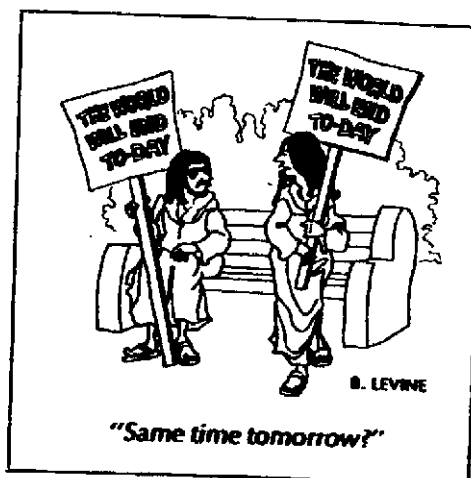

My father drank a lot. Sometimes going to the store, he'd get mixed up. He'd ask for a loaf of bread, a pound of butter, and a fifth of milk.

For two months now I've been driving one of my sons on his paper route. The kid says I know the route so well that pretty soon he's going to let me do it myself.

And their haircuts. One son looks like Prince Valiant, the other like Christopher Columbus when he was in chains, and the third has an Afro. We don't have father-son talks, we have tribal meetings.

Once I put a dime in a pistachio machine and all I got was one pistachio, the kind you can't open. So I sent the nut with a letter of complaint to the pistachio company, and they sent me back the nut—opened.

I called this correspondence school on the phone and said, "I sent you a check for $100 for your course in mental telepathy and I haven't received anything in the mail. She said, "We don't send our course in mental telepathy by mail, we send it by mental telepathy." I said, "I haven't received anything yet." She said, "I know, you're flunking the course." I said, "I'll sue you, do you want to talk to my lawyer?" She said, "Sure, tell him to send me a check for $100."

"Same time tomorrow?"

I've been married now for 20 years. My wife refers to our years together as the Twilight Zone. I said to her, "We're living all right, we're doing as good as the Joneses." She said, "We're not even doing as good as the Waltons."

My two daughters are the youngest and they haven't been stereotyped. They don't want to grow up to cook like their mother, and I don't want them to grow up to cook like their mother. My wife really does not do well in the kitchen. I bought a new wall oven and she stood in front of it for 10 minutes trying to change the channel.

Yesterday my wife made stew. I'll tell you how bad it was—it taught the dog how to play dead.

We were so poor as kids we got confused about food. One day my mother said: "I don't care, this Thanksgiving we're having turkey for dinner." I said: "Oh, God, another mouth to feed."

At 5 o'clock every day my neighbor washes his car in his driveway. I said: "Well, Harry, you pay more attention to your car than you do to your wife. Pay some attention to your wife." I came home the other night and there he was in the driveway washing his wife.

I have an undertaker friend whose wife is bored. She says she has to sit around all day with nothing to do while he's at the cemetery living it up. She even complains about the flowers he gives her with their messages: "Rest in Peace," "Gone but not Forgotten."

had 60% more tar than MERIT, a significant majority of all smokers tested reported
'Enriched Flavor' MERIT delivered more taste."*

—American Institute of Consumer Opinion.

Extensive taste-testing shows 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT delivers more taste than higher tar brands.

The bottom line was conclusive:

In a series of taste tests conducted for MERIT by the American Institute of Consumer Opinion*, smokers from across the country judged MERIT to have more flavor than five leading low tar cigarette brands.

What's really startling—and of major importance to all smokers—is that MERIT has less tar than these five brands.

9 mg. "tar," 0.7 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC Method.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

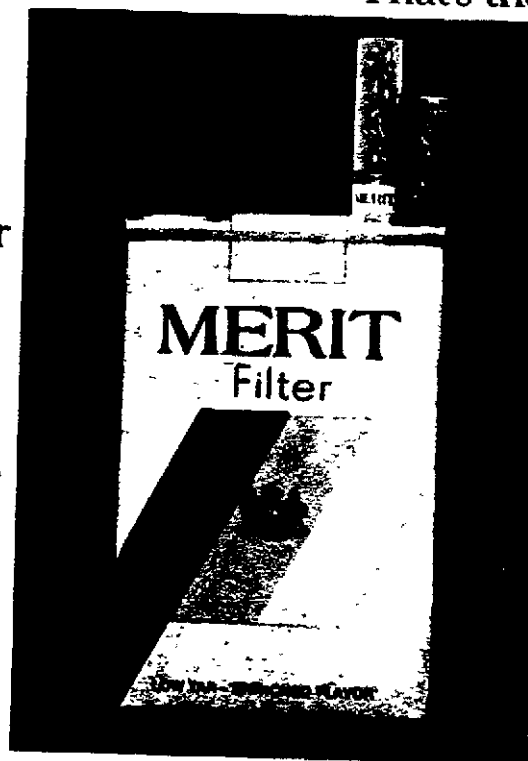

Less tar. Yet more taste.

That's the report on a remarkable new taste process called 'Enriched Flavor.' A way to pack extra flavor into tobacco without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now smoke the cigarette. MERIT.

Unprecedented smoking pleasure at only 9 mg. tar.

Joe Kennedy III (l) and uncle, Sen. Edward Kennedy, at the Democratic National Convention. Now managing his uncle's reelection campaign, he has enlisted aid of three brothers and two cousins and seems set on his own political career.

On Stage: Joe Kennedy III

by Lloyd Shearer

ucky is the young man who early in life knows what he wants to do with the rest of it.

At age 24 (on Sept. 24), Joseph P. Kennedy III, eldest son of the late Robert Kennedy, believes he's inherited the nifty flair for politics.

Since February young Joe has been managing his Uncle Ted's campaign for reelection to the U.S. Senate this fall.

"So far," says Joe, "the job's been great. I've met lots of good people. I've gained a lot of experience, and I find political life exciting. I worked in my father's campaign, and I was an advance man for Ted in 1970. But every day there's something new.

"There are five guys in Massachusetts who'd like to have Ted's job—Bob Kennedy, Fred Langone and Brendon Brennan who are Democrats and Mike Bertson and Bob Underwood who are Republicans.

"I don't think Ted's in any danger, but we're surely not taking anything for granted. The Senator's been out in front on major issues like busing, national health insurance, lowering the unemployment rate and making the laws more equitable. These are pretty controversial issues. So we're all working hard, trying to cover the bases."

Joe, who lives in an apartment in Cambridge (he refuses to divulge the address), pulls into the Kennedy campaign office on Boston's Tremont Street each morning, eager and ready for a hard day's politicking. His interest in politics contrasts sharply with that earlier period in his life when he climbed mountains, sailed on boats, toured Africa, tried to find a niche for himself.

Joe with his mother, Ethel, and the Senator: Says Ted of his 23-year-old nephew, "I wanted the best campaign manager I could get, and I got the best."

Young Kennedy, who was reared in McLean, Va.—which accounts for his lack of a Boston accent—was not particularly apt as a student. He cracked the books at the University of California in Berkeley for one semester in 1972, moved on to MIT in '73, finally got a degree in legal services from the University of Massachusetts in Boston.

Much of his youth was punctuated by tragedy. He was 11 when his Uncle Jack was assassinated and only 15 when he strode the length of the 21-car funeral train carrying his father. Few people who were aboard that train will ever forget the courage and good manners of the young man who walked through one car after another shaking hands with some 1500 mourners saying softly and politely, "I'm Joe Kennedy. Thanks very much for being with us."

Jeep accident

Young Joe not only experienced the deaths of his uncle, father, and grandfather, but in 1973 he was also involved in a jeep accident that left a teen-aged girl permanently crippled. But Joe is not living in the past.

Cheerfully yet carefully, he measures his words with the press, aware always that he is under constant public scrutiny. As the Senator's campaign manager, he realizes that if he goof, he goofs not only for himself; that the error will rebound on Ted.

To date, according to the Senator, there have been no goofs. "I wanted the best campaign manager I could get," Ted Kennedy declares, "and I got the best. Joe has great political instincts, but more importantly he cares about people. He's already done a good job in our signature campaign to place my name on the ballot. He's helped collect more than 100,000 signatures.

"Joe's not exactly a beginner. He was very active in his father's campaign, and he's helped me in past campaigns. In many respects this has been the pattern in my family. All of us have pitched in to help one another.

New generation

"Now we've got a new generation of Kennedys in action. Working with Joe are his brothers Bobby, David and Michael and two of his cousins, Steve Smith Jr. and Chris Lawford.

"I feel very confident," Senator Kennedy asserts, "that this experience will give Joe the incentive to devote himself to the public need. He's got much to give."

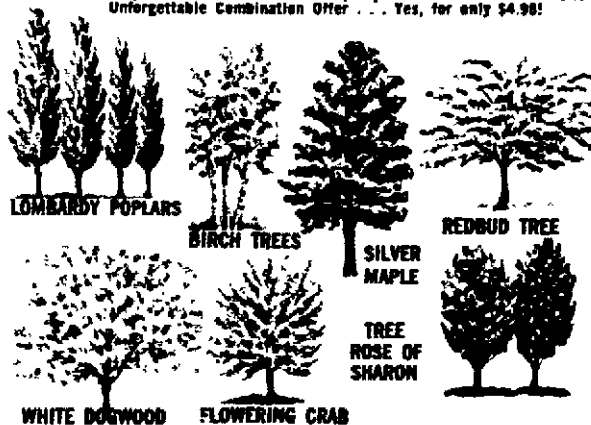

Would Joe Kennedy III like to run for public office? At this point Joe won't declare, but the people around him say it's inevitable. "After all," says Eddie Martin, an old family friend, "he's a Kennedy, isn't he?"

WE HAVE ALL HEARD of walnuts, hickory nuts and acorns, but the American Indians and early settlers utilized a lot of different kinds of nuts. Here are some of the more popular nuts:

HAZENUTS: Sometimes called a filbert, this sweet-tasting nut grows on a shrub or small tree. The tree has oval, hairy leaves about 4 inches long and 2 inches wide. The nuts are in clusters and enclosed in a papery husk. The tree is often planted as an ornamental in the United States. The best location to find them is along country roadsides, or the occasional fence line that's not cleared.

BUTTERNUT: Very similar in appearance to the black walnut, although the leaves are much longer. The outer husk of the butternut is covered with a sticky surface and the husk is used to make a yellow or orange dye. The butternut tree is found mostly in the eastern portion of North America.

AMERICAN BEECH: A majestic large tree normally found in deep forest, the wood is often used for woodware. Although the nuts are delicious, they are so small many people don't like to bother with them.

CHINKAPIN: Although this tree resembles the American chestnut, it is quite a bit smaller. Two varieties exist in the wild, one in the east and one in the northwest. The tree rarely grows over 50 feet in height. The nuts are small, and each single nut is covered with a prickly husk.

ON THAT DATE A NEIGHBOR SAW MRS. CANYON LEAVE THE HOUSE...

...ALONE-AND ON FOOT! HER CAR IS STILL INSIDE THE GARAGE!

NO CLUES FROM BUS DRIVERS OR TAXICAB COMPANIES

THE POLICE HAVE NO CLUES! MISSING PERSONS BUREAU HAS NOTHING! NO HOSPITAL, ACCIDENT OR AMNESIA DATA!

KEEP AN EYE ON STEVE...

IF HE CATCHES UP WITH WHOEVER DID THIS...

...HE MAY DO SOMETHING HE'D REGRET!

THE BAD GUY WOULD REGRET IT MORE!

THIS COULDN'T BE A RANDOM JOB...

IT MAY BE A SHIFT IN POLICY AMONG OUR HONORABLE OPPONENTS...

SINCE CERTAIN PEOPLE DECIDED TO SAVE THE WORLD BY PUBLICIZING NAMES AND ADDRESSES OF U.S. INTELLIGENCE AGENTS...

SHOOTING DOWN OUR COMMAND LEVEL PEOPLE, AS IN GREECE, MAY NOT BE EFFECTIVE ENOUGH...

PERHAPS THEY NEED A TARGET CLOSER TO THE NERVE CENTER OF OUR UNDERCOVER WORK

SUCH AS KIDNAPPING THE WIVES OR KIDS OF OUR AGENTS WHO TRAVEL SO MUCH!

THEN THEIR MINDS WILL BE ON HOME SECURITY WHEN THEY SHOULD BE CONCENTRATING ON THEIR MISSIONS!

IF IT HADN'T BEEN FOR YOU, MR. WARBUCKS...

NONSENSE! YOU'RE O.K., BILL-- I ALWAYS KNEW YOU WERE--

I'LL TRY TO PROVE I WAS WORTH IT ALL--

OH, HELLO, ASP-- YOU LOOK WORRIED--

TROUBLE AT THE PLANT-- NO STRONG HAND IN CONTROL--

THEY NEED SOMEONE TO HOLD THE FORT TILL WARBUCKS GETS ON HIS FEET-- HOW ABOUT ME?

A NOBLE GESTURE-- BUT WOULD THEY TAKE ORDERS FROM A STRANGER?

LISTEN! WITH YOU AND PUNJAB TO BACK ME UP, I'LL RUN THAT PLANT-- PRODUCTION MUST NOT STOP!

YEAH? LOOK WHO'S GIVIN' ORDERS-- YOU DIRTY TRAITOR--

I GIVE NO ORDERS THAT I CAN'T BACK UP--

...WITH THIS!

WHAT I WAS IS OVER THE DAM! I'M AN AMERICAN! AND UNTIL OLIVER WARBUCKS GETS BACK HERE, I'M BOSS! GOT THAT STRAIGHT?

CHEE! HE'S ALL RIGHT!

WONDERWORD

by JO OUELLET

HOW TO PLAY: First read the list of words then look at the puzzle. The words are in all directions—vertically, horizontally, diagonally, backwards. Circle each letter of a word found and strike it off list. The letters are often used more than once so do not cross them out. It is best to find the big words first. When you find all the words listed in the clues you'll have a number of letters over which spell the Wonderword.

"Stanley's only exercise on Sundays is standing for the National Anthem."

"That's on the quantity — not the price."
